President Must Act as Railmen Call Strike Friday

Million Workers Vote Walkout Legal Dec. 1 Board to Be Named Pay Cut on Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—A Nation-wide railroad strike was called tonight to begin at 6 p. m. Friday, following tabulation of the workers' strike vote, by which they rejected the carriers' order for a 15 per cent wage cut, effective Saturday.

The strike will not take place at the time set due to the provision of the National railway labor act, but through the strike vote it has been authorized at the earliest possible date permitted under the law, about December 1.

The law provides that when a strike has been authorized, the President of the United States shall declare an emergency and appoint a fact-finding board to investigate the dispute and report back to the President with recommendations. Then, neither side of the dispute may take any action altering the situation for another 30 days.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the committee of 18 railroad labor organizations which had co-operated in the strike vote, issued a statement saying the vote "means, at that hour, all railroad workers of the railroads that ordered the wage cut will strike." He said he spoke for more than 300,000 union members.

Brotherhood Concurs

Earlier in the day A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who took their strike vote separately, informed H. A. Enochs, chairman of the railroad management conference committee, and William M. Leiserson, chairman of the National Mediation Board, that his brotherhood had voted to strike at 12:01 a. m. on Saturday. The trainmen's brotherhood has about 160,000 members itself.

While the figures on the ballot count were not made public, all of the 19 brotherhoods reported their members had voted overwhelmingly for the strike.

The roads, hard pressed financially, hope to save approximately $250,000,000 a year by the reduction.

Strike Is "Only Means"

Harrison issued a statement announcing the strike call "as the only means now available to railroad workers to defend themselves" against the cut. "The employes have," he said, "in full compliance with the Federal law, exhausted every other means of defending and maintaining the present wages."

He reviewed the long negotiations over the carriers' proposal and said for the workers to consent "would be not only a gross injustice to themselves but also a wrong to the social and economic life of the country."

He said railroad wages "are grossly inadequate," though "due to the persistent propaganda of railroad managements, many people have been misled as to the wages."

The statement said that the average annual earnings per employe

4 Die, 2 Hurt In Quantico Plane Crash

Marine Fliers Killed Craft Falls in Potomac Injured Thrown Clear

Four Marines were killed and two injured when a utility transport plane fell into the Potomac River last night at the aviation field at the Marine Base at Quantico.

Officers said the plane had just completed a training flight and was on a second one when the accident happened.

The plane was making a left turn at the south end of the field, officers said, when it suddenly dropped, struck three trees on the downward plunge, caught fire and fell into the river. The ship fell 75 feet and struck where the water was about 3 feet deep.

The dead are: Master Technical Sergt. Benjamin F. Belcher, Quantico; Staff Sergt. Laurence G. Granville, Biggs, Calif.; Corporal Raymond F. Kennedy, Manassas, Ga., and Private Frederick M. Hudson, jr., Drexel Hill, Pa.

The injured are Capt. John Wehle, West Point, N. Y., pilot of the plane, and Corpl. Robert L. Jonasson, Astoria, N. Y. Wehle is the son-in-law of Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler, retired.

Both injured men were thrown clear of the plane just before it plunged into the river, officers said. They landed on the river bank and suffered only scratches and minor lacerations.

Belcher also was thrown clear of the plane. He was dead when found. The other three were believed to have been drowned. The plane was partially burned.

Belcher, who made his home at the Marine base, is survived by a wife and one child. None of the others were married.

3 Nations Wire Reply Peace Appeal Praised President Hears Talk U. S. Citizens Stopped

By Robert C. Albright.

The Government last night waited tensely for a German response to the President's appeal for peace as spokesmen for Czechoslovakia, Great Britain and France cabled grateful acknowledgment.

From Adolf Hitler came no sign of recognition of the American plea in his speech renewing Sudeten demands. The German foreign office withheld comment.

President Benes of Czechoslovakia, Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Daladier of France had swiftly wired enthusiastic approval, and general indorsement of the President's stand also was echoed at the Capitol, tempered by reservations against American involvement by neutrality bloc members.

High commendation came from President Ortiz, of Argentina, who was not a recipient. Ortiz wrote the President his call to peace found "warm and sympathetic adherence" in Argentina.

President Watches

Throughout the day the President maintained close contact with State Department aides and a special cabinet meeting was called for today to again canvass every angle of the European situation.

Following a lengthy conference with Secretary of State Hull, the two listened together to Hitler's radio reiteration of his territorial aims. The speech lacked any assurance of a favorable response from the German chancellor.

During the day, the State Department received information from Wilbur J. Carr, American Minister at Prague, that the German frontier is closed to Americans leaving Czechoslovakia, and this country's nationals are experiencing difficulty in leaving the country. Carr said the American Embassy at Berlin is attempting to arrange passage.

Only 2 Outlets

The only outlet from Czechoslovakia is by trains to the Hungarian and Polish frontiers, where passengers must connect "with whatever transportation is available on the other side," Carr said.

Americans, meanwhile, were being advised to leave Budapest if they have no urgent business there by Howard K. Travers, American Charge d'Affaires. Travers said all members of his staff and their families are remaining, and denied all Americans are being asked to leave. Americans not having important business in Paris and Berlin also were being warned of the risks.

At a late afternoon press conference, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau indicated his department, which for days has been studying possible repercussions of a war on this country's economic structure, feels prepared for any contingencies.

"I like to think the Treasury always is ready for any situation that might arise at any time and as far as it is humanly possible to get it ready, it is ready."

Dr. Jacob Viner, of the University of Chicago, former economic adviser at the Treasury, who left because of dissatisfaction with spending policies, conferred with Morgenthau

Prince Georges Switch Gives O'Conor Almost Sure Victory

By the Associated Press.

Riverdale, Md., Sept. 26.—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor was virtually assured tonight of the Democratic gubernatorial nomination with announcement by the Prince Georges County delegation that it would cast seven convention votes for him.

Senate President Lansdale Sasscer, who carried the county and gained control of its convention votes in his losing fight for the nomination, said:

"The Prince Georges delegation met tonight with the Democratic State Central Committee for Prince Georges County and unanimously adopted a resolution to cast their votes for Herbert R. O'Conor.

"The delegation desired to confirm what appeared to be the will of the Democratic Party in the State as expressed by a plurality of the popular vote and a large number of delegates to the convention."

O'Conor already had been assured of 72 convention votes and the swinging of the seven Prince Georges votes into his column would give a certain total of 79—four more than the 75 necessary.

His rival, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, is assured of only 63 convention votes.

As Europe Moves Toward War

The day's developments in war-menaced Europe:

1. A HIGHLY authoritative source in London announced that Great Britain and Russia will back France if the latter goes to the aid of Czechoslovakia, in event of "German invasion." It apparently was left to France to determine whether German occupation of admittedly Sudeten territory would constitute invasion, or whether an attack on "Czechoslovakia proper" would be necessary.
2. REICHSFUEHRER Hitler, speaking to the "entire Reich," shouted that the Nazi memorandum of last Friday, rejected by Prague, was the "last and final one," and repeated that Saturday, October 1, was the deadline for Czech acceptance. He did not state outright he would fight for Sudetenland.
3. BRITAIN'S "inner cabinet" conferred again, and shortly afterward the Privy Council met with King George for half an hour. It was reported the King had signed mobilization orders, to be used if necessary.
4. PARIS civilians began to flee the capital in fear of air raids, and London continued extensive precautions.
5. PREMIER Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet returned to France, and summoned the cabinet for today. Swelling ranks of blue-clad poilus marched toward the borders.
6. AMERICAN embassies and legations throughout the continent were taking steps to get their nationals out of the "war zones," specifically Paris and Budapest, Hungary.
7. THE UNITED States Government awaited response from Hitler to President Roosevelt's appeal for peace. President Benes of Czechoslovakia, Premier Daladier of France and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain all cabled grateful acknowledgment. A special cabinet meeting was called for today.
8. PREMIER Mussolini of Italy advised Britain and France to to abandon Czechoslovakia. His editor-spokesman, Virginio Gayda, accused supporters of Czechoslovakia of maneuvering to brand Hitler the aggressor if war comes.—Page 3.
9. THE CZECH army cannot evacuate the border regions until the threat of German invasion is removed, foreign correspondents in Prague believe. It was assumed war would come.
10. FORTY-NINE million men, subjects or citizens of ten European countries, stood ready for war as diplomats maneuvered and dictators shouted. Czech authorities pressed hundreds of Sudetens into military service.—Page 6.

Citizens Flee Paris; Americans Warned

Czechs Won't Retreat War Held Certain Public Ready to Fight

By Walter B. Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Prague (Via Vienna), Sept. 26.—Czechoslovakia will be unable to demobilize its army or withdraw it from the Sudeten German areas until Germany has withdrawn its threat of invasion, in the opinion of most foreign observers here. In Prague it is taken for granted there will be war.

Foreigners believe the Czech people, almost 1,250,000 of whom are now under arms, will never tolerate capitulation in the face of threat and there is no indication the present cabinet, headed by Gen. Jan Syrovy, has any intention of running counter to their will.

The Hodza cabinet, which agreed to the surrender of the Sudeten areas under pressure from France and England, brought this country dangerously near to revolution. Probably nothing but the formation of a government controlled by the general staff and its decisive action in ordering general and immediate mobilization averted disaster.

The people, who are extremely nationalistic, had been led to believe by their newspapers and leaders that the integrity and independence of the country would be preserved at all costs, including war. When the Hodza cabinet gave way to foreign pressure, and the reason was openly admitted to be the betrayal by every ally, the people wanted to fight, and fight alone.

British Stand Studied Cabinet Summoned Troops on March

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 26.—The French foreign ministry tonight received simultaneous news of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech and authoritative reports that Britain and Soviet Russia would stand with France against any German attack on Czechoslovakia.

A spokesman said ministry officials were giving the two developments close study before making any statement.

Meanwhile war-time conditions were clamped down on France.

Not quite 20 years after the end of war that laid much of their country waste, Frenchmen again saw swelling ranks of soldiers march off to the frontiers.

Civilians began fleeing the capital, at the advice of the ministry of public works.

The American Embassy advised all Americans to return home, if able to do so, because of "the complicated situation prevailing in Europe."

Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet returned by airplane after conferring with Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

Chamberlain Makes New Plea After Talk

All World Hears Berlin Address 'To Take Matters in Own Hands' Must Act at Once, Reich Told Sudeten 'Sovereignty' Asked

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—Adolf Hitler told the "entire Reich" and a waiting world tonight that his patience was exhausted and that if President Benes of Czechoslovakia "does not want peace we will have to take matters into our own hands."

The German memorandum of September 23, which Czechoslovakia has rejected, he told a great, roaring crowd in Berlin's Sportspalast, was the "last and final one."

"All parts that want to join the Reich must join now, immediately," he said, referring to Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland.

"I have decided that we shall place this land under German sovereignty."

But the Fuehrer still gave Czechoslovakia until October 1 to surrender the territory which Hitler has marked for his own, and he held out willingness to submit the question of Czechoslovakia's new frontiers to a plebiscite.

Future Course Vague

There was nothing in the speech—an address one hour and 13 minutes long—to indicate definitely just what the Fuehrer intended to do.

Apparently he still hoped to get the Sudetenland—defined in maps which he attached to his "final" memorandum—by negotiation and plebiscite.

He did not say outright he was going to war to get the Sudeten areas—which Czechoslovakia already has agreed to cede him, though she apparently disagrees with him on the definition of the Sudetenland.

He did say, at well-spaced points in the address:

"Mr. Benes (President of Czechoslovakia) must cede this region (the Sudetenland) to us by October 1."

"We are determined, may Mr. Benes know it!"

"Regarding the Sudeten problem, my patience is exhausted."

He proudly told of Germany's great military strength, her mighty air force—in short, what a great power Germany has become.

No Threat of War

This all indicated, by inference, Germany is going to fight.

But Hitler did not say so.

With every German ordered to hear the Fuehrer by his own radio or a public address system, Hitler began speaking at 8:21 p. m. (2:21 p. m., E. S. T.), a little more than three hours after receiving Sir Horace Wilson, personal representative of British Prime Minister Chamberlain, with an urgent note.

The Reichsfuehrer's statement that "the Sudetenland is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe" was regarded as reassuring and of fundamental importance.

But the gist of the entire impassioned oration was that he would do something if he did not have the Sudetenland by October 1—this Saturday.

The background for the address was a series of events which had

Powers Serve Notice on Fuehrer 'Pledge to Be Kept,' Briton Says Use of Force May Bring War Return to First Plan Is Urged

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London (Tuesday), Sept. 27.—Great Britain early today appealed to Chancellor Hitler of Germany not to plunge Europe into a "bloody struggle," after warning him sternly yesterday that if he attacked Czechoslovakia, France would certainly stand by the little republic and Russia and Britain would stand by France.

The appeal was made by Prime Minister Chamberlain after he carefully read Hitler's speech. The earlier admonition was issued at almost the same time the German leader was delivering his fighting remarks in Berlin, threatening to invade Czechoslovakia next Saturday.

Speaking in the name of the British government today, Chamberlain promised the British would see to it that Hitler acquired the Sudetenland with "a reasonable promptitude," providing the terms of annexation were arranged by discussion and not by force. Chamberlain expressed the hope that his friendly proposal would "satisfy the German desire for the union of Sudeten Germans with the Reich, without the shedding of blood in any part of Europe."

Text of Warning

The text of Britain's warning to Nazidom yesterday was issued as an official communique from the foreign office, as follows:

"It is stated in official quarters that during last week Mr. Chamberlain has tried with the German chancellor to find a way of settling peacefully the Czechoslovak question. It is still possible to do so by negotiation.

"The German claim for the transfer of the Sudeten areas has already been conceded by the French, British and Czechoslovak governments.

"But if, in spite of all efforts made by the British prime minister, a German attack is made upon Czechoslovakia, the immediate result must be that France will be bound to come to her assistance and Great Britain and Russia will certainly stand by France.

"It is still not too late to stop this great tragedy and for the peoples of all nations to insist on settlement by free negotiations."

Inner Council Meets

The prime minister's later surprise decision to appeal once more to the Fuehrer's vaunted love of peace was reached after he and his inner cabinet had pondered for more than two hours Hitler's speech with its many references to England and Chamberlain.

In the belief that Hitler was sincere in his protestations of friendliness to Britain and France, Chamberlain decided not to go to sleep without imploring Hitler to accept his victory over the Czechs without starting a war over it. Chamberlain may have acted also in the fear Hitler might not wait until Saturday to fight the Czechs. The text of Chamberlain's statement follows:

"I have heard the speech of the German chancellor and I appreciate his references to the efforts I have made to save the peace. I cannot abandon those ef-

Hitler's Text: Benes Must Go! He Cries

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 26.—The text of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's address today on the international situation follows:

On February 22 I made before the Reichstag deputies a fundamental demand concerning which there could be no bargaining.

The nation heard it and understood what I meant.

One statesman (meaning former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of the then independent Austria) failed to understand—he has been removed and my promise of that time has been fulfilled.

For the second time, I spoke on this same demand before the Reich's party convention in Nuremberg and again the nation heard.

Today I once more stand before you speaking to the people itself as in the days of our struggles and you know what that means.

Today there must remain no vestige of doubt in the world—today it is not a Fuehrer or a man who speaks, but the whole German people.

And if I am now spokesman of this German people, I know at this hour that all the listening millions of this people are as one, that they indorse these words and make them their own testimony.

Not Oppressing Other Peoples

Let other statesmen search themselves and see if it is the same with them.

The question which has been agitating us most deeply for the past months and weeks is well known to them.

Its name is not so much Czechoslovakia, its name is rather Herr Benes (Eduard Benes, president of Czechoslovakia).

This name unites all that is agitating millions today, what either drives them to despair or fills them with fanatic determination.

How came this question to reach such importance?

I will here briefly repeat, as I have done before, the essence and purposes of Germany's foreign policy.

German foreign policy, as distinct from (that of) many democratic states, is fixed in our philosophy of life.

This philosophy of our people of the New Third Reich is based

The Burning Of The Bridges

A WEEK OR SO BEFORE the Nuremberg congress a highly placed neutral diplomat came out of Berlin saying that there would be no war. From his long association with the responsible officials on both sides, he was confident that Hitler had such perfect control of German opinion and action that he could bring Europe to the verge of war, could obtain by threat astounding concessions, and could then stop to enjoy a bloodless triumph. Knowing that in both England and France the governing classes were willing to pay almost any price for peace, the diplomat's prophecy seemed plausible to many who heard it.

Yet it looks now as if the prophecy had been fundamentally wrong—not as regards the willingness of the western powers to concede more than Hitler or the Sudeten Nazis had ever demanded—but wrong in supposing that Hitler could stop when he had

Safety Drive To Enroll All Types of Autos

Board Extends Efforts
Private Drivers Invited
Responsibility Stressed

By Howard F. Wentworth.

With nearly 3,000 trucks enrolled in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce permanent traffic safety program, plans were announced last night to enlarge the movement by including private cars and other commercial vehicles in a city-wide accident prevention league.

Lyle O'Rourke, president of the Junior Board, said his group is prepared to extend the original safety plan to all types of drivers and urged Washington motorists to join the city's battle against highway negligence.

"Police and traffic," he said, "have repeatedly stressed the necessity of public co-operation in their efforts to curb our accident toll. We feel that every District driver—and every pedestrian, for that matter—should consider solution to the problem an individual, personal responsibility.

Safety Emblems Ready

"If The Post and Junior Board accident prevention program is supported by every Washington citizen, then we may see encouraging results when the year's final toll is counted. Let's all do our part to make this vital issue a success!"

The Post-Junior Board safety emblems—for use on automobile windshields—are available in Room 200, The Washington Post.

Next month a unique safety institute with nationally recognized speakers will open under Post-Junior Board auspices. Awards will be offered for top honors in an open forum "safety quiz" and enrolled drivers will be offered a varied and entertaining program.

Coroner to Speak

With a wide knowledge of the local traffic problem—its sorrows, tragedy and harrowing consequences—Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, will be one of the institute lecturers.

His recent word picture of death on Washington streets, as recorded for motion picture patrons, was credited for a major portion of the city's new safety record during the past several weeks.

Although city streets were free from serious mishaps over the week-end, two persons were killed and four injured early yesterday in a crash on the Baltimore boulevard near Laurel.

Van Hits Parked Car

When a heavy van struck a parked car, May Brown, colored, 28, and her 9-year-old niece, Marion Brown, both of 3110 Wisconsin avenue northwest, were burned to death after their car overturned and caught fire.

The driver of the car had stopped because of fog. Four other passengers in the car were taken to Freedmen's Hospital with serious injuries. They were:

Roland Dickens, 34, of 1813 Thirty-fifth street northwest; Mildred Dickens, 35; Rejetta Dickens, 22, and Elmer Brown, 6.

Army Division 'Streamlined' For Year's Test

A division of the United States Army is going "streamlined" for one year in a test designed to obtain a "more easily handled, self-contained unit of great fire power and mobility" to be used as a probable model for infantry forces, the War Department disclosed yesterday.

Orders will be issued shortly designating the second division, with headquarters at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Tex., as the division to be reorganized. The "streamlined" unit will consist of approximately 8,000 men peace-strength, and 1,100 men war-strength. It will have three infantry regiments and two field artillery regiments of mixed calibers, plus supporting auxiliary arms.

The present division has four infantry regiments organized in two brigades and one field artillery brigade of two regiments. The new plan obtains a "new simplified organization," it was said, with motorized equipment and more modern weapons giving a highly mobile, hard-hitting unit.

Aiken Blames U. S. for Flood-Control Delays
Suit to Keep Barkley Off Ballot Is Dismissed

By the Associated Press.

Montpelier, Vt.— Gov. Aiken, in a telegram canceling an address to a conference of Governors of Oklahoma City, yesterday declared "it is a distinct tragedy that opposition of the Federal Government has prevented any start toward even partial flood protection.

AIKEN

Aiken went to Boston to discuss hurricane-flood rehabilitation with Governors of other New England States and Works Progress Administrator Hopkins.

In his message he asked his speech be read and said:

"The conference of Governors at Oklahoma City can do no greater service to the Nation than to take a determined stand for rights of States to enter into regional compacts."

* * * *

Frankfort, Ky.—The suit seeking to bar Senator Barkley's name from the November ballot was dismissed in circuit court yesterday and the plaintiffs announced they would appeal to the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

Circuit Judge William B. Ardery dismissed the petition brought by two Newport attorneys, Lawrence Diedinger, jr., and Charles E. Lester, jr., ruling that since they were not candidates in the August primary in which Barkley won the Democratic nomination to the Senate, they could not legally bring the suit, but must have a plaintiff who was in that primary or was the nominee of another party.

* * * *

Works Progress Administration officials said yesterday Administrator Hopkins probably would appoint a permanent successor to Fred G. Healy, New Mexico State administrator, dismissed on the grounds he had permitted local political interference with the WPA.

Hopkins named R. L. Nicholson, WPA western regional director of employment, as acting New Mexico administrator. Officials here said the fact Nicholson was to continue his regional duties indicated he was merely filling in until Hopkins could make a permanent replacement. Hopkins has never disclosed the nature of the "interference."

Another A. F. of L.-C. I. O. clash over the President's reorganization bill appeared to be shaping up yesterday as politicians and legislators studied the federation's new warning that it still considers the policy expressed in the bill to be "unwise."

The federation opposed the bill at the last session and backed the move to oppose the measure. The C. I. O., on the other hand, threatened to oppose at the polls all members of Congress who voted to recommit.

The A. F of L. this week recalled President William Green's assertion at the time that "the faith of the masses of the people in the merit system and the administration of the civil service legislation will be strengthened through maintenance of a bipartisan Civil Service Commission," instead of the single administrator proposed by the President.

Rising protests by Southern labor against heavy taxation was welcomed yesterday by I. M. Ornburn, secretary-treasurer of the union label trades department of the American Federation of Labor. He said the movement "to help bring sanity into State and Federal tax problems" gave promise that "instead of remaining America's 'No. 1 economic problem,'" the South may become "America's No. 1 economic blessing."

Commenting on the special tax report of the Florida Federation of Labor, "and subsequent proposals of State labor officials in the Southeastern States to form a council of tax committees in seven States," he said:

"When the Florida Federation points out that the success of today's recovery program depends on the fairness of tax plans enacted by the State Legislatures meeting this winter and also by the national Congress, I believe the situation is rightly stated."

Half of U. S. Hospitals On Nonprofit Basis

About half the 4,841 hospitals in the United States, the Public Health Service said yesterday, are sponsored by nonprofit organizations such as fraternal and church associations.

Of the remainder, it said in a survey of hospital facilities, 32 per cent are privately owned, 12 per cent are managed by States, cities or counties, and 5 per cent by the Federal government.

U. S. Trade Balance Up In 8 Months

Best Showing in Years
August Business Good
Imports Below 1937

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday a better demand for raw materials caused a 17 per cent increase in merchandise imports in the United States in August.

While merchandise exports increased less than the usual seasonal amount, they still were larger than imports by $65,081,000. In the first eight months of the year exports exceeded imports $781,363,000, one of the largest favorable trade balances in recent years.

August imports totaled $165,540,000, compared with $140,836,000 in July and $245,668,000 in August, 1937. Exports aggregated $230,621,000 in August, compared with $227,577,000 in July and $277,031,000 in August of last year.

The department said:

"Import trade expanded considerably during August.

"The recent improvement in domestic business activity led to an increase in imports of raw materials, other industrial products and finished goods. While prices of some leading import commodities averaged slightly higher last month, most of this increase represented larger quantities of goods received.

"The increase in the seasonally adjusted import index for August was the first major advance in over a year."

Among imports in August were crude rubber, furs, hides, flaxseed, raw wool, raw silk, manganese ore, wood pulp, tin, nickle, diamonds, fertilizers, linens, woolens, burlaps, cotton manufactures, leather goods, sugar and cocoa.

Leaf tobacco, wheat, corn, fresh fruits, meat products and fish were shipped abroad in larger quantities than a year ago. Decreased exports were recorded for automobiles, rubber manufactures, lubricating oil, electrical appliances, agricultural implements, naval stores, lumber, crude sulphur, and coal tar products.

In the first eight months of the year, the United States sold $2,048,779,000 worth of merchandise to foreigners and bought $1,267,416,000. In the similar portion of 1937, exports amounted to $2,081,778,000 and imports $2,194,304,000. While exports exceeded imports by $781,363,000 in the first eight months of this year, imports were ahead by $112,526,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Eighteen private utilities, challenging the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority act, told the Supreme Court yesterday that the Government's program offered them "the choice between the rock and the whirlpool."

The utilities' brief was filed preparatory to oral arguments the week of October 17.

As it was presented, Chief Justice Hughes returned to Washington for the beginning of the high court's term next Monday.

"The choice between the rock and the whirlpool, between submission to unconstitutional regulation and economic destruction, is not the open sesame to the avoidance of constitutional limitations," the brief declared.

U. S. Theory 'Fanciful'

Describing as "fanciful" the Government contention that dams of Tennessee River tributaries are navigation developments, the utilities asserted "the dams would be obstructions to any possible navigation on the tributaries."

The firms contended TVA regulation of rates would cost them $21,000,000 annually. Evidence as to these alleged prospective losses was excluded by the three-judge court in the eastern Tennessee district from whose adverse decision the companies appealed.

As to the legality of the TVA program, the brief said further:

"There is an inherent lack of power in the Federal Government to invade the rights reserved to the State or to the people or to govern the concerns reserved to the States. No want of Federal authority can be supplied, no violation of Federal constitutional prohibition can be cured by consent of the State. Here we have not the case of cooperation between the State and the Federal Government . . . but a case of abdication by the State and usurpation by the Federal Government."

Demand Freedom

The companies asserted their "right to be free from illegal competition and the right to engage in and carry on the business of supplying electricity to the public within the States free from displacement by the Federal Government, and free from Federal interference, regulation or control."

The three-judge court ruled that the Tennessee Electric Power Co. and the others, mostly subsidiaries of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation and Electric Bond and Share, "have no immunity from lawful competition even if their businesses are curtailed or destroyed."

The utilities operate within 200 miles of TVA dams on the Tennessee River and tributaries. They brought their suit to enjoin further construction and also operation of the dams for the generation and sale of power.

Sale Believed Off

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 26 (AP).—A $3,500,000 barrier stood today between negotiators in the proposed sale of the properties of the Memphis Power & Light Company to the city of Memphis.

Declaring that "little hope existed of reaching an agreement," Paul B. Sawyer, president of M. P. & L.'s holding company parent, National Power & Light Company, last night termed "unacceptable" the city's offer of $13,000,000 for the system.

The utility had offered to sell for $16,401,418.77 but the offer was rejected by Major Thomas H. Allen, chairman of the light and water commission.

Memphis already has spent more than $4,000,000 on construction of its own system for distribution of Tennessee Valley Authority pewer.

A.F.L. Leader Demands Say In Labor Laws

Often Left Out, He Says
Cites NRA, Other Acts
Attacks Wagner Board

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 26.—A demand that the American Federation of Labor be consulted by the Roosevelt Administration in drafting labor legislation was made today by John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L. He said the A. F. of L. was given no voice in the preparation of the NRA, the Wagner act and the wage-hour law.

The federation leadership has indicated it wants the Wagner act and the wage-hour law amended, and may oppose Senate confirmation next year of President Roosevelt's reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith to the Labor Board.

Frey placed in the hands of a deciding the department's policies construction committee the job of and strategy of amending the two statutes. He also left with it the problem of passing on C. I. O.'s political and industrial activities, communism in the labor movement and the business depression.

Frey charged that officers of the C. I. O. constituted "a junta instead of a democratically controlled leadership."

The C. I. O's political expenditures, in which he included "a half million dollars to help re-elect President Roosevelt in 1936," were characterized by Frey as an effort "to purchase political preference."

A few years ago, he said, such expenditures "would have created a national political scandal."

Frey's report said administration of the Wagner act was a "disrupting" factor in American industry.

War in Europe Might End Need For Farm Quotas

By the Associated Press.

A spokesman for the Department of Agriculture said yesterday that war in Europe might create such a demand for farm products that production control would be unnecessary.

If history is a true guide, he said, wheat and other commodity prices would increase. The warring nations, he explained, would rush to acquire a "back log" of wheat.

The world has a large supply of cotton, the spokesman said, and the outbreak of hostilities probably would foce down the price of this commodity.

"During wartime, people wear old clothes," he explained.

However, the neutrality law, under which the President is empowered to establish embargoes, could materially affect the farm situation, he said.

Italians See Move to Put Hitler in Wrong

Press Takes Up Charge Rome Listens to Speech Call to Colors Waited

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 26.—Virginio Gayda, leading spokesman of the Fascist press, charged tonight supporters of Czechoslovakia were maneuvering to brand Germany the aggressor in possible war.

His charge followed by a few hours' advice from Premier Mussolini to France and Great Britain to turn their backs on Czechoslovakia to avert war.

Italians listened spellbound to the speech of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, of Germany, almost as though it were by their own Duce.

Small crowds gathered around public radios and newspaper bulletin boards awaiting the translation.

No Official Comment

There was no official comment due to the late hour, but Fascists generally regarded it as a strong assertion of Germany's rights and of Czechoslovakia's blame in the quarrel.

Notwithstanding the interest, Rome went about its business almost as if no war clouds were in sight.

Italy, said Il Duce at Verona, wanted a "new Europe" to replace the "dying" one constructed in the Versailles Treaty at the end of the World War.

Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, outlined what he described as the steps by which Germany was being put in the light of an aggressor.

"Maneuver" Charged

This "maneuver," he said, began with the refusal by the government of Prague to accept Hitler's last offer for ending the Czechoslovak-German crisis.

He asserted the refusal "put in motion the German action announced in Herr Hitler's memorandum, which envisaged direct occupation of Sudeten territory by German armed forces if it is not evacuated by October 1.

"This German march," Gayda continued, "would be defined as aggression. And this aggression would be supposed to provoke a reaction bringing into play military alliances with France and Russia on which President Eduard Benes continued to count, together with an organized incitement of anti-Fascist leftists in France and England."

Taking his cue from Mussolini's Verona speech, Gayda declared the responsibility now rested with Paris and London to "localize" any possible clash between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Call to Colors Waited

There were no signs visible today of Italy taking any emergency military precautions, but well-informed sources suggested there might be a call to the colors at any hour.

Mussolini indicated at Verona that he saw no reason for resistance to Hitler's demands, asserting they followed "the line which was approved at the London meeting."

President Roosevelt's appeal for peace was, to all intents and purposes, ignored in Fascist circles. One comment was that it "showed a sympathetic interest . . . but seemed to contribute little to the solution of the Czech problem."

Wife of German Spy Suspect Sails For Europe

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Maria Griebl, wife of a key German witness in the Government's espionage investigation, was on the way to Europe today aboard the Italian liner Conte di Savoia.

She is the wife of Dr. Ignatz Griebl, who fled to Germany several months ago while being questioned by the United States Attorney's Office and previous to his indictment on espionage charges by a Federal grand jury.

Mrs. Gribel had been held as a material witness until last week.

State Department Has Busy Day With Foreign Envoys Calling

Following a conference with President Roosevelt shortly after Reichsfuehrer Hitler delivered his radio address, the Secretary of State was pictured as he hastened across the street to his State Department offices, where ambassadors and ministers representing European countries had called throughout the day. Three of the envoys are shown above as they arrived at the State Department over the week-end and departed for Chicago. Morgenthau said some half-dozen other economic authorities also were in discussion on both the possible effect of a war on the domestic economy and on the international financial structure.

The Treasury secretary disclosed the heavy flight of refugee gold to America from Europe, which slackened perceptibly two days last week, has started up again, but in smaller volume.

He again voiced a lack of concern at the possible effect of sudden gold withdrawals by foreign investors.

"It would be a pleasant surprise," he said. "There is plenty of gold in the country. It can start to flow the other way without disturbing anything."

Set to Buy Gold

Until further notice, he said, the Treasury plans to continue its gold purchase policy, adding:

"As far as I am concerned we are willing to buy all of the gold the world has to offer, and to sell."

Swift replies of Czechoslovakia, Great Britain and France to the President's urgent request for peaceful negotiations all struck the same theme of "gratitude" and enthusiastic willingness to co-operate.

President Benes cabled President Roosevelt that Cechoslovakia would defend itself against attack "but is profoundly convinced with you that in the end war solves no problem and that this is a case in which reason, a sense of humanity and principle of justice should triumph."

Visions Settlement

Benes expressed belief "that even today the dispute could be settled in a spirit of equity without resort to force and the whole Czechoslovak nation still hopes this will be the case."

Prime Minister Chamberlain wrote that Britain is doing its utmost to obtain a peaceful solution and assured the President his government will relax no effort so long as there is any prospect of achieving that end.

Chamberlain advised Roosevelt of further efforts by the British today for settlement by negotiation and said "the President's words can but encourage all those who sincerely desire to co-operate in this endeavor."

Daladier Hopeful

Prime Minister Daladier telephoned his acknowledgement to American Ambassador Kennedy in London, with a pledge to remain "faithful both to the spirit and the letter" of the Kellogg pact."

Daladier said the French government continues "with unfailing tenacity to look for any procedure or form of agreement which may be compatible with the dignity and the vital interests of the nations involved."

When no immediate reply came from Germany, officials turned an attentive ear to Hitler's speech. But here again the President's appeal was passed without mention, unless der fuehrer's repeated demand for the Sudeten area could be considered his answer. A German foreign office spokesman said the message should have been addressed only to Benes, but added Hitler alone could comment for Germany.

Hungary, Poland Get Note

Secretary Hull told reporters two other governments had received copies of the President's note—Hungary and Poland, also seeking territorial concessions in Czechoslovakia. He said the American Ambassador at Warsaw and the American Minister at Budapest were instructed to deliver copies to those governments for their information.

The President's dramatic early morning appeal, reminding principals in the crisis of the shattering social and economic consequences of a war, and of responsibilities under the Kellogg-Briand pact, was delivered at what the White House considered the psychological moment to strike for peace. It was carefully phrased to express moral backing of moves for a peaceful solution, without actually involving America in the controversy.

Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, revealed the President reached his decision to appeal for peace while watching the speedboat races Sunday afternoon from the deck of his yacht, although the idea had been discussed many times with Secretary Hull.

Drafted Message Alone

He conferred at the White House with Hull and Undersecretary of State Welles, and later Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau joined the President. At 10 p. m., alone in his study, the President started a rough draft of his message, and Hull and Welles were called back before midnight to hear it. After some revisions, the President signed the note, between 12:15 and 12:30. The State Department immediately cabled the note to the four European capitals.

Newspaper correspondents were routed from their beds to receive copies of the message released at 2 a. m. for publication not before 3 a. m. yesterday, coinciding with the beginning of the European day's business at 8 a. m.

The regular Friday Cabinet meeting was moved up to 2 p. m. today to again consider the possibilities of a European war in all of its implications. The President's appeal, Hitler's speech and the effect of war on America's trade, economic, defense and neutralities all may be carefully weighed.

Americans Can't Leave

Concern for more than 5,000 Americans in Czechoslovakia mounted here last night, as Carr cabled the State Department that Americans having German visas, tickets to Paris and steamship tickets were unable to cross the border at Eger and have returned to Praha.

Carr has telephoned the American embassy in Berlin to try earnestly to reach some arrangement whereby Americans can enter Germany and reach a seaport. He said both the American embassy and the consulate general in Berlin are trying to do so.

Meanwhile, at the Capitol there was wide praise of the President's appeal coupled with expressions of concern lest Hitler's stand bring war despite the most urgent moral pressure for peace.

Borah Would Keep Out

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, again took the position that it is none of America's affair. "Let them settle it among themselves," he said. "They are the only ones who can."

Senator Miller (Democrat), of Arkansas, said the President "rendered a distinct service to humanity," and Senator McAdoo (Democrat), California, called Mr. Roosevelt's note "an admirable statement. I hope it may produce the desired effect."

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said the President "is eminently right in his course" and expressed "thorough sympathy" with his stand.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, said Mr. Roosevelt "voiced the sentiment of the entire citizenry of the Republic," adding, "It is the prayer of us all."

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, commented in Atlantic City that Mr. Roosevelt "did the right thing and a fine thing, and went just as far as he could without opening himself to partisan criticism. Public opinion in this country will always go against fanatics who endanger peace."

Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said he is hopeful, "but I don't have too much confidence that Europe will pay much attention to it. I am hoping England and France will take a firmer stand. I can't help believe that Hitler is bluffing."

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House committee investigating un-American activities, reflected the less enthusiastic views of isolationist members, but remarked that the President had been "very careful" to express a feeling of strict neutrality.

Commenting on the Hitler speech, Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, said "It looks to me as if it means inevitable war," and Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, called the German chancellor's radio broadcast "an hysterical outbreak."

But Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, said he thought Hitler is still "leaving the door open for negotiations" and felt he was "falling back on his original agreement and would be satisfied with that."

Rally to Hear Benes' Brother Here Thursday

Save Czechs Is Theme, Vassar Head to Speak Roosevelt Plea Praised

Vojta Benes, brother of the President of Czechoslovakia, and Dr. Henry Noble McCracken, president of Vassar College, will be the chief speakers at a rally in the Rialto Theater at 8:15 p. m. Thursday by the Save Czechoslovakia Committee of Washington.

Five members of the committee yesterday called on Assistant Secretary of State George Messersmith to indorse President Roosevelt's eleventh-hour appeal to signatories of the Kellogg-Briand Pact. The committee urged application of "moral and economic pressure" against aggressor nations.

Members of the delegation were Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church and chairman of the Save Czechoslovakia Committee; Mrs. Robert Clesen, Mrs. R. Lester Buchanan, Marion V. Hedges and Mrs. M. O. Lorenz.

More than 60 Washington ministers devoted their Sunday sermons to the European crisis, the committee reported, and appealed for a full attendance at the rally Thursday night.

The committee was formed Friday night at a meeting of representatives from 45 organizations, including labor unions, churches, peace societies and women's groups.

Belgian Cabinet Meets Hurriedly; Cancels Leaves

Brussels, Belgium, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Belgian cabinet, after a hurried session, today recalled soldiers on leave.

A communique said the government decided to "complete military measures taken previously by decreeing the recall of men on indefinite leave belonging to the regiment of Ardennes Chasseurs, the corps of mechanized cavalry and certain classes of fortress troops."

Pershing in Paris After Taking a Rest

Paris, Sept. 26 (AP).—Gen. John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War, came back to Paris today amid threats of a new conflict. The general had been resting at Aix-en-Provence for two weeks.

Spain's War Waits On Europe Crisis

Hendaye, France (at Spanish frontier), Sept. 26 (AP).—The Spanish civil war fell into a new deadlock today. Only local skirmishes were reported, with the battles dying down on the major fronts, the Ebro River in northeast Spain and the Cordoba in the southwest. Spanish commanders were believed to be watching the European crisis for indications of any effect it might have on their campaigns.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are prim, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

on the maintenance and safeguarding of the existence of our German people.

We are not interested in oppressing other peoples.

We do not wish at all to have other nationalities among us. We want to live after our own patterns and let others live after theirs.

Foreign Political Aims Are Not Limitless

This, in a manner our philosophy—I may well say racially bound conception leads to limitation of our foreign policy; that is, our foreign political aims are not limitless or random ones, nor are they aims determined by occasional happenings.

They are laid down by determination to serve the German people alone, to maintain it in this world and to preserve its existence.

What is the situation today?

You know that at one time the German people too was imbued, under the slogan "self-determination of peoples," with belief in super-national assistance and that it thereby renounced utilizing its own strength to the very end.

You know that this weak German trust of those days was shamefully betrayed.

You know the result was the Versailles Treaty, and you all remember what frightful consequences this treaty had.

You remember how our people were robbed of their weapons and how the unarmed people were later mistreated.

You know the terrible fate that befell us, that persecuted us for a decade and a half.

And you know, too, that if Germany today has despite all become once more great, free, strong, it owes all to its own strength. Others contributed nothing to it.

They tried as long as possible to blackmail and oppress us.

Out of our own people grew this power to end this humiliating situation and to show the people a way to go, worthy of a free, great people.

Although we have become today free and strong through our own power, we nourish no ill-feeling against other nations.

We know that peoples cannot be made responsible for what an unprincipled clique of international profiteers and jobbers is to blame for.

Stresses Agreements He Proposed

These profiteers do not recoil from pressing entire nations into the service of their mean interests.

We bear no hatred in us against the surrounding world and we have proved it. German love for peace has been proved by these facts:

First, we had hardly begun restoration of German equality when I proposed to the entire world, as a visible sign of renunciation of any so-called revenge, quite a number of agreements. They were in the line of limitation of armaments.

My first proposal: Germany demands equality under all circumstances, yet it is willing generally to renounce armaments and weapons, if necessary to the last machinegun and disarm completelyy if other nations do the same.

This was not even taken as an occasion for discussion.

Then came the second proposal: Germany is willing to limit her army, like other states, to 200,000 men with the same arms as the others.

This, too, was rejected.

Germany—another proposal—is ready if others do likewise to renounce heavy armament, the so-called aggressive weapons, namely, tanks, bombers, heavy and super-heavy artillery.

It was rejected.

I now proposed an international regulation with a 300,000-man army, the same to apply to all European countries.

Urged Elimination Of Air Armies

Again this was rejected.

I then offered further suggestions; at least, the elimination of air fleets, elimination of bomb throwing, absolute outlawing of poison gas in war, the safeguarding of the homeland and of lands not lying in the line of attack, the elimination at least of the heaviest artillery and elimination of the heaviest tanks.

That, too, was declined. It was all in vain.

After I had thus, for two years, made offer after offer and received nothing but rejection after rejection, I now issued a command to put the German defense force in the best position that could possibly be achieved by us.

I can now admit that openly.

We have now, to be sure, completed a rearmament the like of which the world has not seen.

First, I offered disarmament as long as that was possible.

After it was rejected I certainly made no more halfway decisions. In that I am National-Socialist Nazi) and an old front fighter.

If they do not want an unarmed world, then, German people, bear arms that are stronger than others.

I have armed up these five years. I have spent millions on arms. The German people know it.

I have said: Let a new army be raised with the most modern arms possible. I have asked my friend (Marshal Hermann Wilhelm) Goering to provide me with an air force that will protect the German people against all attack.

So we have built up a defense force that the German people today may be proud of, and which the world will respect whenever it makes its appearance.

We have created the best anti-aircraft equipment and the best anti-tank equipment that there is in the whole world.

Work has gone on day and night thereon these five years.

On one single point I have succeeded in coming to an understanding, to which I shall refer later.

(This was taken to be in reference to the Anglo-German naval agreement of 1936 by which Germany agreed to limit its navy to 35 per cent of Great Britain's.)

Nevertheless, I have carried on politically my erstwhile thoughts of armament limitation or a disarmament policy.

In those years I have really conducted a practical peace policy.

I have attacked all seemingly impossible problems with a firm will to solve them peaceably if at all feasible even at the risk of more or less important German sacrifices.

I am a front soldier myself and I know how terrible war is.

I wanted to spare the German nation this experience and therefore I took up problem after problem with a firm resolve to attempt everything to make an amicable solution possible.

The hardest problem I found, my fellow citizens, was Polish-German relations. We faced the danger here of steering ourselves into, let us say, fanatical hysteria. The danger existed that in this case a conception like inherited enmity would gain possession of our peoples as well as the Polish people.

This I wanted to forestall. I know perfectly well that I would not have succeeded alone if at that time there had been a democracy of western construction in Poland.

For these democracies, running over with peace phrases, are the most bloodthirsty war instigators.

There was no democracy in Poland, but there was a man. With him we succeeded in less than a year in arriving at an agreement which presently, for the duration of ten years, basically removes the danger of any clash.

We are all determined, and also convinced, that this agreement will bring about lasting and continuous pacification, because problems in eight years are no different from those today.

We do not have to expect anything from each other. We recognize this. We are two peoples. They shall live.

One cannot annihilate the other. I recognize this and we must see it: A state of 33,000,000 people will always strive for an outlet to the sea.

Understanding Had to Be Found

Here the road to understanding had to be found, and it was found. And it is being widened and expanded.

Of course, down there realities are often grim. Nationalities and little racial groups often fight with each other.

But the decisive thing is: The two administrations and all sensible and reasonable people in both countries have a firm will and a firm resolve continually to improve relations.

That was a great need of mine, and a real act of peace which weighs more than all the jabbering in the Geneva League of Nations palace.

Now, I have tried during this time also gradually to bring about good and enduring relations with other nations.

We have given guarantees for the states in the west. We have guaranteed to all contiguous neighbors the inviolability of their territory so far as Germany is concerned.

That is not a phrase—that is our sacred will.

We are not interested in breaking peace. We do not want anything from these peoples. It is a fact that these our offers were meeting with increasing acceptance and also growing understanding.

Says He Extended Hand to England

Slowly, more and more nations are departing from the idiotic delusion of Geneva; I should like to say, departing not from collective peace obligations but from collective war obligations.

They are withdrawing therefrom and begin to see problems soberly and are ready for understanding and peace.

I have gone further.

I extended a hand to England. I renounced voluntarily ever again joining any naval conference so as to give the British Empire a feeling of security, not because I could not build more—and there should be no illusion about that—but exclusively for this reason: to safeguard permanent peace between both nations.

(This was the reference to the Anglo-German naval pact promised earlier in Hitler's speech.)

To be sure, there is here one pre-condition—it cannot be admitted that one party should say: I do not want to fight you any more and therefore I offer you to cut my armaments down to 32 per cent, and that the other party should say from time to time: we will fight again when it suits me.

That won't do. Such an agreement is morally justified only when both peoples shake hands on an honest promise never to wage war upon each other again.

Germany has this will. We all hope that among the English people those will prevail who are of the same mind. I have gone further. Immediately after the Saar had been returned to the Reich by plebiscite, I told France there were no more differences between France and us.

Under League of Nations auspices, 540,000 voters of the mineral-rich Saar Basin territory, lying between France and Germany, chose overwhelmingly in a plebiscite January 13, 1935, to return to Germany.

(Transfer of the area was effected without incident after the vote, which was provided for in the Versailles Treaty.)

I said: Alsace-Lorraine does not exist any more for us.

(Alsace-Lorraine was taken from France after the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, and the peace treaties after the great war returned it to her.)

These people really have not been asked their opinion in the last few decades. We believe that the inhabitants of those parts are happiest when they are not being fought over.

And we all do not want any more war with France. We want nothing more of France, absolutely nothing.

And when the Saar territory was returned to the Reich, thanks to—I will say right here—thanks to France's loyal execution of the treaties, I immediately gave this frank assurance: Now all the territorial differences between France and Germany are settled.

I no longer see any differences at all. There are two nations. They can live best if they work together.

After this renunciation, irrevocable once and forever, I turned to another problem, solvable more easily than others because a mutual philosophic basis served as a prerequisite for an easier mutual understanding: Germany's relations to Italy.

Fuehrer Gives Il Duce Credit

Certainly the solution of this problem is my work only partially. The other part is due to the rare great man (Premier Mussolini) whom the Italian people possess as its leader.

This relation has long left a sphere of clear economic and political expediency and over treaties and alliances has turned into a real strong union of hearts.

Here an axis was formed represented by two peoples, both of whom in their philosophical and political ideas found themselves in close indissoluble friendship.

Here, too, I cut the cloth finally and definitely, convinced of my responsibility toward my countrymen.

I have relieved the world of a problem that from now on no longer exists for us.

Bitter as it may be for a few, in the last analysis the interest of the German nation stands above all.

This interest, however, is: To be able to work in peace.

This whole activity, my fellow citizens, is not a phase that cannot be proved, but instead this activity is demonstrated by facts which no political liar can remove.

Two problems remained.

Here I had to make a reservation.

Ten million Germans found themselves outside the Reich's confines in two large contiguous regions—Germans who desired to come back into their homeland.

This number of 10,000,000 is not a trifle.

"Limit Beyond Which I Cannot Go"

And if France during 40 years did not renounce its claim to a few million French in Alsace-Lorraine, certainly we have a right before God and man to keep up our claim to these 10,000,000 Germans.

Somewhere, my fellow countrymen, there is a limit—a limit where yielding must cease because it would otherwise become harmful weakness and I would have no right to maintain a place in German history if I were simply to renounce ten millions without caring about them. I would then have no moral right to be Fuehrer of the German people.

I have taken upon myself sufficient sacrifices in the way of renunciations. Here was a limit beyond which I cannot go. How right this was has been proven first by the plebiscite in Austria, in fact by the entire history of the reunion of Austria with the Reich. A glowing confession of faith was pronounced at that time—a confession such as others certainly had not hoped for.

A flaming testimony was given at that time, a declaration such as others surely had not hoped would be given.

It was then we saw that for democracies a plebiscite becomes superfluous or even obnoxious as soon as it does not produce results democracies hoped for.

Nevertheless this problem was solved to the happiness of the great German people and now we confront the last problem that must and shall be solved.

This is the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe, but it is a demand on which I will not yield.

Its history is as follows: In 1918 central Europe was torn up and reshaped by some foolish or crazy so-called statesmen under the slogan "Self-determination and the right of nations."

Benes Called Father Of "Czech Lie"

Without regard to history, origin of peoples, their national wishes, their economic necessities, they smashed up Europe and arbitrarily set up new states.

To this Czechoslovakia owed its existence.

This Czech state began with one big lie and its father's name was Benes. (cries of "Hang him.")

This Mr. Benes at that time turned up at Versailles and told them that there was the Czechoslovak nation. (Loud laughter.)

He had to invent this lie to bolster up an insignificant number of his own nationals so as to make them seem more important.

And Anglo-Saxon statesmen who are not so good at geographical and national questions did not think it necessary to put Mr. Benes' assertions to a test or else they would have discovered pretty quick that there is no Czechoslovak nation, but that there are Czechs and Slovaks and that the Slovaks prefer to have nothing to do with the Czechs.

So They Took Germans Also

At last the Czechs, through Mr. Benes, annexed Slovakia. As this state did not seem to be able to live on, it simply took three and a half million Germans against their right of self-determination and their will to self-determination.

Yet this did not suffice. Hence 1,000,000 Magyars had to be added, then the Carpatho-Russians and at last several hundred thousand Poles.

Thus this state was created which later called itself Czechoslovakia in contradiction to the right of the self-determination of nations and in contradiction to the clear wish and will of the raped nations.

As I here talk to you now I feel sympathy for the fate of all these oppressed, I feel for the fate of the Hungarians, Slovaks, Poles, Ukranians—naturally I am speaking only for the fate of my Germans.

When Mr. Benes lied his state together at that time he solemnly promised to divide the state into cantons according to the Swiss system, because there were some among the democratic statesmen who had qualms of conscience.

We all know how Mr. Benes solved cantonization. How he began his system of terror. Then when Germans attempted to protest against this arbitrariness and rape they were blown to bits and a war of annihilation has raged ever since.

In those years of Czechoslovakia's peaceful progress nearly 600,000 Germans had to leave Czechoslovakia for a very simple reason—they would have perished of hunger had they remained.

Says Benes Caused Misery of Millions

The whole picture from 1918 to 1938 showed one thing quite clearly: That Mr. Benes was resolved simply to root out Germandom slowly and gradually and in this he succeeded up to a certain point.

He has plunged countless people into deepest misery.

He has managed to keep millions of people in fear and trembling and with continuous application of terror he succeeded slowly in gagging those millions.

It was then that the true reasons for existence of this state, seen from an international viewpoint, were revealed.

It was no longer a secret that this state was destined to be used as a German baiter when the opportunity offered.

The French Air Minister Pierre Cot a few weeks ago said blandly, "We need this state because from its territory German economic and industrial life can be most easily destroyed."

So this state was used by bolshevism as its point of entry.

It was not we who sought a contract with bolshevism, but bolshevism used this state to dig a channel into central Europe.

And now comes this scandalous situation: This state which is ruled by a minority only, forces its nationalities to a policy that one day makes them shoot their own brothers.

Mr. Benes rises and demands from Sudeten Germans: If I conduct war against Germany you must shoot Germans. If you do not want to you are traitors and I will have you shot.

And he demands the same from Hungarians, Poles and Slovaks, that they defend aims which are indifferent to the Slovak people.

The Slovak people want peace and no adventures.

Mr. Benes, however, dares to stamp all these human beings either as traitors to the people or traitors to the nation. Either they betray their people and are ready to shoot or Mr. Benes says: You are traitors to the nation and therefore will be shot.

This is the greatest impudence thinkable—to force alien people under certain conditions to shoot their own fellow citizens because the bad, rotten, criminal state regime wants it.

I can assure you right here: When we occupied Austria my first order was: No Czech needs or may serve in the German army.

I never want to cause him qualms of conscience. I do not want him to do it, he shall never do it.

Who, however, opposes Mr. Benes' total aims is being persecuted, terror breaks over him, he can be sure of jail and he will simply be killed economically.

Democratic world apostles cannot remove this from the world. The results have been dreadful in this state of Mr. Benes. Here again I speak for Germans.

Mortality is greatest there among all German tribes. Their death of children is the greatest, unemployment is the most terrible there.

Suicides are more frequent. It is only a question as how long this is to endure.

For 20 years Germans in Czechoslovakia and German people in the Reich looked on. Perhaps they had to look on, not because they were ever willing to take it, but because they were defenseless and could not help themselves from their tormentors and the world—these world democracies?

Yes, when anywhere a traitor is locked up or if a man, if you please, who has been inciting against their race from the pulpit is merely taken into custody then there is excitement in England and indignation in America.

But when hundreds of thousands of humans are driven out, when tens of thousands are delivered into jails, when thousands are massacred—then these fine democracies are not moved in the least.

Learn to Despise Democracies

We have learned in these years thoroughly to despise them.

During all this time and even today—this I must state—we find but one state, one great power in Europe and at its head, above all, one man who has a full understanding for this ardent need of our people.

It is, I think I may say this is my great friend, Benito Mussolini.

We shall never forget what he did during this time and what attitude the Italian people took.

If a similar hour of need should come for Italy I will go before the German people and urge it to take a similar stand.

Then there will not be two states defending themselves, but one solid block.

I said in the Reichstag on February 22 (February 20) that this (meaning the Czechoslovak situation) must be changed. Only Mr. Benes changed it differently. He started a more radical system of oppression, greater terror, a period of dissolutions, bans, confiscations, etc.

This went on until May 21 and you cannot deny, my friends, that it was truly endless German patience that we practiced.

This May 21 was unbearable enough. I have told the story of this month already at the Reich's party convention.

There at last were to be elections in Czechoslovakia.

They could no longer be postponed.

So Mr. Benes thinks out a way to intimidate Germans there—military occupation of those sections. (Shouts of "bloodhound.")

He still keeps up this military occupation in the expectation that so long as his hirelings are there nobody will dare raise a hand against him.

German Mobilization "An Impudent Lie"

It was an impudent lie that Germany had mobilized. That had to be used in order to cloak the Czech mobilization, excuse it and explain it.

What happened then, you know. The infamous international world set at Germany. Germany had not called upon one man. It never thought of solving this problem militarily.

I still had hopes that the Czechs would recognize at the last minute that this tyrannic regime could not keep up.

But Mr. Benes believed Germany was fair game. Of course, he thought he was covered by France and England and nothing could possibly happen to him.

And if everything failed there still was Soviet Russia to fall back on.

Thus the answer of that man was: No, more than ever shoot down, arrest and incarcerate all those whom he did not like for some reason. Then finally my demands came from Nuremburg.

The demands now were quite clear. Now for the first time I said, that now at last, nearly 20 years after, Mr. Wilson's right of self-determination for the 3,500,000 must be enforced and we shall not just look on any longer.

And again Mr. Benes replied: New victims, new incarcerations, new arrests. The German element gradually began to flee.

Then came England. I informed Mr. Chamberlain unequivocally of what we regard as the only possibility of solution.

It is the most natural solution possible.

I know that all these nationalities no longer want to remain with this Mr. Benes.

In the first place, however, I speak of Germans. For these Germans I have now spoken and now given assurances that I am no longer willing to look on quietly and passively as this lunatic believes he can simply mishandle three and a half million human beings.

I left no doubt that German patience at last was exhausted. I left no doubt it was the way of our German mentality to take things long and patiently, that, however, the moment comes once when this must be ended.

"Only Possible Demand" Sent by Allies

And now, in fact, England and France agreed to dispatch the only possible demand to Czechoslovakia, namely to free the German region and cede it to the Reich.

We have full knowledge today of the conversations which Mr. Benes then conducted.

He reached the decision in view of England's and France's threat no longer to sponsor Czechoslovakia unless the fate of the peoples therein were shaped differently and the regions liberated.

In the face of these declarations Mr. Benes found a way out.

He admitted that yes, these sections must be lopped off. That is what he declared.

And what did he do?

He did not lop off the territory—he drove out the Germans.

Now that is something where the game is up.

Hardly had Mr. Benes said this when his military subjugation began anew and in sharper measure.

And now look at the figures: 10,000 one day, the next 20,000, the next day 37,000, two days later 42,000, then 78,000, then it is 90,000, 137,000 and today 21,400.

Whole stretches of land are depopulated. Villages are burned to the ground. An attempt is made to smoke Germans there out with grenades and gas.

"Moment Has Come To Talk Business"

But Mr. Benes sits in Prague and is convinced "nothing can happen to me. Behind me stand England and France."

And now, my fellow countrymen, I believe the moment has come for talking business.

When anybody suffers such disgrace and such humiliation for 20 long years there certainly can be no doubt about his being peace-loving.

If anyone develops patience such as we developed it certainly cannot be claimed that we lust for war.

And finally: Mr. Benes has 7,000,000 behind him while here stands a people of 75,000,000.

I now have addressed a memorandum to the British government with a last and final German proposal.

This proposal is nothing else but the realization of what Mr. Benes already has promised.

The contest of the proposal is very simple: territory that is nationally German and wants to join Germany is to go to Germany.

Not when Mr. Benes has succeeded in driving out one or two million Germans, but right now, instantly.

I have selected a frontier that is fair to Czechoslovakia on the basis of material compiled some decades past on ethnographic and language divisions.

I am a more just man than Mr. Benes and I do not want to use the power I possess.

I have therefore adopted this rule: this and this territory comes under German sovereignty because it is essentially inhabited by Germans.

The final boundaries, however, I leave to a vote of the people there, meaning a local vote will be taken.

And so that no one can say that this would not be fair enough, I have decided to adopt the Saar plebiscite statute as a basis for this vote.

I was and am willing to have a plebiscite in the whole Czechoslovak territory.

Was Willing to Have Board Rule Vote

But Mr. Benes objects to this and so do his friends, that this is to be only in certain sections.

Very well, I have yielded there. I said "Mr. Chamberlain if you insist on the principle that it is to be only in certain disputed sections—all right with me.

And so that no one can say this plebiscite would not be fair enough, I was ready to give a vote supervised by an international control commission.

Then I went farther. I was ready now to leave defining of the new borders to German and Czech commissions.

Mr. Chamberlain asked whether this could not be an international commission. I even agreed to this.

All right: An international commission should do it.

Furthermore, I was ready even to withdraw troops during the plebiscite and today gave consent to invite the British Legion which offered during this time to go into this region to maintain peace and order.

And then I was ready for such an international commission to draw a definite border.

And I was ready to hand over all modalities (methods) to a commission consisting of Germans and Czechs.

What exactly is the content of this memorandum?

It is nothing else than a practical execution of what Mr. Benes already agreed to and that, too, under the greatest international guarantees.

There is, however, something that is unacceptable for Mr. Benes. Mr. Benes says this memorandum created a new situation. What does the new situation consist of?

Because I demand that now as an exception, Mr. Benes this time keep his promise. This is the new situation for Mr. Benes.

What hasn't this man promised during his lifetime? He has kept nothing. And now for the first time he should stick to a promise.

Mr. Benes says, "Yes, we cannot withdraw from this territory." Then Mr. Benes understood in ceding these regions that a region would be credited to the German Reich as a legal title which will be raped by the Czechs.

That is past history. I have now demanded that Mr. Benes be forced to stick to the truth. He will have to hand the territory to us on October 1.

Mr. Benes now pins his hopes to the world. Neither he nor his diplomats conceal this.

They declare: It is our hope that Chamberlain will fall, that Daladier will be removed, that revolutions happen everywhere. And our hope is Soviet Russia.

He still believes he can escape fulfillment of his duty. And there I can now say one thing: Two men are on the scene against each other. There is Mr. Benes and here am I.

We are two such different persons that when Mr. Benes sneaked through the world during the great wrestling of nations, I then fulfilled my duty as an honest soldier.

Today, however, I face this man again as a soldier of my people. I have little to say: I am thankful to Mr. Chamberlain for all his trouble and I assured him that the German people want nothing but peace, but I also declared that I cannot go beyond the limits of our patience.

I further assured him and I repeat here that if this problem is solved, there will be no further territorial problems in Europe for Germany.

And I further assured him that at the moment that Czechoslovakia has solved her other problems, that is, when the Czechs have reconciled themselves with their other minorities, the Czech state no longer interests me and that, if you please, I give him the guaranty: We do not want any Czechs anymore.

But equally I want now to declare before the German people that as regards the Sudeten German problem, my patience is now exhausted.

I have made an offer to Mr. Benes. It is nothing else than realization of what he himself has already conceded.

He now holds in his hand peace or war.

Either he will now accept this offer and at last give the Germans their freedom, or we will now take this freedom for ourselves.

And there is one thing of which the world may have taken cognizance: Throughout 4½ years of war and during the long years of my political life nobody has been able to charge me with having been cowardly.

Asserts His People Differ From 1918

I now head the procession of my people as first soldier and behind me—may the world know this—there now marches a people and a different one than that of 1918.

Errant mentors of those times succeeded in infiltrating the poison of democratic phrases into our people, but the German people of today are not the German people of 1918.

Such phrases act like wasps' stings on us, but now we are immune.

In this hour the whole German people will be united to me, my will they shall feel as their will, just as I regard its future and fate as mandator of my actions.

And we will strengthen this common bond of the time of our struggle, the time when I went out as a lone unknown soldier to conquer a Reich.

Never did I doubt success and final victory. A body of brave men and brave women gathered around me and they went with me.

And so I ask my German people: Fall in behind me man for man, woman for woman.

In these hours we will take one holy common resolve. It shall be stronger than any pressure, any peril.

And when this will is stronger than pressure and peril, it will break the pressure and peril.

Let Mr. Benes choose!

While statesmen were still trying to preserve peace, this map shows how nations of Europe lined up today on the brink of war. Countries with diagonal lines go with Germany, the dotted nations against her. Poland demands part of the Czech nation, but has so far joined no alliance. Countries so far neutral in the quarrel are shown in white, and the core of trouble—Czechoslovakia—in black

That is when the general staff stepped in.

Now the staff, headed by Gen. Ludwig Krejci and in which Gen. Syrovy, as inspector general, has the most powerful voice, runs everything. The political parties and parliamentary representatives exist in name only and their leaders function as rubber stamps. A military dictatorship exists in a real sense, and the people are more than satisfied. General mobilization was the most popular order that could have been issued.

The people responded joyously, rapidly and efficiently. It is difficult to see how they could be persuaded to lay down their arms and withdraw peacefully before a German army of occupation. It is difficult to see how Syrovy and Krejci, both of whom fought against the Germans in the World War, could be persuaded to ask the army to withdraw.

Nation Prepared

Czechoslovakia has prepared for war in more ways than general mobilization, which brought the number of men under arms from 650,000 to 1,250,000. Three hundred thousand had been called to the colors by easy stages in the preceding ten days.

Thousands of men, women and children have been evacuated from Prague and other possible air-raid targets. All gasoline and oil have been requisitioned. Cars and taxis have been commandeered.

President Benes has moved from Kradchin Castle to a secret residence and office. The general staff headquarters now works in an undisclosed building. If war breaks, the government and general staff will move to a village in distant Slovakia, probably Kaschau.

Forty-eight hours have passed since mobilization, which was accomplished in record time. It was well under way—in the sense that every man had reported for duty—within 24 hours.

Uniforms and equipment, however, still are being issued, and thousands and thousands of men have yet to be sent to their posts. During these 48 hours there have been no telegraphic or telephonic communications, except for government calls and messages and state calls for some legations.

Most Foreigners Leave

What little news has gone out has passed over the legation phones or via censored radio facilities for broadcasting companies, but not for station-to-station calls.

In Prague, with few exceptions, Americans, French and British who could leave have left. Newspapermen are moving to country homes in a sort of back-to-the-land movement of their own. There still is little news of what is going on in the outside world. Few people know the things that affect every one here—what Russia is doing—what France is doing—What England is doing—and what Germany is doing.

Men and women—most of them with gas masks at home or slung around their shoulders—are ready for anything that might happen. They expect the worst, but they wait calmly.

Sudetens Put in Army

By the Associated Press.

Eger, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 26.—Czechoslovak authorities rounded up hundreds of Sudeten Germans who had ignored the country's general mobilization order of last week service today.

One group was led handcuffed and pressed them into military through the streets of this Sudeten German town at the western tip of Czechoslovakia, within 3 miles of the German frontier.

This step was taken just before Reichsfuehrer Hitler began his speech in Berlin, and was designed partly to prevent a new outbreak in this hotbed of violence, since it placed all men under 45 years of age in army camps—where they did not hear the Fuehrer's speech.

Seventy Sudeten Germans, mostly women and children, were exchanged tonight for an equal number of Czechs from Germany.

A German train—the first to cross the frontier at Eger since the general mobilization order Friday—brought the Czechs.

Hitler's Speech Packs 'Em in Around D. C. Radios; 'It's War,' Many Say

Post Staff Photos.

Barbers dried their razors at about the same time motorists and radios pulled up and parked to get the best possible reception while Reichsfuehrer Hitler delivered his speech, awaited throughout the world. At left, a group of curbstone listeners gather about the doorway of a shop near Eleventh and E streets northwest. (Center), employes and patrons of the barber shop in the Harrington Hotel halt operations as Berlin goes on the air. Sidewalk Throngs Stop to Listen at Drugstores
Derisive Laughter Greets Fuehrer's Words
Hearers Are Solemn and Fearful Afterwards

Reichsfuehrer Hitler packed them in yesterday—in offices, homes, restaurants, bars, shoe shine parlors and taxicabs—wherever citizens of the Capital could squeeze within earshot of a loud speaker.

The German chancellor, according to clerks in a downtown drugstore on F street, drew a greater audience to their radio than did Justice Hugo Black, explaining his membership in the Klan, President Roosevelt, in any of his addresses, or a World Series broadcast. Although the No. 1 Nazi's historic declaration came during Washington's business hours, few of the thousands who clustered anxiously around receiving sets returned to normal pursuits until the strains of "Deutschland Uber Alles" marked conclusion of the 71-minute address.

Men and women nervously shifted position, conversing in quiet tones, while 4,000 miles away in Berlin the Fuehrer drove from his residence in the Wilhelmstrasse to the sports palace.

With the chanting and cheering of the expectant Nazis as a background, a commentator characterized the temper of the Berlin audience as jovial rather than war-like.

But the reassuring effect of this description was dissipated when the German leader's harshly dynamic voice was carried to Washington, stridently asserting the armed might of Germany, again and again branding President Benes of Czechoslovakia a liar.

"It means war"—this was the common reaction of District audiences as the fomer corporal thundered to his climax. The roaring, rythmic responses of the crowd in the sports palace to the crucial passages of the speech, distorted by transmission across the Atlantic into a weird wave of sound, had a decidedly disquieting effect on listeners here. "That sound is almost inhuman," a Commerce Department employe remarked. "Worse than a siren," he added, as an ambulance sped past on Pennsylvania avenue.

The booing and cries of "pfui" with which German crowds now greet Hitlerian references to President Benes or the "democratic statesmen" was adopted as its own response by a knot of Washingtonians listening outside a Twelfth street radio shop—except that they differed with the Nazis on the appropriate moments during the address for the Bronx cheer.

Derisive Laughter

Derisive laughter immediately followed translation of numerous remarks of the Fuehrer. "That was mighty nice of him, wasn't it?" asked a taxi driver when Hitler declared he had voluntarily foresworn any competition with the British navy.

Gripped by the dramatic impact of the chancellor's pronouncement, many listeners appeared loath to leave their ringside seats for the historic occasion and lingered on by radios as official translations and commentaries followed Hitler's speech. When the crowds did begin to scatter men walked away soberly, almost wearily, apparently little disposed for argument or discussion of the speech with their fellow citizens.

A few, however, gave voice at once to their discouragement. "There's no possible opening for peace in that speech," a broker said on Fifteenth street northwest. "Now Hitler will commit some overt act; England, France and Russia will come in against him, and we'll be in it, too, within six months or a year."

D. W. Darden, insurance man, with offices in the Woodward Building, exclaimed, "I fought in the last war and I'm ready to go again. Every red-blooded American should be ready to back up the Czechs. No liberty is worth anything without service."

of gratitude, if not of relief, in France. The message also went to Daladier and Chamberlain. Daladier sent his thanks directly from London.

The Socialist Party, largest in the French Parliament, cabled Mr. Roosevelt:

"The Socialist Party and its Parliamentary groups, certain to interpret the feelings of all French democracy, address to you the expression of their most cordial gratitude for your message which at the hour of greatest peril for peace makes her the voice of the universal conscience."

Party Leaders Leon Blum, former premier, and Paul Faure signed the cable. The flying trip of the premier and foreign minister to London inspired French confidence that the two Western democracies had done everything in their power to find a compromise between Hitler and the Czechoslovak government.

Conferences between Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of the general staff of national defense, and British defense leaders led to belief the two powers were preparing to meet any eventuality.

Should the situation grow worse overnight, another formal mobilization order was expected tomorrow to build up the force under arms already swelled past 2,000,000 by individual calls to colors and partial mobilization orders.

Concrete evidences of the imminence of war included:

Blue bulbs dimmed office lights and reflectors were taken from street lights on boulevards; trainloads of troops were leaving Paris and other eastern cities; towns near the frontier blacked out last night against possible air raids, shelter trenches were being dug in public parks here.

The education ministry made ready to issue orders postponing reopening of schools set for October 1, while the ministry of public works asked all who wanted to leave Paris "because of circumstances" to use the railways.

An exodus of Americans started. One steamship line reported it was sold out for two weeks' sailings.

The embassy's advice to Americans to leave France came several hours before Ambassador Bullitt called on Bonnet to learn of the Anglo-French conversations at London.

His Patience Gone, Hitler Warns World

Hitler

brought Europe closer to war than at any time since 1918.

The final chapters were Czechoslovakia's agreement, under French and British pressure, to cede Germany the Sudetenland; the second talk, at Godesberg, Germany, between Hitler and Chamberlain; issuance of Hitler's "final" terms for peace with Czechoslovakia, involving turning over of the Sudetenland by October 1; Czechoslovakia's mobilization; far-reaching war preparations by France and Britain; and, finally, Sir Horace Wilson's mission today.

Hitler frequently and bitterly attacked President Benes, describing him as a liar and a promise-breaker.

"I hoped," Hitler declared, "until the last moment that Benes would recede from the unreasonableness of his position.

His Word Is "Enough"

"Benes, however, thought he could do anything he pleased to Germany, for he was protected by Britain and France.

"And if everything else went wrong there was still Russia.

"I told Chamberlain plainly what I consider is the only solution; that I was not the man to look on indifferently when 3,500,000 Germans were maltreated; that there comes a moment when the word is enough.'

"France and England finally agreed to the cession of German territory in Czechoslovakia. Benes agreed; yes, these regions must be ceded.

"But what did he do? He did not cede the region, but drove the Germans out."

Then, after telling of a daily increase in the number of refugees entering Germany from Czechoslovakia, and stating the total number now had reached 214,000, Hitler said:

"Whole stretches of land are being depopulated, yet Benes is sitting in Prague and thinks nothing can happen to him, for behind him stand England and France.

"I believe the moment has now come for talking business."

Climax of Address

This was the first climax of the address, after the Fuehrer had been speaking 53 minutes. A tumultuous shout rang to the roof of the Sportspalast as Hitler paused. Then he continued:

"My memorandum (given Chamberlain at Godesberg to relay to Prague) is the last and final one. It is nothing but a realization of what Benes has promised.

"The final outlining of the border, however, I gladly give to the citizens there. I will use the Saar status as a basis for a plebiscite there.

"I am ready and have been ready for a plebiscite to be conducted in Czechoslovakia.

"But that is where Benes and his friends balked. I was even ready to have a plebiscite carried out by an international control commission.

"I was also ready to have the German-Czechoslovak frontier later agreed upon by a joint German-Czechoslovak commission.

"What is the memorandum but a realization of Czechoslovak promises and yet Benes says it creates a new situation and wants to shuffle out of his promises.

"Benes understood it this way—that this region will be credited to the German account, but it would not be returned, and instead kept under Czechoslovak rule for further persecution."

Then came the second climax of the speech:

"But he must cede this region to us by October 1."

For a full minute there was deafening cheers.

Speeds Up Words

"I am grateful," continued Hitler, "to Mr. Chamberlain for all his efforts. I assured him the German people want nothing but peace, but that there were limits beyond which we cannot go.

"I assured him that when the Czechoslovaks had peacefully settled their difficulties with their other nationalities, Czechoslovakia no longer interested me."

Now Hitler, nearing the close, spoke faster, in high-pitched tones, and was interrupted with frequent cheers.

"I offered Benes the legalization of what he agreed to do. Does he want war or peace?

"The Sudeten Germans will now take the liberty denied them for 20 years. Germans are a different people from what they were in 1918.

"We are cured of the democracy of those days.

People Behind Him

"In this hour, the whole German people will unite behind me. . . .

"I ask you to rally behind me, man for man, frau for frau. If our will is stronger than deprivation and danger, we will succeed!"

It was 9:31 p. m., and the Reichsfuehrer was finished. The shouting of his audience was deafening. For five minutes they cheered and sang the chorus:

"Fuehrer command! We follow!"

Hitler fumbled with his gloves and his hat.

Then, departing, he shook hands heartily with Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels.

The crowd was still in a tumultuous ovation as the Fuehrer strode out.

War talk hung on every tongue today. Most Germans approached took a glum view of developments. British residents of Berlin were leaving en masse.

The Boerse, too, reflected uneasiness, with losses up to 4 per cent.

Along the entire Silesian border thousands of lorries loaded with troops were reported moving toward the frontier and detachments of the German army from Wegscheid, Bavaria, departed for the frontier zone. They were quartered in peasant homes in the Sesselberg district, and telephone connections were established connecting the military command with all frontier points.

forts since it seems to me incredible that the peoples of Europe who do not want war with one another should be plunged into a bloody struggle over a question on which agreement has already been largely obtained.

"It is evidence that the Chancellor has no faith that the promises made will be carried out. These promises were made not to the German government direct but to the British and French governments in the first instance.

"Speaking for the British government, we regard ourselves as morally responsible for seeing that the promises are carried out freely and fully, and we are prepared to undertake that they shall be so carried out with all reasonable promptitude provided that the German government will agree to the settlement of terms and conditions of transfer by discussion and not by force.

"I trust that the chancellor will not reject this proposal which is made in the same spirit of friendliness as that in which I was received in Germany and which, if it is accepted, will satisfy the German desire for the union of Sudeten Germans with the Reich without the shedding of blood in any part of Europe."

Statement Is Mild

In contrast to Hitler's swashbuckling blood and iron declaration, Chamberlain's statement seemed rather mild and compromising. It did not pack the punch of the earlier communique from the foreign office which threatened Germany with the armed might of Britain, France and Russia if she attacked Czechoslovakia.

This communique was a trifle stronger and more precise than the previous warnings on the subject uttered by Prime Minister Chamberlain. Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon and the various anonymous "government spokesmen" and "Whitehall sources" which, it can now be revealed, were so close to the foreign office they were practically in it.

The British issued their ultimatum in the midst of Hitler's speech in which he revealed that he had no intention of moving his armies and war planes tonight as many had feared.

Four Examine Speech

While Hitler was pouring out his grievances through a microphone, a little group of four gathered in the cabinet room at 10 Downing street to weigh every one of his words. The four students of Nazi oratory were Chamberlain, Lord Halifax, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare, comprising the so-called inner cabinet or inner circle.

These four had no recourse to a radio receiver to tune in the original German, but contented themselves with an English summary as it came over to them over a news agency pick up. Also present were Sir Alexander Cadogan and Sir Robert Vansittart.

Chamberlain and his associates got a laugh out of that passage in Hitler's speech in which he hinted at the downfall of the Chamberlain government, saying: "We want peace with England and I hope that those in England will soon reach power who want peace with us."

It may be that the former Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, Baron Joachim von Ribbentrop, or somebody else who has Hitler's ear, had pictured Chamberlain as a red radical, not to be classed with such Tories as the Londonderrys and the Astors.

The fact is Chamberlain is as conservative as anyone in England and has leaned over backwards in his efforts to buy peace for the empire by conciliating Germany.

Friendly to Poland

It was noted Hitler spoke in very friendly terms of his potential allies, Italy and Poland, and was not too hostile toward Britain and France, the nations which he would like to keep on the sidelines while he partitions Czechoslovakia.

But the Anglo-French alliance indicated in more than one way today that at last it has resolved to take up the challenge of the Berlin-Rome axis. On the very day Hitler invades Bohemia, France swears it will fight Germany and the British insist they will plunge right in beside the French, not hesitating as they did in 1914.

All day long events moved at a relentless tempo. Some of the highlights were:

Prime Minister Chamberlain saw King George VI at Buckingham Palace and persuaded him to stay in London where his job, if the worst comes, will be to sign the mobilization order for the Royal Air Force, Navy and Army. It was indeed reported the King had already signed the order, but it would not be used unless needed.

Accordingly the King canceled his overnight visit to Glasgow where tomorrow Queen Elizabeth is to launch the world's biggest liner, the Queen Elizabeth. If war comes, the new luxury liner probably will be converted into an aircraft carrier or troop transport.

Parliament Recalled

Both houses of Parliament were recalled for a special session Wednesday at which, if circumstances warrant, the Prime Minister may have to ask them to approve a declaration of war. There is little doubt a vote would be in the affirmative, although there may be some expressions of criticism and dissent from a minority of M. P.'s who think the Chamberlain government might have handled Hitler better.

Chamberlain had his trusted adviser, Sir Horace Wilson, fly to Berlin to lay before Hitler an eleventh-hour appeal for moderation and compromise. Wilson carried the memorandum from the Prime Minister rejecting Hitler's latest demands and asking him to be satisfied with something like his original claims which would have given him Sudetenland as soon as an international commission could mark the revised boundaries.

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, the French commander in chief, flew to London to oil up the Anglo-French military alliance. Before flying back to Paris, this French warrior talked to Chamberlain, Sir Thomas Inskip, the minister for coordination of defense, and Viscount Gort, the British army chief. In the event of another world war, Gen. Gamelin probably would be the supreme commander in chief of the allied armies, a modern Marshal Foch, with Britain subject to his strategy.

French Conclude Talks

French Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet completed their two-day talks at No. 10 Downing street with Chamberlain and his foreign secretary, Lord Halifax, according to the official communique: "A full accord was established on all points." Gen. Gamelin, the communique added, had been called over for "separate consultations."

Daladier and Bonnet flew back to Paris ahead of Gamelin. Daladier was grave and reluctant to speak, but pressed for a statement, he told reporters: "There is no change in the position. It is better to say little now. We must still hope."

Earlier in the day President Roosevelt had made a direct appeal to Hitler and President Benes, of Czechoslovakia, for peace, and copies of these cables were sent to Chamberlain and Daladier.

Chamberlain cabled Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, requesting him to thank President Roosevelt for his "weighty message."

Veiled Threat Seen

Chamberlain, with his usual reserve, understated Britain's joyful reception of Roosevelt's message which was generally interpreted as a plea for peace, coupled with a veiled threat that if war came the United States might again join her allies of 1917-'18.

President Roosevelt's message was analyzed at a special cabinet meeting held just after the conclusion of the Anglo-French consultations. Another cabinet meeting will be held tomorrow concerning Hitler's speech and Hitler's reply to the personal message from Chamberlain delivered by Sir Horace Wilson.

Among those who visited 10 Downing street during the day were Maj. Clement Richard Attlee, leader of the Labor party, and Winston Churchill, leader of his own young vigorous one-man party, both of whom were trying to ginger up Chamberlain on the theory that it is wiser to fight Hitler now than to wait until he has strengthened himself with the resources of Czechoslovakia.

Trenches Dug in London

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 26.—With four days left before Chancellor Hitler's threatened march into Czechoslovakia, hundreds of workmen today began digging trenches in London's parks for protection against air raids, and the government-manufactured gas masks were distributed to millions throughout the British Isles.

Everyone at Buckingham Palace from King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to the servants "below stairs" were fitted with masks. The entire staff at St. James's Palace also was fitted with gas masks.

Princess Elizabeth, heir presumptive to the throne, and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, will be kept in the comparative safety of Balmoral Castle, Scotland, which is believed to be beyond the reach of enemy airmen.

U. S. Embassy Strengthened

Precautions were also taken at the American embassy in Grosvenor Square, where workmen were rushing to complete the task of making the cellar gas proof and splinter proof against shrapnel. The building is of such stout construction it will withstand anything but a direct hit by a bomb.

Each man of the embassy staff has been given a United States Army gas mask to be kept at arm's length for use in emergency. A shipment of 500 of these masks arrived in London last week. About 1,000 more are expected shortly.

Policemen leaving Bow street station, in the heart of London, for duty today, were given satchels containing masks.

More than 40,000,000 masks have been manufactured for the population of the British Isles. About 9,000,000 of these have been allocated for Greater London. So great was the rush to obtain them today that long lines, reminiscent of the bread queues during the World War, formed on the sidewalks outside London's many borough halls. Men and women went away with the masks slung over their shoulders.

3 Nations Praise Roosevelt In Reply to Peace Appeal

Replies to President Roosevelt's plea for peace yesterday, as received from the President of Czechoslovakia, the Prime Minister of Great Britain and the French Premier follow:

From President Benes:

Mr. President:

I am deeply moved by your cable message. It reached me at a moment when our country and our nation are feeling so intensely the menace of war. For 20 years our successive governments have pursued a policy of peace. They have abided by the principle of settling all international disputes by peaceful means. They have concluded treaties of arbitration. They have supported the peace policy of the League of Nations and they have never offered (?) against all that line of conduct. Our government also signed the Briand-Kellogg Pact and will in no case do anything that would violate it. Although Czechoslovakia has already made greatest sacrifices in the negotiations up to now, sacrifices which touch the country's vital interests, it does not break off negotiations, desirous of seeing the conflict solved by peaceful means by agreement. Czechoslovakia has also signed a treaty of arbitration with Germany, has already proposed to settle the present dispute under its terms and is ready to renew this offer. Czechoslovakia is grateful to you, Mr. President, for your message, a message which in these grave moments con contribute toward a just solution of the dispute. I believe that even today the dispute could be settled in a spirit of equity without resort to force and the whole Czechoslovak nation still hopes this will be the case. The Czechoslovak nation would defend itself were it attacked but it is profoundly convinced with you that in the end war solves no problem and that this is a case in which reason, a sense of humanity and principles of justice should triumph.

DR. EDUARD BENES.

From the British Prime Minister:

His Majesty's government hail with gratitude the weighty message that the President of the United States has addressed to them and to certain other governments. In this critical time it is indeed essential to remember what is at stake and to weigh the issues with all gravity before embarking on a course from which there may be no retreat.

His Majesty's government has done and are doing their very utmost to secure a peaceful solution of the present difficulties and they will relax no effort so long as there remains any prospect of achieving that object. The prime minister is even today making a further earnest appeal for settlement by negotiation in which His Majesty's government would be ready to lend their good offices. The Presidents' words can but encourage all those who sincerely desire to co-operate in this endeavor. His Majesty's government, for their part, respond to the President's appeal in all sincerity and without reserve, and they most earnestly hope that the other governments to which it is addressed will do likewise.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN.

From the French Prime Minister.

Your moving appeal has reached me in London at the very moment when, in close co-operation with the British government France makes a supreme attempt with a view to safeguarding all possibility of an amicable settlement of the conflict that is threatening peace. It is of special value to me that under your high moral authority the devotion of the entire American nation to the principles which have been recognized and publicly acknowledged by all the parties to the Kellogg Pact is now solemnly reaffirmed.

Remaining faithful both to the spirit and the letter of the pledges, we continue with unfailing tenacity to look for any procedure or form of agreement which may be compatible with the dignity and the vital interests of the nations involved.

We trust thus to serve to the last the ideal of justice and peace which has always been a link between our two nations.

Peace Prayers Mark Jewish New Year

Observe Rosh Hashanah
Leaders Attack 'Isms'
Religious Revival Asked

Washington Jewry, celebrating Rosh Hashanah, start of the year 5699, yesterday prayed for peace, while their leaders warned against Nazism and communism and urged a return to spiritual things to protect democracy.

Through the day, synagogues were filled for the four services highlighted by the blowing of the shofar, ceremonial ram's horn, whose sound is traditionally a call to repent and promise of an age of justice.

This note carried through to the final benediction—"And may it be good in Thy sight to bless at all times and in every hour with Thy peace."

Almost without exception, Washington rabbis called attention to the European situation, and added a warning that the rise of dictatorship spelled danger for democracy.

Rabbi Zemach Green, of Chev Sholom Temple, said the world is trembling and tottering between "merciless and brutal Fascism-Nazism, and violent and savage Communism" both locked in a deadly struggle for supremacy.

He called for a renaissance of religion to save the world from drowning in blood.

This plea was echoed by Rabbi Solomon Metz of the Adas Israel Congregation. He pictured the democracies as superior in manpower to the totalitarian states, but weakened by loss of faith in democracy as a spiritual force.

"Democracy now is a manner of speaking rather than a way of life; a convenience, not a faith," he declared.

Strengthening the forces of religion, he said, is the only method left to guard the American democracy against the propaganda of Nazi and Communists.

Rabbi Harry Silverstone called on members of Tifereth Israel Congregation to work for the relief of persecuted Jews in Germany and to share in the strengthening of democracy. He urged that the problems of a "suffering" world be settled by reason rather than force.

Rabbi H. M. Levinson, of Beth-Sholom-Talmud Torah, praised President Roosevelt's action in appealing to President Benes and Reichsfuehrer Hitler for peace, and declared that this country could show the rest of the world the way to peace.

Others who conducted services were Rabbi J. T. Loeb at the Southeast Hebrew Congregation; Rabbi Joshua Klavin at Talmud Torah; and Rabbi Henry Segal at B'nai Israel Congregation.

Today's services will follow the pattern of those held yesterday, until the evening prayers at home, shortly after sundown, will mark the end of the holiday. The 10-day period of repentance will end October 4, with Yom Kippur, day of atonement.

Poles Here Uphold Bid for Slice Of Czechoslovakia

The Polish information service in Washington, in a statement yesterday, defended the demand of the Warsaw government that the question of the Poles in the Teschen region of Czechoslovakia be settled at the same time and in the same manner as that of the Sudeten Germans.

"The region," said the statement, "is a territory of 600 miles square, inhabited by approximately 150,000 Poles who form over 76 per cent of the entire population.

"Prior to the World War it formed part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. After the collapse of Austria, the Poles and Czechs agreed, on November 5, 1918, to a temporary frontier which was to be delimited finally by the peace conference.

"On January 23, 1919, the entire region was seized by Czech troops in complete disregard of the agreement and without waiting for any decision of the peace conference. This was done at a time when Poland was engaged in a devastating war against the Bolshevik invasion.

"On July 28, 1920, the allied council of ambassadors compelled Poland to accept the occupation of the territory by Czechoslovakia in exchange for a promise of allied aid against the Bolsheviks. The Polish Parliament refused subsequently to ratify the acceptance. The allied promise was never fulfilled, but the Polish province remained with Czechoslovakia.

"During the last 18 years a policy of denationalization and persecution was ruthlessly applied by the Prague government toward its unwilling Polish citizens and a fractional Czech minority imposed its will on 150,000 Poles who form 76 per cent of the total population of the district. Many times before 1938 Poland protested against such treatment accorded the Polish population in the Czechoslovak state, but nobody could be persuaded to listen to Polish complaints."

Henlein Leads Dash Across Czech Border

Heads Free Corps
Followers Puzzled
Expected an Army

By Melvin Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

Asch, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 26.—Residents of this Sudeten German town expressed joy today when Konrad Henlein, leader of the outlawed Sudeten German Party, dashed across the border from Germany with five bus loads of Sudeten "Free Corps" fighters.

They thought the German army had come at last.

"Now it's going to start," they shouted.

But Henlein, who for an hour inspected his Sudeten Free Corps' front line and returned to his headquarters at Bayreuth, Germany, ordered his men to avoid combat with Czechoslovak troops.

Sudeten Germans here have proclaimed Asch and vicinity a "free territory." The Czechoslovaks have not attempted to retake the town.

The situation was puzzling. Many tonight still think a German army detachment is out there on the front beside their own volunteer fighters.

The man in the street, who believes what he hears and reads, is having a hard time understanding why the German frontier has not been thrown open fully to Sudeten Germans from the "free territory."

"We want to join Germany—our homeland," said a spokesman for the provisional government, "but Germany has hesitated.

"We are asking to be taken in, but the door is still shut. I understand international negotiations are the reason for Berlin's reticence. But thousands who want to cross the border daily don't understand why they must show passports and why we are subject to currency restrictions which existed when Asch was a part of Czechoslovakia.

"The situation here is not as it was in Austria. Here customs and treasury guards still are functioning, whereas in Austria they disappeared immediately."

German customs officials say they have strict orders not to step one foot into either Czechoslovakia or the Asch "free territory."

Masaryk Shocked

London, Sept. 26 (AP).—Jan Masaryk, minister to London and son of the founder of the 20-year-old Czechoslovakia republic, said tonight after Hitler's speech:

"The speech I heard tonight is so unbelievably uncultured and shocking that I am proud of my government's decision to take a firm stand against the authors of a mentality which is trying to destroy European cultura."

Hungary Likes Speech

Budapest, Sept. 26 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech tonight was described by the chief of the Hungarian foreign office press bureau as "the best of the best" for Hungary.

Hitler, the press chief said, told the world clearly "how much the Hungarians and Poles suffer under Czech rule" and what they therefore demand.

Polish Attack Reported on Czech Frontier

Teschen (Tuesday), Sept. 27 (U.P.)—The explosion of hand grenades and the stutter of machine gun fire awoke this Czech-Polish border town at 2 a. m. today when Poles reportedly attacked gendarme posts on the Czech side of the frontier.

Explosions and firing continued for more than an hour. Casualties were not learned immediately. Yesterday one Czech policeman and three Poles were killed in a series of border clashes.

'Peace by Force' Plan

Geneva (Tuesday) Sept. 27 (AP).—Soviet Foreign Commissar Litvinoff was reported today to have opposed a "peace by force" plan to Paris and London as the only possible answer to Chancellor Hitler.

The foreign commissar, some sources said, had urged France and Britain to join Russia in military measures which would leave no doubt of their intention to fight if Hitler attempts to seize the Sudetenland by force.

Sources close to the Russian delegation said the Soviet plan was to send the French, British and Soviet Ambassadors simultaneously to the German foreign office warning Germany they were prepared to defend Czechslovakia.

U.S. Press Sees Little Hope in Hitler Speech

World War Still Feared
Lust for Power Charged
Disaster Is Predicted

By the United Press.

Editorial comments of American newspapers on the Hitler speech included these:

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION—If there was any faint hope of peace to be gleaned from the speech of Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Berlin, it was so little as to be almost imperceptible. He made it unmistakably clear that only complete capitulation of the Czechoslovakian cabinet to the demands that government already has declared unacceptable, will prevent the explosion that the world fears will plunge all nations into war . . . In this grave hour the world can only wait on the whim of a man mad with the lust for power . . .

NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE—It is clear that neither the last-minute communication from Great Britain, neither the admirable words of the President's appeal, nor the hint behind them, in any way modified Hitler's reckless and fanatic mood. If any thought of retreat exists in that strange, unpredictable mind, it was carefully concealed from his audiences at home and abroad. As a result, he has made a peaceful solution far more difficult for everyone concerned.

NEW YORK TIMES—If as "the first soldier" of the German nation he (Hitler) marches into Czechoslovakia, he will be met by such a coalition of force that only a man lost to all sense of responsibility and all contact with reality would risk the certain disaster that course entails, for himself, for his country, for the world.

MIAMI HERALD—Hitler left no loophole for a new settlement of the Czech question by which President Benes could hope to whittle down the German demands which he has rejected. The whole attitude of the German Caesar showed that his bluff has not been called. The madman of Berlin persists in his fury. If his ambitions drive him to invade Czechoslovakia, if "German patience" is exhausted by Saturday and Hitler begins to move his troops across the border into the Sudeten area, war looms as almost inevitable. Hitler boosted the price of peace as Godesburg. He stood by it yesterday. And Europe rocked under the impact of the crisis.

NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE—If war is averated in Europe it hardly will be through the instrumentality of the speech delivered Monday by Chancellor Hitler. In manner of delivery and in text the oratorical effort was one calculated not to conciliate differences with democracies but to incite the passions and bolster the confidence of the German people. The British government . . . said that if Czechoslovakia is attacked France will undertake to defend that country aided by Britain and Russia. Under the circumstances it was probably the only reply.

800,000 Rail Workers Call Strike

in 1937 was $1,115, or about $93 per month, including regular employes as well as the irregular employes. While the average for those employed throughout the year was $1,785, or a little under $150 per month, the average of the 822,000 irregular employes was only $367 for the whole year, or $30 per month, he said.

Harrison said that in contrast railroad profits since 1920 "have amounted to $16,500,000,000, or approximately $917,000,000 per year."

He declared a cut in rail wages "would be the signal for cuts in other industries and would strike at the foundation of our modern economic and industrial structure."

["The strike vote announced today was a vote for a paper strike to produce an emergency board and was not a vote for a real strike," Enochs stated later, the Associated Press said.

["Our employes are just making faces at us. Peculiarly enough, the law practically compels railroad employes to make these faces in order to bring into operation the final methods of settling disputes as provided in the railway labor act."

[Contending the organized employes' new move was only "strategie," Enochs said the representatives of the management would appear before President Roosevelt's commission "with evidence so strong that the railways' opposition cannot be challenged—that a reduction in the present level of railway wages is justified, necessary and inevitable in the public interest."—Editor's note.]

Japanese Cross Yellow River; Raid Hankow Airport

Shanghai, Sept. 26 (AP).—Japanese forces were reported to have crossed the Yellow River today in southeastern Shansi Province to overcome a major barrier in their drive toward Hankow, China's military capital, 300 miles to the south.

Advices from the Loshan sector said the Japanese gained ground in a drive on Sinyan, 100 miles north of Hankow on the Peiping-Hankow railway.

Japanese air raids on the Hankow airdrome, resulting in destruction of 12 Chinese planes on the ground, and on Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow Province, were reported.

(Continued bombings in south China were reported from Canton where Chinese sources estimated civilian casualties at 1,000 in the past 10 days.

The ADA Program

A number of questions are left unanswered by the Alley Dwelling Authority's application for a loan of $10,614,021 from the United States Housing Authority to develop five slum replacement projects. Tentative plans suggest, however, that the ADA intends to carry out its extended program along the same lines that it has followed in the past.

Assurance is given that construction costs will be kept "far below the legal maxima" prescribed in the USHA act. Precise estimates as to costs could not be expected in advance of the purchase of sites on which these projects will be built. Of course, the ADA cannot acquire the proposed sites until its tentative plans have been approved and a loan has been made.

There is ground for satisfaction in the fact that the ADA continues to favor relatively small projects that can be developed and maintained with a minimum of expense. The suggestion that two large projects be built on vacant land was properly rejected. The task of the ADA is to reclaim Washington's slums. That job can be most effectively done by using slum sites that are suitable for redevelopment in the planning of new low-cost housing. Two of the sites chosen for early consideration are vacant land, but these will provide dwellings to take the place of slums demolished in commercial and industrial areas.

The ADA has not been able to comply with some of the requests of the USHA. For example, it was not able to supply a map of the District showing each parcel of land and its value. Such a map would be very costly and would require months for completion. If the ADA has made similar requests of other local authorities, recent complaints about excessive research requirements can be easily understood. Undoubtedly such a map would be valuable to both the local and Federal agencies. But it is to be hoped that the USHA will not hold up the proposed loan to the District authority until such nonessential details can be supplied.

The most important issue left unsettled by the ADA application is that of subsidies for the local projects. Since the ADA has asked for 100 per cent loans, the presumption is that it is willing to forgo capital grants and annual rental subsidies. Under the law loans must be held to 90 per cent when either type of subsidy is granted. But the District has no means of supplying the 10 per cent capital investment in slum clearance projects required by the USHA in the case of subsidized projects. A special act of Congress would be necessary to provide such a fund. To insist upon a local contribution that would make annual rental subsidies available, therefore, would mean long delay in the local program.

Adjustments will certainly be necessary to accomplish the mutual objective of the Federal and local agencies. It may be a severe test of the flexibility of the Federal statute. If the desire to co-operate prevails, however, the work of demolishing Washington's disgraceful slums should be speedily expanded into a major endeavor.

School Survey

In the light of past performance there is something pathetic about the request of the Board of Education for an immediate inspection of old school buildings in the District to safeguard children from possible injury. Just 32 years ago there was similar anxiety over the safety of school children. Congress set up a Schoolhouse Commission to make a careful survey of the city's need of educational accommodations. Some of the schools that commission condemned are still in use.

Each year the Board of Education makes a detailed report showing the District's shortage of suitable schoolrooms. Its latest report, made during the last school year, shows an accumulated need for 174 additional classrooms for elementary school children. Fifty-six rooms were still needed to replace schools condemned by the 1906 commission. Four were needed to take the place of portable buildings, 66 to reduce over-sized classes.

The deficiencies of the junior high schools are indicated by the fact that a plant with a capacity for 16,705 pupils last year had to accommodate more than 19,000. The capacity of the senior high schools was 15,000. More than 16,400 were enrolled.

To call for a new survey in the face of this long record of neglect seems to offer little hope of improvement. Yet the Board of Education seems to have no alternative. Its careful planning on a five-year basis has been ignored. Year after year Congress has kept the schools on a subsistence level. When pupils are buried under an avalanche of falling plaster temporary repairs are made and the schools must continue to use decrepit buildings and undesirable rooms.

What is needed is not merely an inspection of imminent danger points in antiquated schools, but a comprehensive study of the whole situation by legislators who control Washington's purse strings. Such an investigation might well be one of the first projects to be undertaken by the prospective new chairman of the House District Committee.

On The Brink

The obscurity and uncertainty of the past ten days has now been greatly clarified. Dissipation of the fog of surmise shows war to be far closer than many had thought and all had hoped. But it also enables the countries which are neutral in the present crisis, among which the United States is numbered, to make a fair analysis of the conflicting arguments before the first shell is fired or the first bomb dropped

The essential issue is the question of why the situation has grown infinitely worse, instead of better, in the brief period since last Wednesday. It was then that the Czech government, under British and French pressure, agreed to cede to Germany certain border districts which gave heavy majorities for the Nazi program in the municipal elections held four months ago. This was a far greater concession to Hitler, and a far greater humiliation of Czechoslovakia, than had been anticipated. Why, then, has it proved so unsatisfactory from the German viewpoint?

The answer was provided by the Fuehrer himself, in the slashing indictment of President Benes which he delivered in Berlin yesterday. The words Hitler used, and the way he used them, spoke volumes as to the underlying Nazi purpose. A chief of state does not demand the abdication of the democratically elected head of another government unless the purpose is to reduce that government to vassalage.

As acute observers will have noted, the attitude taken by Hitler toward Benes is identical with that of the Japanese militarists toward Chiang Kai-shek. If the latter will make way for a Chinese leader subservient to Japan, Tokyo will consider making peace. Similarly, if Benes goes and the Czechs choose a pro-Nazi president then Hitler will let Czechoslovakia, minus most of its wealthiest territory, remain on the map. The technique is identical. In both cases surrender to it would be suicidal.

In all of Hitler's furious oratory there was no indication that he really wants a reasonable settlement. There was no mention of the tremendous sacrifices which the Czech government has offered to make; there was no appreciation of the economic dislocation, the unemployment, the loss of morale and public disaffection which Czechoslovakia has voluntarily offered to endure in order to preserve the peace of Europe. There was no attempt to make the Czech concessions workable. Instead, Hitler talks to these people as though they had already been conquered on the field of battle. The one justification for his slurring remarks about President Benes would be docile acceptance by the latter of the Nazi ultimatum.

With the best will in the world it is now difficult to believe that Hitler will agree to a settlement of the Sudeten controversy which would continue Czechoslovakia as a sovereign state. It is apparent that the Czech government was fully justified in saying, in its official broadcast Sunday night, that the German tactics are "immediately increasing demands whenever a concession is made." And the evidence to this effect goes far to nullify Hitler's assurance that after Czechoslovakia he has no territorial ambitions. If that assertion enables him to isolate the Czechs today it will have served its purpose.

The world knows Hitler now for the ruthless, fanatical, uncompromising menace which he is. And, with a determination which the horror of the situation cannot conceal, the civilized nations are buckling on their armor to confront this menace. The British, French and Russian attitudes are stiffening. These nations are preparing to enter a possibly inevitable conflict the more resolutely because Hitler makes it so clear that there may be no alternative. The British premier, in particular, has done all that is humanly possible to avert a war. No man can have a conscience more clear than Neville Chamberlain if it falls to his lot to pick up the German gauntlet.

For the moment, though probably only for the moment, the United States is not vitally concerned. If Hitler gives the order for invasion the United States will at the outset be only morally involved. President Roosevelt, in his eloquent and helpful appeal sent early yesterday morning to both the German Chancellor and the Czech President, emphasized the political detachment of this country in the immediate controversy. Certainly there is no disposition here to take sides unless and until it appears that the real issues are of far greater concern to us than the sovereignty of territory in Bohemia.

But there are many indications that this talking point is by no means the primary issue. There are many indications that if the storm breaks it will not and cannot be a localized affair. It is to be hoped that the leader of the mighty German nation realizes this fact. He has done wonders to rebuild the power, the pride and the confidence of his people. He does not need to tell his world-wide audience that he is no coward.

The assurance the world wants, and for which we look in vain through Hitler's speech of yesterday, is that he will take no step which will, in the long run, force the embattled hostility of all the democracies and leave his country far more shattered than it was by the now discredited Treaty of Versailles.

Self-Help For Railways

The rail unions have voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike against the announced October 1 wage reductions. It is expected that President Roosevelt will at once appoint a fact-finding committee to hold hearings on the wage proposals and state its findings within a 30-day period. The chances of a stoppage actually occurring seem very remote.

In voting to strike, the unions are merely following the routine procedure laid down in the railway labor act for securing further consideration of the issues in dispute after the railway executives and their employes have reached an impasse. Under the terms of the railway labor act a delay of at least 60 days is assured before a strike vote can become effective. The controversy over the proposed wage reductions will doubtless be settled according to the usual methods.

With the wage dispute out of the way, the joint management and labor committee recently appointed by the President will be in a position to discuss comprehensive plans for the rehabilitation of the roads. The situation is extremely critical. If the railroads are to be saved from a type of regulation that would either deprive them of the right to exercise managerial discretion or establish outright Government ownership, it is essential for management and labor to demonstrate a capacity for solving their mutual problems.

Labor leaders, as well as executives, are undoubtedly fully aware that the roads face a serious crisis, the solution of which will require sacrifices from all interests. The important question is whether the solution will be reached through voluntary agreement or imposed by the Government.

Proposals for large-scale consolidation of the roads, for example, offer possibilities of substantial savings in operating expenses and gains in efficiency. Compulsory consolidation under Government direction has not proved feasible, and the ICC has asked to be relieved of the responsibility for formulating consolidation plans. With about one-third of the country's railway mileage already in the hands of receivers and the threat of bankruptcy hanging over other roads, executive heads are probably more disposed at present to consider merger plans than at any previous time.

Leaders of the unions are also fully aware that bankrupt roads mean steadily decreasing employment for workers. While consolidations would permanently reduce the number of employes, plans for mitigating the hardships of enforced dismissal under such circumstances could be formulated in conference.

Effective regulation of transportation agencies competing with the railways would have to be assured to achieve adequate and lasting benefits from a program of self-help. A joint carrier-labor conference would be in a much stronger position to insist upon such a co-ordinated transportation policy if it came forward with a voluntary plan for achieving economies in operation and in overhead charges.

Obviously, in a period of business depression, it is extremely difficult to estimate the effects of an immediate reform program upon the future earnings of the roads. But it is at times such as the present that the pressure of financial necessity makes the chances for uncoerced, essential adjustments exceptionally good. With the dispute over wages out of the way, the railway executives and the union leaders will be given an excellent opportunity to show whether they are capable of solving their joint problems through their own initiative. If they fail to do so, there is danger that the next Congress may further limit the restricted control which private managements are now able to exercise over the country's railroads.

A statistician declares that six times as many men as women stutter. The explanation for the wide difference lies in the fact that men form the habit of stuttering in trying to break into women's conversations.

"A Massachusetts baby born recently whistled before he was a day old."—Press report. It must have been surprise; it couldn't have been optimism.

The Limit Of His Patience

The European Crisis

A Fading Civilization

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorials on European affairs have the punch.

It is impossible to obscure the tarnished glory of our fading civilization. The door to the Chamber of Horrors is open again. The tutelage of ancient hatreds and animosities is in full flower. The orator, each for his own breed of nationalistic ideas, explains why his own people have less of the skunk odor than others about him—all of which is faithfully recorded by the printing presses.

The infant political economists of Russia, with their lollypop ideas of government, are present. The subtle 50-50 haphazard and heroically minded French are present—with the disease of victory. The blustering, good old Rule Simple plan, that they shall take who have the power and they shall keep who can—British—are present. The eternal Blut und Eisen, Schlagers—the infallible, invincible, self-exalted, self-righteous Germans—are present. The descendants of Remus and Romulus, who laid the world low with fire and sword, are present. The hidden, submerged minorities with and without flags and countries, seeking to play both ends against the middle, are also present.

Fortunately, we North and South Americans, dunces and prize saps, at the last convention 20 years ago, have not yet gone through the door.

May the Almighty give us the common sense to keep out of the pesthouse this time. A. G. L.

Home To Roost

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The two-faced, double-dealing of a pre-war Wilson and his post-war dumbness—the super-idealism of a Hughes coupled with the ignorance of a Presidential poker-player—the screams of isolation that emanated from the Lodge-Johnson combination of professional politicians—the supineness and lack of leadership of a Presidential boot-strap engineer who accomplishes the unbelievable calisthenic feat of balding both ears to the ground no matter what else he was doing—all these are chickens that are about ready to come home to roost.

Look backward three days, or three months, or three years, or three decades, and you will find that American leadership and unadulterated cowardice are one and the same—democracy can not long survive undisputed spread of this disease. The sinking of an ambassador mean nothing to the heads of two governments who hold unquestioned supremacy on the seas and can put 10,000,000 men under their colors. Such incidents as these are taken with a silly smile and another wisecrack while tyranny and banditry march wildly on. Neither does the murder of a million nationals in a friendly country, nor the rape and complete annihilation of still another country, mean anything to these vote-getters whose more serious moments are given to purges and bridge-promising and fishing from battleships.

Democracy has a death rattle in its throat. Soft living and the fury of getting have brought it to its last bed. These things and its denial of its brother will bring its early death. I shall neither pick flowers nor shed tears. For a hundred years it has been nought, but some sort of a monument to some sort of jackassery. No Freedom's Eagle will scream when it falls. A pest on it. Let it go. P. H. R.

Last-Minute Suggestion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a last-minute suggestion (if it becomes necessary to avert the ruin of civilization by another World War), I propose that the nations which awarded the minority sections to Czechoslovakia should be allowed to buy them back. A fair price would "save the face" of Czechoslovakia and the disputed areas could then be turned over as gifts, the Sudetenland to the Reich, Teschen Silesia to Poland and the Magyar territories to Hungary.

These hundreds of millions of dollars should be raised by international subscription under the supervision of a joint commission made up of the prime ministers of all the countries in the world, including that of Germany.

MRS. L. H. JONES.

Various Outrages

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letters you publish from your readers concerning the European crisis are very interesting. Some of them show good reasoning, others prejudice and many are just plain dumb. I hope you will publish my letter.

I fail to see any humiliation on the part of Great Britain or anyone else in trying to arrive at a peaceful solution of a disagreement. It seems that the recent seizure of American and British property by the Mexican government was not considered humiliating, not to mention the advice given the British minister on his departure from Mexico City to the effect that England, itself, pay some outstanding debts.

Instead of being annoyed concerning the solution of European questions, about which we know relatively very little, might it not be well for many Americans with British sympathies to consider what Britain and our own country should do to remedy an injustice committed right on our own continent? If they consider the changing of border lines between European peoples an outrage what do they think of the seizure of legitimate property and investments of the citizens of one nation by the government of another? A Nazi Viewpoint

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a burning shame that this country should be flooded with propaganda through the British-controlled press in favor of the old buzzard who flew to Berchtesgaden on a mission of perfidy. And, I may add, in favor of the nest of pirates from which he originated.

I am surprised Britain is not at war. It should have started a week ago. One cannot but remark on the amazing patience of the German government. It should have kicked Chamberlain out in the first instance; Hitler should never have met him; and a further reply should have been sent in a bombardment of London, with every airship at the command of the German government. It should have been made unsafe for the old buzzard even to alight back in London.

Why is Chamberlain sparring for time? He is ready. Britain has been ready for five years. It is to give time for the villainous and vilifying British propaganda to get in its work in the British-controlled press throughout the United States. To try to get a favorable commitment by this Government. That is all they are waiting for. The second British-concocted "world war" for the destruction of Germany would have been already launched had it not been for a suddenly developed uncertainty about the United States, which Britain for some reason thought was "in the bag." Therefore, in such circumstances patience is hardly a virtue on the part of Germany.

The press of the United States is the one loophole the Government has failed to stop in all its efforts to avoid entanglement by Britain in British world empire schemes.

It is within the power of the Government to control the press as to international, which is to say, British affairs. The Government should act at once to control the press before the situation gets out of hand.

CARL A. NEIBLING,
President, German League of the United States.

Mentalities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your issue of September 23 contains a statement which is typical of the difference between the mentality of Germans and of other nationalities. Dr. Lang said: "In addition to the 3,500,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia, the Reich needs the territory and raw materials of Bohemia." What should we say if the Japanese said that they needed the territory and raw materials of the Philippines or the Pacific Coast?

A parallel case may be quoted from 20 years ago. When the Germans, at Ludendorf's insistence, requested an admistice Hindenburg wished to stipulate that the Germans should retain the Briey Basin, which is the district of France richest in metallic ores. Is it conceivable that any victorious nation would consent to an armistice which would entail the surrender of part of its territory? But evidently Hindenburg thought there was nothing unusual in the demands.

ALEXANDRE D'HERICOT.

Washington, Sept. 24.

Ordained

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post and all other papers are carrying editorials upon the great present world crisis. I read them all. Yet not one, it seems to me, can see the hand of the great and mighty God in the present crisis. He who created heaven and earth saw it even in the beginning of time. The major and minor prophets all saw it coming. Yet even today our leaders are blind to the great purpose of Almighty God for man and the world at large.

The Mighty God took a hand in ancient wars. When He blew, Rome's great armada was scattered and destroyed. Again in 1815, when Napoleon was at it with England, the day and night before the great battle of Waterloo, rains in torrents came down from heaven, weakening a small wooden bridge over a ravine. And lo, Napoleon's great legions were doomed.

And now the world is again faced with the greatest demon of them all, Hitler. He also will just as surely go down to defeat, with his and Germany's doom. It is so ordained. JOSEPH WHITEHOUSE.

Washington, Sept. 26.

German Sacrifice

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Thomas Mann's article in The Post of September 18 forces one to review whole epochs of history and human achievement. To the unwary he may be misleading.

He states that the Germans sacrifice too much to their leaders. Yet, in spite of all their sacrifices, the Germans have given more men of worth to the world than any of the nations, which Mr. Mann infers do not make such sacrifices. In music to what nation shall we go to find a man comparable to Beethoven or Wagner? In philosophy what nation has produced a greater man than Kant? In poetry who has surpassed Goethe or Schiller? Who liberated a Christian people from an impossible condition and thereby led the way for others? Was it not Luther?

What would Mr. Mann have us believe? Does he not realize that war has been developed side by side with every other human endeavor?

The British Empire owes its vastness of wealth and territory in great measure to conquest. It was perfectly ethical for Italy to conquer Ethiopia, for Japan to invade China, and the war in Spain is a perfectly legitimate thing.

I do not wish to contradict Mr. Mann. The Germans make great sacrifices for their leaders. But so do the English, so do the French, so do the Chinese, and so do the Americans.

Sea Blood

YOUNG Jared Bowen devoured all the storm news from Cape Cod down to New London, because that is his own country. His great-grandfather, several times removed, was lost with his boat off Nantucket in such a storm as this along with his crew, all of the Bowen blood. And the old burying-ground in New London is filled with stones bearing the names of his people.

Furthermore, Jared is going to see the big whale that is soon to be shown here. To be sure, the creature is no longer alive, but an embalmed whale is better than no whale at all, because the salt water in Jared's blood is beginning to make itself felt. But this whale will not make him see what an earlier Jared Bowen saw in the year of our Lord, 1819, off Cape Cod.

In 1819 the first Jared Bowen was 14 years old and lived on a farm in the Connecticut valley, where his father had settled about 20 years before. Jared's father had been the first to break away from the sea; so that the boy, for all his salty heritage, had never seen the ocean. Yet an ataristic memory told him exactly what it would be like, and nothing the sea could do would ever surprise him.

When Jared (the first) was 12, his health began to worry his parents. Perhaps they feared consumption, that scourge of early New England. I never knew the exact details, but they hurried to send him down to the Cape to visit his uncle, who had become chief of the large clan of Bowens since the old captain's boat had been lost and all hands gone down with it. All the clan were fishermen. If there had been a coat-of-arms in the family, it should have contained at least one codfish rampant.

It was to this heaven (in the mind of a farm boy) that Jared was going in the year 1819. His mother packed his carpetbag, kissed him, and he started off as bravely to see the world as farm boys have always done. He was "so green that it is a wonder the cows didn't eat him." His means of travel was, of course, the coach which traveled toward Boston down the River Road. He visited members of the clan in Boston, and in time arrived at his uncle's home, down on the Cape.

I wish that he had kept a diary. Some of his papers were preserved, but no written record of that year. I should like to read the impressions made on his vigorous young mind by this life so different from living on a farm, and yet a life for which every fibre of his being was prepared. That he described his adventures vividly is proved by the fact that (more than a century afterwards) his descendants still speak about what "Jared saw the year he went to the Cape."

Jared saw the monster, Leviathan, and he saw the now historic clipper ships.

He was out in the fishing boat when he saw the whale. The skipper sighted it first, but it was soon near enough for all hands to see. Jared was likely to die with sheer excitement. When the beast, about which he had read in the scriptures, appeared, more wonderful than he had ever dreamed, life could offer no bigger thrill! "There she blows," the skipper called. Jared hung on the rail, his eyes bulging with excitement like the eyes of the sacred cod. He wanted to get nearer. Why didn't his uncle sail close? Finally he could hold in no longer. His uncle gave another order; why, they were moving away!

"Uncle," he cried. "Let's go closer, oh do!"

Uncle was supposed to be a good and a mild man as Yankee skippers went in those days. But Jared never forgot the wrath that came down on his young head.

"You young fool! Don't you know this is no whaling boat? One flop of that tail and we'll go to the bottom." The whale came no nearer; the danger was over. A ration of New England rum-and-molasses was handed out all around, the kind of grog known on ships from Maine to Hong Kong. Jared was humbled but not daunted. Some day he would be skipper, and then let whales beware!

Later he saw the clipper ship. The fishing boats had run into dull weather, and were scarcely moving when the beautiful thing came in sight. Her sails were spread to catch the least breath of wind. The fishing boats were, compared to her, as plough horses to a thoroughbred. As the clipper came on, she tacked toward the fishermen. Jared could see the sailors on her decks, all waving and shouting. They were a different looking crowd from the fishermen. Some were dark, foreign-looking men with rings in their ears, and bright scarves knotted around their throats. One, a gypsy-looking fellow, reached in a basket, and when he came even with Jared, he tossed something round and gold-colored. Jared learned later that it was called an orange.

The others on the clipper began to pelt oranges at the fishermen. When the fun was over, there were oranges enough for everyone to taste the fruit. Unless you could become a boy like Jared who had never tasted an orange, you could not hope to understand the exotic pleasure of the moment.

So Jared went back to the farm, and he never returned to Cape Cod again. But when the wind rippled over the timothy-grass in the meadow he could half-close his eyes, see the waves and the whale and the clipper ships, and at such times he could almost taste the salty spray on his lips and savor the juice of the oranges.

Finally Wins Letter

GRATIFYING A long-suppressed desire to use the word "apocryphal," I related recently a folktale of journalism in St. Louis about an editor who unaccountably misjudged the importance of the bulletin on the sinking of the battleship Maine, stuffed the story away deep inside the paper and, like a religious penitent, retired to a proofreader's cell for the rest of his professional life.

The late Otto Floto, of the Denver Post, often would write a long story just to work up to the point of using a double-dome word, and newspapermen within his radius enjoyed reading to him as he circled, feinted and moved in for the kill which usually occurred in the last paragraph but one. His method was ceremonious, like that of a bullfight. His colleagues enjoyed reading the old master's preliminary cape work, and when at last he would come out with hedonistic, irrefragible or cacophany they would throw down the paper and not bother to give attention while the attendants dragged off the still-warm carcass of the vanquished hero.

I didn't really think my story was apocryphal, for it used to be told familiarly by many of the veterans around the old St. Louis Press Club, but I knew there never would come a better chance to use that word, and after all these years in the business I did want to win my letter.

• • • •

AND NOW COMES a note from Robert Hammond Murray indicating that this tragic error occurred twice on the same night. Mr. Murray relates that an editor of the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle also put the sinking of the Maine inside the paper.

"Our paper received the Sun or Laffan wire service, which this man loved as much as he despised the A. P.," says Mr. Murray. "Along about 8 p. m. my friend would get his schedule from Laffan, lay out his first page, pretty like and typographically balanced to a T. And after that nothing but the assassination of McKinley or Queen Victoria could make him change it. Well, this night I was on the long watch and my friend was reading his book and waiting for "30."

"He erupted and I drifted over to a "KY" why. He shoved over the A. P. bulletin, under a Washington date. The Laffan wire was still open, so he pushed open the slide of the window that gave into the operator's coop and said, 'Ask 'em if they've got anything about this.'

" 'Not a word, they say,' reported the man on the Laffan wire.

"My friend swore horribly and said that if he were the boss of the Associated Press he would fire the man who sent that bulletin first thing tomorrow. I said there might be something in it, as the A. P. usually didn't go off half-cocked, but he wagged his head and was still cursing when both wires gave good night.

"Bill Lyddon, the foreman, waddled in from the composing room and asked, 'Shall I close her up?' My friend scrawled a one-line head on the bulletin and said, 'Jam this in on number 2 or 3 if you can find room,' dumped his pipe, reached for his hat and called it a day.

"Unfortunately, our opposition, the Herald, bannered the bulletin that morning. My friend reported for duty at 7 p. m. hext night as usual and approximately 2 minutes and 36 seconds later he severed his connection with the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle."

THIS TREATMENT represents one school of thought in the handling of news. Exactly contrary was the attitude of an editor of a German daily, a client of the old United News. The German paper received only the high spots and those by telephone. One night there came a flash reporting the death of President Harding, or a story of similar international importance, and Mr. Al Greene, the night chief operator of the United News, grabbed a phone and with fine dramatic power yelled, "Flash! President Harding dead."

"Oh, neffer mind," said the German editor. "We got enough news. We don't need no more news tonight."

Extra! World Crisis Settled!

All issues, crises and major problems of living, it would appear, have been swept aside in American public interest by the news that Bette Davis has been chosen to play Scarlett O'Hara in the movie version of "Gone With the Wind."

• • • •

Opinions From Americans

President Roosevelt.—I am glad that this grave problem, which has so long affected the happiness and peace of this country, has been settled at last and I believe further bloodshed has been avoided. My administration has been behind Bette from the start and only the Tories and foes of progress wanted anybody else.

Gen. Pershing.—This was no time for another war. Other selections might have been made, but the Army, Navy and air forces are not yet up to the strength requirad to enforce them.

Nicholas Murray Butler.—Bette is all right with me. I knew her father, Jeff Davis.

Mayor LaGuardia.—You know how I have stood from the very first through this great battle. Rosa Ponselle was always my choice. I shall not, however, encourage the farmers of this country to revolt.

Alf Landon.—I am glad that the crisis has passed without a sectional issue. The important thing in all matters of this kind is to keep America united.

"Speaking Of Betrayals"

The Public Viewpoint

Readers Favor Strong Foreign Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept the congratulations upon your excellent editorial—"Speaking of Betrayals"—of one who always hopes to see his beloved country occupy an honorable place in the company of nations.

It is only in an "uncontrolled democracy," such as ours has come to be—where ignorant, uninformed and noisy minorities influence scatterbrained "legislators"—that so shameful a record of betrayals can be written.

If your editorial can have the wide circulation which its excellence deserves, it should have a very salutary effect upon our scatter-brained "legislators." It is useless to hope that anything could have an effect upon our ignorant, uninformed and noisy minorities!

HARRY FRANCIS CUNNINGHAM.
Washington, Sept. 24.

"Afraid Of His Shadow"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I find great satisfaction in your September 24 editorial "Speaking of Betrayals" as expressing fully what has long been in my mind concerning our behavior as a Nation since the World War. We went into it belatedly with a great to do about saving the world for democracy, but quit cold right where we should have begun, at Geneva with the League of Nations, exhibiting ourselves as a giant afraid of his shadow.

Worse than that, when we got back to our own barnyard, we slammed the gate in the face of our former allies and the rest of the world with the Smoot-Hawley tariff, barring our debtors from repayment of loans largely spent here at exorbitant profit. For that we are paying a price, but who at a future time may calculate the price to ourselves and the rest of the world of the full measure of our folly?

WALTER N. CAMPBELL.
Washington, Sept. 24.

No Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of September 24 agrees with my view of things and when I was in Berlin I wrote many reports and recommendations as to our attitude toward Hitler which were almost the same as suggested in your editorial. I am making addresses in Kansas from September 30 to October 7 in which I shall repeat what I have often said officially and almost the same as you have said today.

If our country had co-operated with democratic countries after the Great War there would have been no Hitler regime in Germany. There would have been a real democracy. I can't help feeling that it is a shame, after we had fought a year and a half and spent $26,000,000,000 and loaned $11,000,000,000, to have behaved as we did from 1919 to 1930. Our civilization would not have been in danger if we had not allowed a minority of the Senate to undo what both Democrats and Republicans had worked for 20 years to attain.

WILLIAM E. DODD.

Helped The Dictators

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to commend your editorial of September 24, "Speaking of Betrayals." Many persons, even some of the best of us, are more anxious to be flattered than to know the facts, but at the same time the facts should be kept in view. They may have a bitter taste to folk with weak stomachs, but even so, let us have them, all the more so because they constitute a dose of our own mixing.

Your editorial is not only true to fact and effective in statement, it is also appropriate to this moment, not only because of the crisis before us, but also because many of our citizens who are now voters (and shouters) are not old enough to remember the agony, the ignorance, the follies, and the pusillanimity of 18 years ago.

Our valorous sons gave their lives, our devoted mothers, sisters and sweethearts laid their sacrifices on the altar, to make the world safe—safe not merely for democracy, but safe for life, property and everything that is dear to humanity. Then our politicians and our voters threw away what had been purchased at such terrible cost. We said, "It must not happen again!" and then we (the majority of us) proceeded to do just about everything we could do to make it happen again.

Nothing in the world, nothing in human history, is plainer than the fact that a law without a penalty is null, that a world without an adequate police force is bound to be disturbed by lawbreakers. We have laws with penalties and an adequate police force supporting the laws and the courts of justice in every city, every State, every country, but we have none of them, we would have none of them, for the world! Now we belittle the League of Nations; now we stand at what we vainly imagine is a safe distance and say mean things about Britain and France because they are trying to prevent another world war.

Better let an unnatural political fabric, hastily patched together in 1919, fall apart rather than set the world on fire again. The Czechs have a chance to do an honorable and magnanimous thing by making peaceable sacrifices for the sake of their neighbors, intsead of forcing their neighbors to fight for them. This is not said to commend the ambitions of grasping dictators. But we (the people of the United States) must shoulder much of the responsibility for these unscrupulous dictators and robbers of neighbors. We have given them more than one example of the same thing ourselves, and we have persistently given them opportunity and encouragement. JOHN W. WAYLAND.
Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 24.

Protests War Spirit

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recent editorials in The Post regarding the alleged cowardly and disgraceful conduct of our Government, past and present, during the delicate war situation, accompanied as they were on the editorial page of September 24 by several bellicose communications of like stripe, invite mild protest.

The average native-born American may well wonder if the generally regarded crazy censorship, like that exercised in Germany, Italy and Russia, is in perfect accord with the constitutional privilege given free speech and a free press, but not as now exercised by irresponsibles or as intended by the framers of our Bill of Rights.

Those responsible for our last war, few of whom fought in the battles or trenches—and their imitators—should restrain their scorn for this, their native or adopted country, during perilous days, when good citizens generally are seeking not to embarrass responsible Government officials in handling the Ship of State.

Endeavors to keep out of war require infinitely more courage when opposing war and its mob-stirring enthusiasm, than recklessly to join in an irresponsible chorus for war.

If this communication goes into the wastebasket and is of no persuasive value to the heavy worldly wise writers on The Post editorial staff, so be it. But it voices a sentiment shared by others. One willing to take up arms against any threatened invasion but opposed to mixing into the centuries-old European and Asiatic quarrels, believes the responsibility of the press in this hour of world distress requires some measure of restraint with men who write bravely from their bomb-proof protection, but are rarely found in war trenches.

Presumably Senate and House committees have members formerly owing allegiance to the different European countries now threatened with war, down even to the proposed new Rules Committee chairman, once from Czechoslovakia, the center of the present controversy. But here in the melting pot of the world, fortunate above all others, we constantly find those unacquainted with burnt fingers, now bravely challenging fire blazing thousands of miles away.

Where and when the urge is so strong for war with writers and speakers opportunity to volunteer with Americans now in Spain and China or elsewhere is open, few of the 2,000,000 men we sent over before who were in trenches will be of that number, voluntarily. Would it not be well for The Post to ask for a holiday or an "armistice" among the stay-at-home fighters until the next European war is over or ask them to follow real leaders now serving in foreign trenches.

PROTESTER.
Washington, Sept. 24.

Colossal Blunder

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For your editorial, "Speaking of Betrayals," which appeared in your issue of September 24, you should have the gratitude of the world. It reveals your clairvoyance, your courage, your ability to educate. Because of it, some ignorant subscribers may stop your paper. The intelligent will thank you for being their mouthpiece.

You held a mirror up to us and forced us to see our ugly features—selfishness, narrow-mindedness, stupidity, pusillanimity. Ever since we refused to become a member of the League of Nations we have deserved this picture. Had we been a consistent member of that body, along with other democracies, the mad dog of Europe would never have set out to run amuck, vast sums would never have been deflected from industry to armaments, and the world would never have been wobbling on the point of a needle. Our record is one of the colossal blunders of the ages.

M. S. SIGGERS.

Truth About America

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a word to express my admiration of your editorials this week—their calmness and moderation as well as their strength, and, especially, the courageous way in which you have told your fellow-countrymen the truth about themselves.

M. W.
Washington, Sept. 24.

Support Democracies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Speaking of Betrayals," in The Post of September 24, surpasses anything I have read on the subject. The incontrovertible facts you present show clear thinking and sound reasoning. It should be reprinted throughout the country so that every citizen might read it. This country should at least have guaranteed its moral and economic support to the European democracies and even have warned the dictator nations that it would support the democracies in every possible way short of sending men. This would have had a deterrent effect and probably averted war.

With reference to the long-standing war debts, I was one of those who thought they should have been paid. It looks quite otherwise to me now because if France and Britain had paid they would have had no money to prepare for defense against the pirate nations—besides, had they paid, it would have been billions more for New Deal boondoggling and vote buying.

L. G. HIGGINS.

Stay At Home

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to your editorial, "Speaking of Betrayals":

Specifically, who is denouncing England and France for their efforts in preserving peace in Europe? Not the American people, but the newspapers. These same newspapers would like to be considered the mouthpiece of the American people, however, unsuccessfully.

President Wilson's participation in the drafting of the shameful Versailles Treaty was not at the behest of the American people. Please bear that in mind. And in case you don't know it, the action of Congress in refusing to approve his action was the expression of the American people.

I recall these incidents quite clearly, and no amount of flowery language will change the decisions arrived at then nor give to them a meaning other than was intended, which was and is: To stay at home and mind our own business and not burn our fingers a second time.

Dr. Gallup's poll may be considered, to some extent, an expression of American popular opinion, but not so the newspapers of this country. MRS. T. M. STEININGER.
Washington, Sept. 24.

Realistic Approach

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My heartiest congratulations on your editorial, "Speaking of Betrayals." It is magnificent. I hope you will keep pounding away along this line and throwing out the idea again and again that the Wilson program for peace is the one realistic approach to a solution of the problem. HUSTON THOMPSON.
Washington, Sept. 25.

American Responsibility

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your sound and courageous editorial "Speaking of Betrayals" which appeared on September 24. We need more editors and more citizens with the interest and willingness to be intellectually honest with respect to the responsibility of the United States in the present European crisis. I also appreciate your fairness in presenting the position of the Administration in regard to the situation.

Today And Tomorrow

won a diplomatic victory. To understand why Hitler could not stop when he had won the diplomatic victory of September 21 one must realize that he is not the chief of a normal state, but the leader of a revolutionary movement which has no choice but to advance because it burns all its bridges behind it.

• • • •

THUS HITLER KNOWS that a negotiated settlement with the Czechs has become unworkable and that is why he was compelled to increase his demands the moment Mr. Chamberlain offered him such embarrassing concessions. Hitler knows that a negotiated settlement is unworkable because all responsible Czechs have been convinced that, once they put themselves in his power, they will either be killed or put in a concentration camp and tortured or driven into exile. He has convinced them of that by the merciless way he has dealt with the Austrians. President Benes and the Czech leaders know exactly what happened to Dr. Schuschnigg, to the Austrian monarchists, to Austrians of all shades of opinion. As a result the Czechs are like soldiers who know that they can expect no quarter if they surrender.

Hitler is, therefore, quite right in thinking that he cannot come to terms with the Czechs until he has disarmed them and destroyed their power of resistance. The demonstration of what happens to those who surrender to Hitler has made it impossible for the Czechs to surrender. Realizing this, Hitler on the other hand can be satisfied with nothing less than total surrender. For having turned the Czechs into absolutely desperate men, he has earned their implacable eamity. And an implacable enemy has to be destroyed.

BY THIS MEANS, that is by the policy of utter mercilessness to all opposition, Hitler has burned the bridges behind him which might lead to some negotiated settlement as Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier attempted last week. But why, it may be asked, cannot Hitler still do what the neutral diplomat said he would do, that is stop and draw back at the verge of war?

Perhaps he will still do that. But if he does not draw back, if he goes on to a general war, the determining reason will not be the disorderly condition of the Czech-German frontier, nor the national rights of the Sudeten minority, nor even the pan-German ambition for domination of the Danube Valley. The determining reason will be, strange as it may sound to say so, the same kind of reason which has led to Stalin's destruction of the old Bolshevik leaders in Russia. The Nazi revolution must overrun Europe or cease to be the Nazi revolution. For once a revolutionary movement is unable to feed on success from foreign aggression, it must change its whole internal policy. And when a revolution changes its policy, it changes its men. And the way a revolution changes its men is by exterminating them.

• • • •

HITLER'S SUCCESSES have all been won by overriding the advice of the older leaders of the German nation. At each step—the occupation of the Rhineland, the annexation of Austria, the attack on Czechoslovakia—Hitler has acted against the advice of the army leaders, the professional diplomats, the industrialists and financiers. In each case they were shown to be wrong, and having been wrong, the political power of their opponents of the radical Nazis, has grown.

The Radical Nazis have acted with great arrogance toward the Germans who dared to disagree with them. And these radical Nazis realize quite well that if ever the moment comes when they are weak, they personally are lost. They have burned their bridges in Germany so completely that their only safety is to go on with the effort to crush all opposition at home and abroad.

• • • •

THE GERMAN REVOLUTION has reached a point where it must either conquer Europe or undergo a profound internal purge. When the Russian revolution reached that point, Stalin found that the Communist conquest of Europe was impossible. He had, therefore, to exterminate the Communist leaders in order that Soviet Russia could isolate itself from the foreign entanglements in which all revolutionary movements inexorably engage. The German revolution has now reached a similar phase. It must either attempt to destroy not only Czechoslovakia but every other state in Europe where there are German-speaking communities, or failing that, it must alter its whole internal character. If Hitler cannot go on with triumphant aggression abroad, he must go back to Germany as a second Stalin and liquidate the radical Nazis. If it is not in Hitler's nature to be another Stalin, then the days of his unlimited personal power are numbered.

• • • •

FOR THINGS have come to a point where revolutionary Nazism has provoked a desperate resistance in front of it—and a latent but profoundly dangerous opposition behind it. These are truly days that will long be remembered. For the Nazi revolution has reached a climax where the present leaders must either go to war with Europe or face the loss of all that they are and all that they have. They cannot suddenly make peace with their enemies at home and abroad for they have burned too many bridges behind them. The decisions of the next few days will be taken by these men, realizing that their own personal fortunes and their very lives are at stake.

Margaret Sanger To Speak Oct. 5

A public meeting on birth control with Margaret Sanger, international birth control leader, as principal speaker, will be held October 5 at 8 p. m. at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., it was announced yesterday.

The meeting is sponsored by the Mothers Health Association of the District. Mrs. Prentiss Willson, president of the board of trustees of the association, will preside. Mrs. Donald Roberts, program chairman, is in charge of arrangements for the meeting. Members of the board include Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Fotaine C. Bradley, Mrs. Lewis C. Ecker, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. Milton W. King, Frederick A. Ballard, the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy and George Hewitt.

Mrs. Roosevelt to Talk On Resettlement

Mrs. Roosevelt will address a luncheon of the National Press Club Wednesday, on resettlement.

The President's wife has maintained a keen interest in the projects of the former Resettlement, now Farm Security Administration, and has visited some of these undertakings. Her remarks will be "Off the Record."

Calculations

The advantages of a successful war are doubtful, but the disadvantages of unsuccessful war are certain. If, therefore, the supermen at the head of affairs could foresee who was going to win, there would be no wars. But in fact there are wars, and in every war the government on one side, if not on both, must have miscalculated its chances.

For this there are many reasons: of pride, of vanity, of ignorance, and of contagious excitement. When the populace is kept ignorantly confident, its confidence and its bellicose sentiment may easily be communicated to the rulers, who can hardly attach the same weight to unpleasant facts which they know but conceal as to the pleasant facts that are being proclaimed in every newspaper and in every conversation. Hysteria and megalomania are catching and governments have no immunity.

When war comes the policy of concealment may produce effects exactly opposite to those intended. Some, at least of the unpleasant facts which had been kept dark are likely to become patent to all, and the more men have been made to live in a fool's paradise, the more they will be horrified and discouraged by the reality.

Europe Offers Good Lesson

By Mark Sullivan

Hitler Uses Force

THE LESSONS THAT EUROPE today provides for America are very many. Not all the lessons for us have to do with international relations. Some are domestic. One lesson, if we see it and abide by it, may save us from a dangerous domestic situation recently emerging.

Hitler saw considerable numbers of the German race embraced in countries other than Germany. They were in Czechoslovakia, in Austria, in other countries. Hitler considered that they should be brought back within the German nation, by rearrangement of boundaries. Many others, in Germany and elsewhere, thought the same.

Some wished to bring about the rearrangement of boundaries by peaceful means—by argument, by negotiation, by appeal to neutral tribunals, by treaty. Not so Hitler. Hitler thought the way to do it was by force. He jeered at proposals for peaceful procedure. In his book, "Mein Kampf," he railed against peaceful methods:

"It must be thoroughly understood that the lost lands never will be won back by solemn appeals to the good God, nor by pious hopes in any League of Nations, but only by force of arms. The disgraceful part of it all is that the talkers themselves . . . know very well how harmless and hopeless their pottering ways are."

• • • •

SO, HITLER USES FORCE, and the threat of more force. And because Hitler uses force the world is faced by the present problem. Whenever in any controversy one side takes up force, the other side has two choices. It can cling to the principle of peaceful negotiation, in which case too often it loses. Or it can itself use force. When in any controversy side A is willing to practice ruthlessness, it has an overwhelming advantage unless side B is willing to use whatever ruthlessness is necessary successfully to resist the ruthlessness of side A. That is the dilemma that today faces Czechoslovakia, Britain and France.

Now for the domestic application of this rule about the use of force. The organization known as the Committee for Industrial Organization, in some of its controversies, uses force. The form of force it uses is the sit-down strike. True, the sit-down strike is a special type of force. It is the force of inertia. It may be called static force.

But once static force is used, the rule begins to operate. The other side, including the general public, unless it is willing to give up, must use whatever kind and degree of force may be necessary to overcome the static force of the sit-down strike. If this happens, the ensuing developments are not pleasant to contemplate. We have had this situation before us for some two years. It is ominous and it should be averted.

• • • •

THE SIT-DOWN USE OF FORCE is illegal. Because it is illegal it should be suppressed by the official agencies charged with preserving law and order. The sit-down strike ought not to present any problem more serious than any other illegal act done by a group. But in some States the official agencies of law and order do not suppress the sit-down strike. On the contrary, some Governors of States seem to condone it. There is a widespread suspicion that within the Federal Government some individuals and agencies condone the sit-down strike; certainly they do not take action against it.

• • • •

IN AMERICA, in connection with sit-down strikes, we have already had some examples of counterforce. In Pennsylvania a posse of farmers drove sit-down strikers from the Hershey chocolate plant. In some Michigan towns posses that were partly official and partly vigilante in nature broke up C. I. O. strikes. In Jersey City, Mayor Hague, seeing what had happened elsewhere, used force to prevent C. I. O. organizers and groups from entering the city. These manifestations of counterforce are regretfable. But they are inevitable once the initial use of force takes place.

There are or should be peaceful ways of settling every controversy in America. If there is any lack of a peaceful method for settling labor disputes, then a peaceful method should be set up. And the government, both that in Washington and that in the States, should make clear that it does not condone the sit-down type of strike.

Gauntlets Down

By Barnet Nover

Awaiting "Black Saturday"

IN HIS SPEECH Monday night, Adolf Hitler renewed his ultimatum to Czechoslovakia, giving that nation until Saturday, October 1, to evacuate the Sudeten area. And in language as frenzied and ominous as any he has used since the present crisis began he indicated that if his demands are not complied with by then, Germany will move.

But even while his frightening words were echoing around the world, the British foreign office issued a soberly worded communique stating that Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia would act in concert against the Third Reich should the latter attack Czechoslovakia.

It would seem, therefore, that each side has thrown down the gauntlet to the other. Czechoslovakia has Berlin's ultimatum; Berlin has the ultimatum of London, Paris and Moscow. Between the two there remains a margin of peaceful diplomatic maneuver. But there is no mistaking the fact that it is a slight margin and that unless one side or the other backs down, Europe may be plunged into war.

HITLER'S speech, with its emphasis on Germany's defensive strength, shows that he is not discounting entirely the strong stand now being taken by Great Britain and France. But the indications in it are few and far between that he is really reckoning with a general war in which Germany, as in 1914, would be faced by a triple entente of Great Britain, France and Russia.

The weakness displayed by the democratic powers only as recently as the Berchtesgaden meeting between Chamberlain and Hitler may have convinced the Fuehrer that the governments at London and Paris, not to mention the Soviet regime, are playing a desperate game of bluff, that when the actual showdown comes, Czechoslovakia will have to fight alone.

It is no doubt on this account that he repeated the pledge he had already given at Nuremberg some weeks ago that he had no dsigns on Alsace-Lorraine; again held out the hand of friendship to Great Britain and stated categorically that with the annexation of the Sudetenland Germany would have no further territorial ambitions.

In doing so he was clearly making a shrewd bid to those elements in Great Britain and France, which are only too eager to seize upon Hitler's latest promises as a reason for inaction. The Fuehrer was, in other words, seeking to break the united front of public opinion so slowly and so painfully created in the European democracies.

IF HE FAILS in this endeavor, if Great Britain and France do not during the next 10 days show any signs of retreating from the position indicated in the Foreign Office communique, will Hitler go ahead anyway with his plan to take the Czechoslovak territory by force if he cannot get it peacefully?

The question cannot be answered with any assurance. But the fact cannot be ignored that the events of the past fortnight have not strengthened but weakened Germany's position should there be a European war.

Germany's military might was mobilized days ago. But during the interim Czechoslovakia has also mobilized and so has France while Britain's naval preparations in the North Sea area have steadily been increased. And there is the added factor that the belligerence earlier displayed by Poland and Rumania, which like Germany hanker after segments of Czechoslovak territory, has subsided.

The demarche of Rumania and Yugoslavia in making it clear that if Hungary moves against Prague Czechoslovakia's fellow members of the Little Entente will march against Hungary, has been like a douche of ice water on whatever war fever obtained at Budapest. And Poland cannot ignore the veiled Russian threat that if the Poles march on Teschen Russia may invade Poland.

THE QUESTION of peace or war thus resolves itself into the question whether Hitler is really convinced that France, Great Britain and Russia will fight on behalf of Czechoslovakia. It is doubtful if, regardless of the uncompromising stand he took at Berlin Monday, he will give the German army marching orders if his answer is in the affirmative.

It is inconceivable that he is prepared to let his regime go through the ordeal of a general war in which the odds against a German victory would be very great indeed. The very fact that on this occasion he did not espouse the Polish and Magyar claims for Czech territory indirectly proves that, for it suggests he does not want Rumania and Yugoslavia to go in on the other side.

Of course there is Italy which Hitler fervently acclaims as a partner which in the event of a war would be a solid bloc with the Third Reich. But is Italy's role so clear?

IN EIGHT days Mussolini has made eight speeches all of them touching in greater or lesser measure on the European situation. One might imagine from this circumstance that the Duce's position in the present crisis is crystal clear. The exact opposite happens to be the case. Mussolini's speeches have been full of sword-clanking and blustering, of boasting and chest-beating. But the impression this activity leaves on the observer is of a man utterly distraught by events beyond his control and whistling to keep up his courage.

To be sure Mussolini did say, at Trieste, that if no peaceful solution were found for the Czechoslovak problem "and if a line-up of universal character is brought on for or against Prague, let it be known that Italy's place is already chosen." But this sybilline utterance could be interpreted in more than one way. In Berlin it could be interpreted as meaning that Italy would join Germany. But elsewhere it could be interpreted as meaning that Mussolini was on the fence. Later Mussolini did speak of Germany and Italy forming a block should the democracies attempt to destroy the totalitarian states. But since the democracies have no such intention this statement, too is without particular force.

FROM THE ITALIAN point of view a general war would be little short of a calamity. If it led to German victory it would ultimately mean German aggrandizement and Germany is already far too powerful a neighbor to have on the Brenner. If Germany were defeated, however, Fascist ideology would be given a serious blow. The best solution, therefore, as Rome sees it, is for a peaceful solution of the Czechoslovak crisis, one in which not only German demands but also Magyar and Polish (which the Duce has steadily sponsored during recent weeks) demands would be met.

Despite Mussolini's numerous pronouncements, Mussolini remains an unknown quantity so far as the issue of peace and war is concerned. In times past that would have given him a bargaining position of incalculable advantage. But events have overtaken his calculations. He expected Germany to have her way without a struggle. Now that that outcome has become uncertain his situation is an unhappy one. Italy remains an enigma but one which, to Mussolini's obvious annoyance, nobody at the moment is bothering to solve.

Strikes Halved In Present Year

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Department said yesterday there were 1,353 strikes in the first seven months of this year, compared to 3,217 in the same period of 1937.

Only 390,891 workers were involved in this year's strikes, it said, whereas the 1937 strikes involved 1,470,507. The steel strike was during the 1937 period covered by the report.

The department said its conciliators prevented 339 strikes in the fiscal year ended June 30, making an estimated savings of $12,000,000.

Builders Warned They Need Writs To Install Boilers

Contractors were warned yesterday to get a permit from the District smoke regulation engineer before installation of boilers in buildings.

Pointing out a decision by Judge Hobart Newman, handed down Saturday in Police Court, that a local contractor violated this regulation, H. K. Kugel, smoke regulation engineer, said a fine of $50 was imposed. He added that this requirement has been in effect nearly two years and that contractors may no longer plead ignorance of the law.

IS NEW YORK NECESSARY?

There are men in Washington who take special pride in the fact that they purchase their clothes in the fine shops of New York. Their pride is fully justified, we believe, except for one disillusioning point . . . they need not travel to New York to obtain such clothes. At 1409 G Street, N. W., they will find apparel fully comparable, both in excellence of quality and absolute authenticity of styling.

Sherwood Play Promises A New Abe Lincoln

Famous Authority Describes New Drama
Will Open Here Next Monday Night
Raymond Massey Heads Cast

AN Abraham Lincoln new to the theater will be revealed to the Washington public when the Playwrights' Producing company presents Raymond Massey in the title role of Robert E. Sherwood's new play of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," in the National Theater next Monday night, prior to its presentation on Broadway.

BELL.

It will be the young Lincoln of the prairie days, diffident, uncertain of his future and unconscious of any of the elements of greatness in his nature that were to place him among the world's immortals; an over-tall, gangling and awkward Lincoln, simple in thought, speech and action, but with an acute sense of humor and the kindliness that was to make him known in after years as "the great heart." It will be a youthful Lincoln, unpoetized, unglorified and undeified.

This was disclosed to this column yesterday by Clayton Hamilton, distinguished author, critic, lecturer and playwright, in a two-hour visit in his apartment in the Cosmos Club and devoted to the new producing company, in general, and the first of their productions to reach Washington, in particular. Since Maxwell Anderson, Robert E. Sherwood, Sidney Howard, S. N. Behrman and Elmer Rice, who have formed the new producing group, all are friends of long standing of Mr. Hamilton's, he is intimately familiar with the scripts they are currently producing and have in preparation.

"'Abe Lincoln in Illinois,'" he said, "is a masterful piece of playwriting as much for what Sherwood did not do as for what he did. It must have sprung from a lifelong study of the character and omnivorous reading of all that has been printed about him. It presents an authentic picture of the man, Lincoln, before events in his life had shaped his destiny. We find here a Lincoln fearful of his own capabilities, haunted by a consciousness of failure to have been of service to humanity and foreseeing none of the tremendous events that were to punctuate his later life; a Lincoln who did not want to be elected President because he deemed himself unworthy of so high a trust; a Lincoln once close to self-destruction and again to loss of reason. There is monumental drama in this approach to the character that always has been idealized and deified. Sherwood has caught that drama and intensified it by a superb resistance to the temptation to emotionalize the role in moments of crisis and keeping it a true drawing of a figure not yet great.

"There are periods in the play when the audience, knowing all of Lincoln's later life, will be sure the author is about to place in his mouth long and grandiose speeches in the true manner of conventional theatricalism. The effect is profoundly more impressive when, as he does in one scene, Lincoln meets the situation with a speech consisting of exactly two words. As Sherwood has fashioned the character, those two words are more eloquent, more vividly impressive and more stunning than any longer speech possibly could have been."

After such bitingly satirical and witty plays as "The Road to Rome," "Reunion in Vienna," "The Petrified Forest, "Idiot's Delight" and the rest, what prompted Sherwood to undertake a play in such striking contrast to their mood and content? Mr. Hamilton was asked.

"One suspects," he said, "that Sherwood has been steeped throughout his life in Lincoln lore. He himself is something the physical counterpart of Lincoln. Like Lincoln, he is 6 feet 4½ inches tall. He is of the same sinewy, gangling physique. While he was attending school, a foot taller than all the others of his age in his class, it is not inconceivable—although I do not know it to be the fact—that his resemblance to Abraham Lincoln may have been brought to his attention many times. He may have been nicknamed 'Abe.' However that may be, it is very evident from the material disclosed in his play that it is the outgrowth of a lifetime of study of the character and not of any sudden impulse and the reading of a couple of books.

"And it should not be thought that 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois,' because of its fidelity and truth, is a gloomy and dismal play. It has its full quota of humor, but it is characteristic Lincoln humor and not the 'smart,' satirical, 'wisecracking' sort so prevalent in the contemporary theater.

"Sherwood, you will recall, has betrayed a fine capacity for coping with heroic figures in earlier of his plays. His first, 'The Road to Rome,' was crisply satirical and witty, yet the leading figure in the play WAS Hannibal. Hannibal, after all, was not a comic figure in the world's history."

One reluctantly abandoned the topic for the moment, quite convinced that a new and untried work which could so enthuse one of the best informed and most erudite of the practitioners of the theater—Mr. Hamilton for 18 years was chairman of the Pulitzer Prize Committee—must take its place among the conspicuously noteworthy contributions to the new season of living drama. That is the treat the Capital's theatergoers have in store for them next Monday night.

• • • •

Supporting a view previously expressed in this space, Mr. Hamilton deems Raymond Massey an ideal choice for the role of Lincoln in the new Sherwood drama. He lays further stress upon the fact that, although born a Canadian, Mr. Massey brings to the new part a completely American point of view, springing from more than one century of American ancestry. His father's family settled in New England shortly after the landing of the Mayflower and remained there for more than two centuries. On his mother's side, the family of Vincents are of similarly remote pioneer stock that settled in the South and Middle West. Raymond Massey, to be sure, happens to have been born of a branch of the family that migrated to Toronto, the city of his birth, and received his first stage experience in London, but, like Robert Sherwood, has been steeped in Lincolniana all of his life on both sides of the house. His older brother, Vincent Massey, was the first Canadian Minister to the United States. Perhaps what is more important is that Raymond Massey is an uncommonly fine actor. Mr. Hamilton tells me that his performance of the role of Lincoln is perfection itself. I am more than willing to accept his word for it.

• • • •

Toward the Playwrights' Producing Company, Mr. Hamilton entertains a comparable enthusiasm. In its formation and operation he perceives a valuable addition to the forces laboring for the perpetuation and further development of the highest traditions of the native theater.

"The most important figure in the American theater," he says, "is the playwright. If there were no plays, there would be no theater. Next come the actors. If there were plays, but no one to play them, there still would be no theater. Then there are the other artists of the playhouse—the designers of stage decor, the musicians, the costumers and all the other essential participants in the formulation of a successful production. These constitute the first requirement of theatrical creativeness and enterprise, but there still remain the business conduct of the affairs of the theater and the physical theater itself. Theaters have to be efficiently run, the same as any other important business involving dollars and cents. The execution of all the duties of all phases of play production are too heavy a burden for any one man to bear. But not too great for five able men, who have achieved individual success, to assume.

"So the formation of the Playwrights' Producing Company has the immediate effect of bringing together in a common pooling of interests five of the foremost playwrights in America, who know plays, know production and know good acting when they see it. They are able to divide the load of responsibility by five and still have the time and the necessary peace of mind to turn out more plays of their own. Hurricane conditions permitting, their first production, Maxwell Anderson's 'Knickerbocker Holiday,' with music by Kurt Weill, should open at once in Boston. 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois,' of course, will open here next week. Elmer Rice has completed a new script called 'American Landscape' and Behrman probably will have a play ready for production around the first of the year.

"Each of these completed plays is submitted to the entire group of five and read and revised—if necessary—in line with the consensus of expert opinion. This method of procedure should prove of inestimable value to the theater."

• • • •

One point particularly emphasized by Mr. Hamilton is that in the organization of the "Playwrights' Producing Company" its founders had no thought of "seceding" from anything or indicating any resentment or peeve toward any branch of the theater, with which they all have been associated so long and so successfully. Not only is their new project in no sense a revolt or a "light little corporation," but it contemplates the inclusion of other capable authors as time goes on, the only proviso being that they have acceptable plays worthy of production. As Mr. Sherwood recently expressed it, "There are only five of us now, but I hope in another year or two we will be 10 or 15 or 20. I hope it will turn out to be 50."

• • • •

Such is the spirit and purpose of the latest addition to the potent forces engaged in the preservation of the American theater. The American theater, through their partial instrumentality, is looking up!

Suppressed a few tones below the spontaneous exuberance of its Pulitzer Prize season, "You Can't Take It With You," the three-act, farcical comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, celebrating the adventures and misadventures of the unpredictable Vanderhof family, returned to the National Theater last night and scored as decisively as upon its first visit with a large and enthusiastic audience.

Many months of repetition have made the droll characters and hilarious plot familiar to all who follow the fortunes of the playhouse. There is no need at this time, therefore, to detail again the impasse that was reached when the daughter of the family of rugged individualists, addicted to every conceivable hobby from collecting snakes to manufacturing fireworks in the basement, engages the romantic interest of the son of the Wall Street Kirbys, whose lives are dedicated to the golden tortures of the Stock Exchange, or the manner in which the placid philosophy of Grandpa Vanderhof brought gentle order out of the whole chaotic business. Neither does the manner of the performance of the play greatly matter.

"You Can't Take It With You," it seems, is, as has been so widely suspected, a pithy and a pungent comedy that is inherently and irresistibly funny. Not only is it funny after the fashion of most extravagant farces, but it is ballasted with a modicum of common sense that probably seems more profoundly honest across the footlights than it would in actual practice. However the economic value of the piece may be appraised, it affords a happy and wholesome evening of high good humor in the theater. It is crisply and skillfully written and handsomely fortified with provocative and breezy situations involving characters of cameo sharpness and vivid contrast.

A Tranquil Paterfamilias

The pivotal figure of the three acts is Grandpa Vanderhof, who quit work at his office door 35 years ago, because he wasn't having any fun, and never bothered about filing an income tax because he "didn't believe in it." This quietly humorous and quaintly philosophical old gentleman, representing a shadowy sort of composite of Rip Van Winkle, David Harum and Lightnin' Bill Jones, is naturally and effectively impersonated by Clarence Oliver, not before seen in the part in Washington. He demonstrates with some conclusiveness that the role needs none of the embellishments of comic exaggeration to be intensely amusing. Eva Condon continues in the role of Penelope Sycamore, who became a playwright because a typewriter had been delivered to the house by mistake eight years before, and Patti Littell is her daughter with a futile ambition to become a great ballet dancer. John Prescott and Joseph Allenton are the Paul Sycamore and Mr. De Pinna, respectively, of the present edition.

The youthful romance that provides the raison d'etre of the whole merry business is intrusted to John Marriott and Katherine Stevens. Miss Stevens is an ingenuous and lovely young woman who comes honestly by her proficiency behind the proscenium. She is the daughter of Sam Wood, noted motion picture director, who was present in last night's audience to view her thoroughly capable performance.

Kolenkhov, the Russian ballet master, and Grand Duchess Olga, expatriated cousin of the late Czar, now a waitress in Childs' Times Square restaurant, are colorfully portrayed by Rene Roberti and Joan Croydon. The numerous others in the cast contribute satisfactory support.

"You Can't Take It With You," all in all, would be a generous amusement value at considerably more than the current scale of bargain prices.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 26.—While our legionnaire visitors are leaving by the thousands lets see where our screen stars have been.

Clark Gable's up shooting around Winnipeg, Canada. Last week-end Carole shot off four nails. Must have caught them in the lock of a rifle. That's no place to catch a nail, Carole. Anyway, at 7 a. m. her manicurist was en route to the studio with four new ones.

HEDDA HOPPER

Bob Taylor's a-haying in the valley.

Spencer Tracy got a put-out. Found he wasn't having a good time on his big boat at Catalina, so he rented a little one and now he's having a whale of a time, not with whales, either.

Basil Rathbone is in New York getting raves for his work in "If I Were King."

• • • •

Cary Grant and Doug, jr., rounded up the local British contingent and gave Gertie Lawrance an all-day fiesta. Norma Shearer came three times. Luncheon, then over to Marion Davies' house to greet former service lassies; dropped back for a moment after that, saying, "Now I'll go home, put on eyelashes and glamorize," but came back without 'em.

• • • •

Many of our actors spent Sunday making pretty speeches about Bob Montgomery. He was retired as head of the Actors' Guild. Ralph Morgan was elected—the people's choice.

• • • •

Elizabeth Hawes, author of "Fashion Is Spinach," unveiled some of her creations at Jaeckel's fashion show. Elizabeth is right. Only I'd put her clothes in the cabbage class. She showed a little number of green, red and black stripes—large enough to cover the Coliseum. Lili Damita wore a hat our Pilgrim fathers would have envied. And Betty Furness had a boat on her head.

• • • •

Warner Brothers deserve a vote of thanks from the entire picture business for entertaining the legionnaires. Everyone who came left a booster. The only complaints heard were from those who couldn't get in. When you come 3,000 miles it's natural that you should want to see the industry which has made Hollywood tick. A parade or pretty speeches will never take the place of a scene in production.

• • • •

The fashion show in "Artists and Models" which is woven in as part of the story is a wow. Even a house full of sailors at sneak preview loved it. Jack Benny plays his first romantic part in this picture without ever kissing the girl. Story is sort of reverse angle on "The Richest Girl in the World" idea. Only in this, Joan Bennett, who plays her, behaves like a human being, instead of appearing as though she were ready for the psychopathic ward, as most of our heiresses do.

• • • •

Gladys Swarthout returned with trunks full of new clothes, ready to make her last picture for Paramount without benefit of song.

• • • •

Hollywood is surprised that Irene Castle's getting so much publicity. She should. She got America out of its padded easy chair and on to its feet. That was quite a job 25 years ago. Irene has kept her figure and looks young as she did then. No star on the screen has ever equaled her popularity. Ira Hill was her favorite photographer. Lady Duff Gordon her dressmaker. She had weekly portrait sittings. Hundreds of her photographs sold for $5 apiece. Debbies would buy dozen different poses—take them home, copy each one. Where are our stars of 25 years ago? I'm asking you.

Republic's postponed a picture because "Gunga Din" is running overtime, and they're using every British uniform in town.

Separated From Wife, With Divorce Unlikely, Man Asks: What About Feminine Companionship?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your advice of September 22 to the young woman who is separated from her husband and worrying about her social life (whether it is proper for her to accept the attentions of men- is interesting to me from the other side of the picture. When a young husband finds himself alone, with separation a fact, but divorce a long way off, whatis he to do for feminine companionship? The front pages of newspapers are full of the histories of men who solve the problem the wrong way—and of women, too, so far as that goes. But what is the right way?

My wife and I are separated for other than triangular reasons. Since incompatability is a word that courts in the District of Columbia do not understand, divorce will have to come via the desertion route. And this means two years of waiting, at least. My wife says she is not interested in divorce, since she is not in love with anyone and does not expect to marry again. She is satisfied, for the time being, to extract separate maintenance from me.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that we are not legal residents of the District. My wife refuses to take action in the State in which she claims residence. Thus placed behind the eight-ball, I am overcome with a feeling of complete frustration. I come from a small community. A city the size of Washington is supposed to be a place of easy morality, where nobody cares about one's private affairs and one can do what one likes, presumably.

However, I know this to be a fallacy and I desire to take a right course from the beginning. While I desire feminine companionship, I wish also to please society as a whole with my conduct. And society, so far as I am concerned, is the group which surrounds me in my work. Some of my co-workers are understanding; some are indifferent; and some are the usual busybodies who go from desk to desk with tales about their associates. Have you any suggestions? M. I.

The Right Approach

DEAR M. I.: Paradoxical as it may seem in this alleged man's world, a husband who has been cast adrift from his marital moorings, without immediate recourse to divorce as a means of clarifying his social status, is in a rather more difficult position even than his wife when it comes to the exigent problem of honorably negotiating worthwhile, satisfactory social relationships with the opposite sex.

Assuming that he is decently self-respecting and properly appreciative of the merited approval of discriminating persons; and that he desires and intends to associate only with women of his own kind (i. e., his mental and moral equals), and to keep his social interchange with them clean-cut and above board—he has a real problem on his hands. For the feminine prototype of such a man, be she maiden, spinster, widow or divorcee, feels a justifiable discretionary reluctance either to bait the ubiquitous scandal monger or to subject her own or the man's emotions to the temptation of forbidden fruit. (I am speaking, of course, of the prudently conventional type of person which you represent, who makes up the great, stable middle-class segment of society.)

The social difficulties of a man in your position are multiplied when he finds himself cut off from his native background, where community acquaintanceship with family tradition and personal character would stand him in stead, and where old friends could be counted on to come to his rescue. Probably the only adequate solution of your problem, as a comparative stranger in an indifferent environment, will be found through acquiring a reputable social sponsor, in the form of a genial, knowledgeable, happily married couple who enjoy entertaining and who could find good social use for a personable extra man.

The right approach to feminine companionship, for a man in your position, is to become, for such a couple or couples, the fourth hand at bridge; the heaven-sent, heart-whole and fancy-free unattached man to fill out small dinner lists; an agreeably impersonal and dependable squire for miscellaneous ladies from back home who have to table necessity rather detached, you may proceed in time to pair off with this woman or that—who has met you under impeccable auspices—for such routine social activities as luncheon, dinner, theater, dancing, sports, and so on. So long as each of you has a background of mutual friends, so long as you do not pay conspicuously marked attention to one woman, and so long as each respective relationship is sustained by a mutual interest in wholesome social pursuits, you will be obviating any possible chance of embarrassing or scandalous involvement.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Clever Games For Parties

JOYFUL whoops at your party when Ted catches on to the stunt he must do in the hilarious "Off-and-On" game.

When Ted—who is "it"—leaves the room, the crowd decides he's to wear his shoes as epaulets. But not a word to Ted, of course, when he returns.

He must guess what he's to do by tapping each article of clothing he wears. To guide him, the crowd hums softly when he's "cold" but when he gets "warm"—touches his shoes—everyone sings loudly. Finally after much gray laughter, humming and singing, Ted guesses that the crowd wants him to wear his shoes on his shoulders.

Easy to think up other riotous stunts in "Off-and-On" and it's a grand crowd mixer.

Clever, too, in getting shy people to unbend is this ice-breaker, Glad Hands. Cut out pairs of hands from cardboard. Make them as crazily as you like but make each pair a little different from all other pairs.

Mix the hands up. As guests arrive give each boy and girl a Glad Hand, tell them to find their missing mates. Lots of fun by the time everybody's paired.

For a breather, play "My Diary." Start the game by writing on the top of a long sheet of paper some hectic incident, true or untrue—"Today I was elected president." Fold your line under, pass paper to the next guest, who may write 'Refused to marry Greta Garbo." Hilarious to read aloud when the "diary" has gone the rounds.

For many more gay ideas turn to our 40-page booklet, "Games For Good Parties." Fortune games, ice-breakers, word games, magic stunts, team games—enough to set you up as a clever hostess for years.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

ADELAIDE is the gray-eyed daughter of the Lawsons up the street. A gayly hearty girl she is, who passes our house on her bicycle on her way to high school every day. We ran across Mrs. Lawson the other day and she was telling us about the room Adelaide had fixed up. We were so interested that we went home with Mrs. Lawson to see it.

Adelaide made a deal with the boy next door who's quite a star at carpentry. If he'd build her some book shelves in her room, she'd make the spreads and curtains for his. Each fellow to furnish his own material. And Adelaide's room turned out to be as jaunty as a sweater and skirt. She planned the book shelves to fit into two corners of the room and leave a shallow alcove between. Across the molding at the top of the alcove she attached a ruffle of Scotch plaid gingham. The same gingham made a flounce around the bottom of the studio couch, which she set into the alcove. She also made the center cushion of the plaid. The cover for the couch was in dark green rep, as were the other two cushions.

Walls of the room, and woodwork, were ivory; the floors got green rep scatter rugs; two small boudoir chairs were slip covered in green rep with plaid flounces. Even the dressing table skirt got a plaid skirt. The chest and incidental pieces were maple.

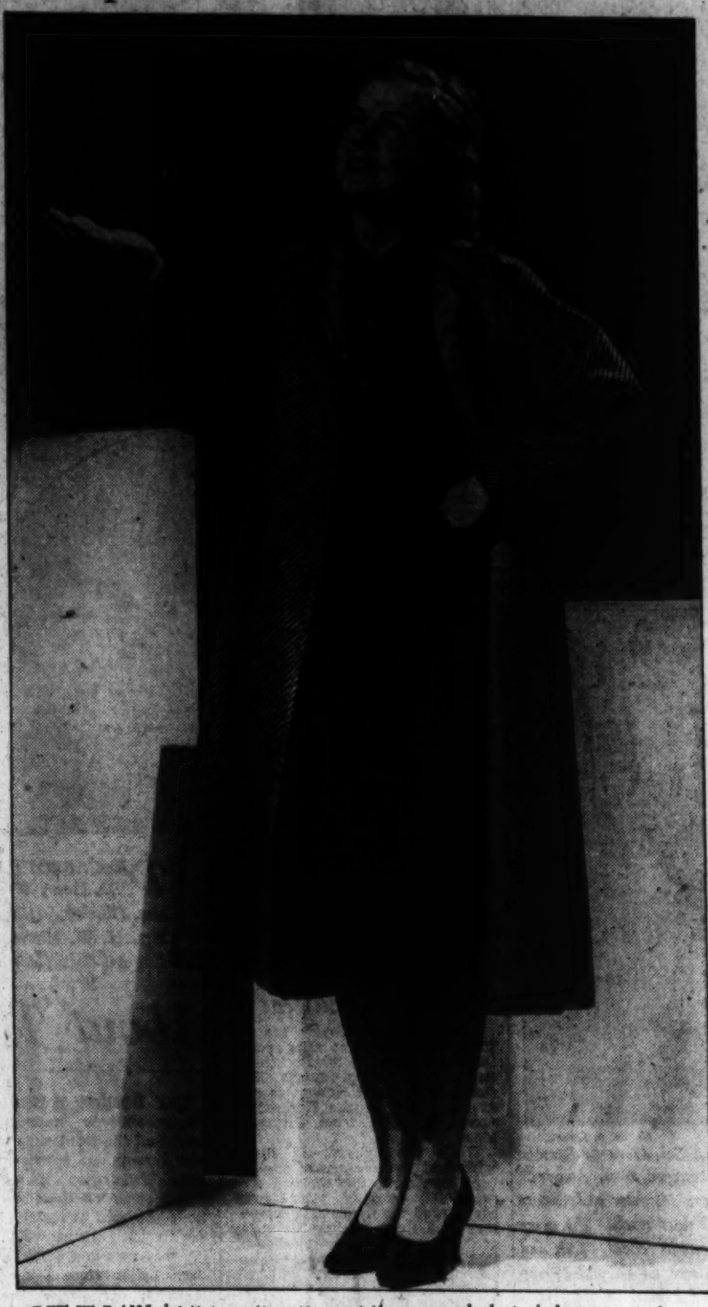
Prepared for Rain or Shine



LET IT RAIN, let it pour, it matters not if your wardrobe includes a practical raincoat such as this classically cut balmacaan. Raincoats have never been as practical or as desirable as this year's cloud-burst of plaids, checks, stripes, tweeds and monotones. Chemically treated gabardine will shed water like a duck, and these reversible classics have become as indispensable to most wardrobes as the stud-trimmed shirtwaist dress worn with it. A reasonable price is asked for reversibles such as the black and white diagonal shown here, which is just as much at home in clear football weather as when scuttling through storms.

Clothes Can Get or Cost You a Job

First Rule Is to Be Neat No. 2 Is Conservatism-Dress Effectively

By the Associated Press.

New York.

YOUR clothes can get you a job, or cost you a job.

If you're one of the several hundred thousand young men hitting the employment trail this fall, a little attention to your sartorial get-up may be the clinching point that puts you on a pay-roll.

The visual impression you create is at least half the battle in getting the men on the hiring line thinking your way. That doesn't mean they're going to fall for clothing-store dummies.

The first rule of good dress, regardless of what you wear, is be neat. A battered "Joe College" hat, a scuffed pair of shoes, a necktie awry, a button missing, can turn an Adolph Menjou ensemble into a first-class costume for a scarecrow.

Dress Effectively

Rule 2 is to dress conservatively—subdued colors, quiet patterns, harmony. If you burst in on the prospective boss in an Indian blanket, he won't think you're a live wire. He'll just think you're an Indian.

Rule 3 is dress effectively. If, by smart selection of your clothes, you can manage to look just a bit better than the next man—who in other respects may be just as smart as you are—do you think he's going to get the job?

To illustrate what's meant by dressing effectively, here's Frederic Rahr, internationally known color expert:

"To be well 'turned out' means more than a clean handkerchief and shined shoes. It means that studied simplicity and harmony of every detail of dress which so completely flatters the personality of the wearer that the details of the clothing he wears never obtrude themselves into the consciousness of the observer.

Blue Is Complimentary

"A brown suit may easily create less favorable impression on the next person you meet than would a blue one. Some browns are definitely unbecoming to many tan or yellowish complexions.

"Blue is complimentary to almost all complexions, but blue is worn a lot by your competition. Because it goes well with all other colors, gray is an easy suit color as a wardrobe base."

Howard Ketcham, another prominent "color engineer," favors blue for job-hunting on the ground that it "inspires confidence." He suggests the "accent" color of gold in your necktie because it is a "simulating hue."

Finally, if you have serious doubts about what you should wear in going after a job, there's always a foolproof system.

Sneak an advance look at the man you are going to approach, and dress the way he does.

A Woman's New York

by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 26.

WHEN OUR Palisades Park, over on the Jersey shore of the Hudson, pulled a cutie by running a "Mrs. America" contest and electing a married girl, I thought to myself, now there's a crafty press-agent, and decided to find out something about Mrs. Eddie Chamberlain, who got the nod and the silver cup.

ALICE HUGHES.

Well, I learned some interesting things about Mrs. America No. 1. Her name was Margaret Meck, and she was born in Hungary in 1913. Then her pappy brought her to Cleveland and went into the barbering business there. It was during the Aquacade at that town's lake-front fair that Margaret was elected Queen of the Great Lakes, and displayed her girlish beauty. These charms quite overcame Mr. Eddie Chamberlain, a professional diver from Marietta, Ohio, and they became one. She is a model, and during the cold months they follow the sun while poppa plumps into the water at Southern water carnivals.

But how we figure Mrs. America is a Hungarian girl who models clothes and troupes with daddy as he dives is a bit beyond me. Of course, the winner has to look great in a bathing suit, and have a gleaming property smile, and be married. Obviously the true Mrs. America is a sturdy, fine citizen who has successfullly raised a crop of good kids, who is a credit to her community and who is possessed of active social consciousness. But just as obviously such would not do for a park full of merry-go-rounds. So Mrs. Margaret will do—on a strictly New York ballyhoo basis. And yet she wasn't all cocked up by the honor. "I only got $10, and they didn't let me keep the silver cup. That was only decoration." says the smiling titleholder. A fine pan of halibut, hey? No cup, $10, no kids, no home. Just a very pretty girl with a swell shape and a big smile. Well, maybe it's right!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Even though we are used to the Norse nymph by now, little Sonja Henie still grabs the stares when she turns up in town. The Waldorf Astoria has been a shambles during her present stay, with 10,000 howling kids trying to get her to scratch her initials on their tin skates. This trip she has with her Mama Selma and Brother Lief (are all Norsemen named Lief?) and spent a quiet evening at the Rainbow Room. Style note—plump Sonja still has those curves under control, but I prophesy that the minute she quits training altogether she will add poundage.

Rich visitors took a small party to dinner at a famous and snooty restaurant on Park avenue in the mid-fifties last week. We were five, including the spouse and myself. After a delicious but simple dinner, without wine, I sneaked a look at the check. It read $27, and I slid quietly under the table. Burglary, without a doubt, and I thanked heaven for the good old "Greasy Spoon," down on Third avenue, where a plate of beans is a thin dime.

I hear that the hottest thing on the campus this fall is called the "huskie," a sheared sheepskin chunkie coat certain to keep a gal warm in the bitterest weather. It is worn with a flannel skirt matching the coat lining. For warmer weather there's a sleeveless jacket called the "baa-baa," to be worn over a sweater. School girls are certainly lucky, to be able to wear all the charming casual clothes, while we old folks have to keep up the bootless struggle to be smart, cityfied and even faintly elegant. Lucky kids!

What Part Mouth Cavity Plays in Digestive Process

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The first part of the digestive system—the mouth cavity—does not appear to conform to our definition given yesterday of the digestive system as a hollow, muscular tube lined with mucous membrane into which digestive glands pour their secretions.

Yet it is just that. If we were to remove the skin from the face and neck we would see that the mouth cavity is really a muscular walled hollow organ. The muscles of the lips and cheeks cover it completely and make a kind of churn out of it.

But what of the teeth, you say; can you call them mucous membrane? Curiously enough that is just what they are. They do not develop from the bone. They are modified forms of skin. The bone grows around them only after they are formed from the skin papillae. Certain fish and reptiles have teeth all over the inside of the mouth. They are pointed backward and very sharp. That is why a snake cannot let go of an animal after it has begun to swallow it.

Human teeth are better constructed. They are not sharp, and with the aid of the tongue the human animal can reject any morsel of food which it finds distasteful or uncomfortable.

The mouth cavity, with the help of the nose, plays perhaps the most important role in the whole function of digestion, because it makes it enjoyable. The well known experiments of Pavlov go to prove this. Pavlov showed that when an appetizing dish is smelled and especially tasted, even before a morsel reaches the stomach, the reflex from the organs of smell and taste cause a great outflow of gastric juice. The stomach is prepared to digest the food long before it arrives. This is called appetite juice. It is quite within the bounds of possibility to suppose that the reason many people have indigestion is because they are deficient in taste and smell.

The teeth are the most important organs of digestion from the mechanical viewpoint. There are eight in each side of the jaw, upper and lower—thirty-two in all in the adult jaw. They are most efficient pulverizers, and the mechanical breakup of food as done by the teeth allows the digestive juices to get to all surfaces. Of course the digestive juices can reduce large pieces of food to solution, but the teeth make it a good deal easier.

As to how many times you should chew your food I have no intention of going on record. Paying too much attention to that might undo all the good work of the appetite reflexes of smell and taste. The more natural and less controlled any function is, the healthier the organism.

You Will Look Slimmer Some More Twisting Dieting Won't Do It

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE MEANEST trick the fashion designers played on us this fall was to make waistlines smaller than ever. According to their way of thinking, your waist now measures about 4½ inches less than it did before streamlining took, and you will have to search hard to find a dress that does not give full credit for this slimness.

The beautifying tapering waist the designers have in mind is at least 7 inches less than the bust measurement. The greater the difference between the two measurements the better, but if the difference is less than 7 inches you need emergency measures—calisthenics.

You Will Look Slimmer

What you want first is a nice, firm feeling in the midsection instead of the loose, slumped feeling that goes with lazy musculature. As soon as you feel firm you will look slimmer. Here is a beginning exercise that will slenderize the waist and also discipline the tummy:

POSITION: Standing on the knees, hands stretched high overhead with the fingers clasped and stretching upward with the entire body.

MOVEMENT: Continuing the stretch, bend to the left at the waist—bend until it hurts! Then slowly sit down on the floor at the right side of the feet, still stretching upward with the hands. Keep the chin up, too. Without lowering the hands, pull yourself back up on the knees and bend to the right and sit down on the left side of the feet. Begin with three times for each side and gradually increase until you are exercising for a full minute and a half.

Some More Twisting

Here is another twisting exercise that will help you to lose your waistline surplus in a hurry:

POSITION: Sitting on the floor with the legs stretched far apart, arms high overhead with palms turned outward and fingers interlocked.

MOVEMENT: Pulling up with all the trunk muscles and keeping the arms stretched high overhead and the legs straight, bend sideward and try and touch the clasped hands to the foot. Stretch upward again and bend to the other side. Be sure that you stretch upward and bend sideward. That's the combination that does the slimming!

When you first begin your waistline exercises you will feel about as limber as a poker and on the second and third days you may feel worse! But after a few days you will begin to enjoy bending, and, if you keep at it, you will see results in a week.

Dieting Won't Do It

You cannot slim the waist by dieting. The waist is the pivot of the figure. It allows you to turn, twist and bend easily—if you get the exercise that keeps you flexible and gives you a youthful, lovely figure.

Millinery Meditations

I

Oh why do women with chins receding
Buy conical toques without once heeding
Their profiles in the glass?
Now take that horse-faced woman yonder,
She really should have stopped to ponder,
Before joining the Brownie class.

II

In favor of ostrich plumes.
table,
That heavy-faced gals with taste lamentable,
Love rearing Breton brims?
Now there's a woman who should know better,
And anyway why should her family let her
Go in for pirate whims?

III

And of course it would be 10-to-1 odds
That elderly matrons with long gray bobs
Would choose begets off the face.
And look at that poor simple creature,
Her doll's hat ages every feature,
Yet she thinks she's in the pace.

IV

Oh it would have been a sure prediction,
That frowsy women would have strong convictions
In favor of ostrich plumes.
Now take that dowager advancing
She seems a Christmas tree a-prancing
While the passing esthete fumes.

V

And it was surely decreed by fate,
That the Amazon would put on her pate
A hat with a towering feather.
But why should that woman with the parrot nose,
And the double chin, and the dowager pose,
Play Robin Hood in the heather.

VI

Oh I suppose that the law of attraction,
Brought every moon-faced girl into action
In pursuit of the pillbox hat.
And see that matron whose hair needs combing,
The entire city she's been a roaming
For a turban to round off her fat.

Oh a Roman holiday it must have been.
For millinery clerks so poised and trim,
To tell just what was what.
To firmly plaster on long lean faces
Towers and stovepipes; and for square-jawed cases
Bring out the kitchen pots.

VIII

Now why don't women begin to show sense
And say to designers, "Get thee hence."
And of freak chapeaux be entirely rid?
Now take that woman—see, in the mirror,
How crazy she looks—wait, she's getting nearer—
Why, that is my own new lid!

Double Shades At Windows Save Heat

Even your new fall window shades will be in color. A tone called chrysanthemum yellow is the newest one on the horizon. When hung at your windows it gives your rooms a rich, warm glow that is extremely pleasing; then, too, it seems to bring the sunshine indoors even on gray days, with the result that your home is a more pleasant, hospitable place to live in.

Here's another tip from the decorators—hang two shades at your windows—one for inside color harmony, the second for outside street uniformity—and thereby save as much as 43 per cent heat. This last is a substantial item to consider when the winter snow and cold set in in earnest.

Social Lights to Watch Supreme Court Open

Women Interested in Highest Tribunal Session's Attraction Bars Other Functions Justices Return From Summer Vacations

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

FROM A SOCIAL as well as legal standpoint, justice will be shining in its own light on Monday when the black-robed members of the Supreme Court take their places on the bench for the 1938-39 session.

Time was when the convening of the highest judicial body was a signal for the opening of the social season. Later, however, the whirl began later and the Supreme Court started its sessions without any special fanfare from the Capital's feminine contingent. In more recent years women have taken a new interest in the court's first autumn meeting and it has become quite the fashion for them to attend. Furthermore, that event precludes other social functions on that day.

HOPE R. MILLER.

A Capital hostess discovered this last year when she planned an informal luncheon on October 4. She invited a dozen women and eight declined on the plea that they simply couldn't miss being on hand to see Justice Black seated. The luncheon was postponed until the following day and the hostess herself was in the courtroom when the newest justice took his place on the bench.

From vacation resorts scattered over the United States and Europe, the justices have been flocking back to the Capital in the last few days. The Chief justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes returned yesterday afternoon by motor from New York, where they have been at the Plaza Hotel for several weeks. They spent most of their vacation in Europe, returning on August 22.

JUSTICE JAMES CLARK McREYNOLDS is now back at his apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, after a vacation that took him first to his home in Elkton, Ky., and then to Europe. He landed in New York last week and came directly on to Washington.

In keeping with their custom, Justice and Mrs. Louis Brandeis returned to Washington the early part of September to reopen their apartment on California street. For years they have spent their summers at their cottage on Cape Cod, and the past season they were joined frequently by their daughter, Mrs. Jacob H. Gilbert, and her children, Louis Brandeis, Alice and Frank.

Here off and on all summer, Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler are now back at their home on Nineteenth street for the winter. Most of their vacation time was divided between their large farm in Howard County, Md., and New York. However, they did make one long trip—out to St. Paul for a visit with relatives early last month.

Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who have been at their summer island home off the coast of Maine for several weeks, are expected to return to Washington within the next few days. Early in June they left for an extended trip to California and Jasper Park, Canada, where Mrs. Stone found time to do some water colors. Her friends here are hoping she will have another exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery of Art this year. Her show last winter was highly successful.

FROM THEIR FARM in Chester County, Pa., will come Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts on Sunday evening or Monday morning, especially for the opening of the court. Mrs. Roberts will go back to Pennsylvania shortly thereafter and will not open her house here until the first of November. After adjournment last spring, Justice Roberts joined his wife in Pennsylvania. Early in August he and Mrs. Roberts sailed for England. They returned a few days ago and have been visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton, in Connecticut. They are now back at their Pennsylvania farm.

Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black—the only Supreme Court couple not listed in the telephone directory and the most difficult, therefore, to contact—spent part of their vacation in Colorado, going out with their two sons and daughter late in June. Toward the latter part of the summer, they motored down to Alabama for a brief visit. Early this month they returned to their home on Seminary Hill, Alexandria.

Back in their apartment at the Mayflower are Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, who spent most of the summer on Nantucket Island, where they leased a cottage from Breckinridge Long, former United States Ambassador to Italy.

Both the retired justices are back in town for the winter. Former Justice Willis Van Devanter and his sister, Mrs. Sanford L. Raridan, returned Saturday from a trip to Europe. Sailing August 3 they went directly to Ireland, where they spent some time in Dublin. From there they went to Scotland, Holland and Germany. Prior to sailing to their European trip they spent several weeks at the Van Devanter farm near Ellicott City, Md. They are now back at their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Former Justice and Mrs. George Sutherland returned to Washington early last week and reopened their apartment at 2029 Connecticut avenue. After four months in Europe, they sailed home on the Queen Mary, arriving last Tuesday. They expect to be here all winter.

Nicaragua's "First Lady" Here

Harris & Ewing.

BEING WIDELY FETED here is Senora Salvadora de Somoza (above), wife of the President of Nicaragua, Gen. Anastasio Somoza. She is the guest of the Nicaraguan Minister and Senora de De Bayle and expects to be here through next week. She came to this country to place her daughter and sons in school. Luis and Anastadio are at the La Salle Military Academy in Oakdale, Long Island. Her 16-year-old daughter, Senorita Lilliam Somoza, has enrolled at Gunston Hall

Miss Youngkin To Be Married

Lieut. Rodney J. Youngkin, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Youngkin have announced the engagement of their daughter, Catherine Gertrude, to Darrell Hevenor Smith, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Smith, of Chevy Chase.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Punahou Academy in Honolulu and attended Lake Forest College and Mary Washington College. Mr. Smith is a graduate of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and attended the Graduate School of Yale University.

The marriage will take place early in November, and the couple will live in Washington after taking a Southern cruise.

The Fahnestocks Weather Storm

Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock will return the latter part of the week from Newport, where they spent the summer. Their home there safely withstood the storm, though they were without heat, light or water.

Mrs. Fahnestock's mother, Mrs. James M. Beck, has returned to Washington for the winter after spending part of the summer with her son-in-law and daughter at Newport.

Glovers Return

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., have opened their home on Massachusetts avenue for the season after spending the summer on Cape Cod.

Visitor Feted By Mrs. Hull

Senora Salvadora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua, was guest of honor at a small tea Mrs. Cordell Hull gave yesterday in her apartment at the Carlton. Other guests included Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Nicaraguan Minister, and wives of members of the legation staff. Earlier in the day Mrs. Hull was at the District Building to be the first to sign her name as a member of the 1938 Red Cross roll call.

Last evening Senora de Somoza was honored at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Warren at their home in Chevy Chase. The others present were the Minister and Senora de De Bayle; Glen Abbey and Charles C. Hosmer, of the State Department, and Mrs. Hosmer.

Mr. Warren is executive assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State, George Messersmith. He and Mrs. Warren knew Senora de Somoza when he was stationed in Nicaragua several years ago. The President's wife will be feted at numerous other parties during her stay here.

Chilean Counselor To Be Cocktail Host

The Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Huneeus will entertain at a cocktail party tomorrow afternoon in compliment to Senorita Fina Tudela, who will leave this week.

On Thursday she will go to New York and will sail from there Saturday on the Santa Barbara for Peru. She expects to return to Washington in January.

Mrs. E. M. Green, James Curtis Wed in Conn.

Only 2 Families Attend He Was Treasury Aide Both Married Before

Sunday afternoon, in Litchfield, Conn., Mrs. Eleanor Munroe Green, of that place, was married to James Freeman Curtis, of New York. Mr. Curtis was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury from 1909 until 1913 and was the first husband of the former Laura Merriam, of Washington, who was married last summer to John Messick Gross, of Bethlehem, Pa.

The ceremony took place at the First Congregational Church in the presence only of members of the two families. The bride is the daughter of the late Prof. Henry S. Munroe, dean of the Columbia University School of Mines, and Mrs. Munroe. Her marriage to Walton A. Green ended in divorce several years ago.

Mr. Curtis is the son of the late Gen. and Mrs. Greely S. Curtis, of Washington. He was divorced from his first wife last July.

Guests at the wedding were Miss Gloria Green and Douglas Green, the bride's children by her first marriage; her brother, Robert Munroe, and her cousins, Miss Frances E. Deland and Mrs. Zadie Munroe, all of Litchfield; Mrs. George H. Bostwick, of Westbury, Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. James F. Curtis, jr., of Roslyn, Long Island; Miss Pauline Curtis and Frazier Curtis, children of Mr. Curtis and Mrs. Gross. The Misses Frances, Harriet and Margaret Curtis, of Manchester, Mass., also attended the marriage of their brother.

Elizabeth Howry Returns From Summer Vacation

Miss Elizabeth Howry has returned to Washington after spending the summer in the Berkshires and at Murray Bay, Canada. Her sister, Miss Mary Howry, is still at her home in the Berkshires, about 12 miles from Pittsfield, Mass.

While the 200-year-old house withstood the ravages of the recent hurricane, the orchard was completely uprooted. Miss Howry has offered the house as a temporary Red Cross shelter for some of the many homeless families in that section. According to present plans, Miss Howry will not join her sister here until the first of November.

Debutante Wins Scholastic Honor

Miss Anne Underwood, who will make her debut this winter, has already achieved scholastic success. With Miss Henrietta Rutgers Crosby Nash, of Washington, she was among 38 sophomores at Vassar named by Dean C. Mildred Thompson at convocation of classes yesterday as having achieved distinction in work of the freshman year.

Miss Underwood, who is the daughter of Mrs. Norman Underwood, attended the Madeira School. Miss Nash prepared at Miss Hall's in Pittsfield, Mass.

Sally Hartman Is Engaged to Harold Goldberg

Washington friends of Miss Sally Ruth Hartman who attended National Park Seminary with her, were interested to hear of her engagement to Harold Goldberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Goldberg, of Lawrence, Mass. Announcement was made by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hartman, of Haverhill, Mass.

Miss Hartman also attended the Northampton School for Girls and the Erskine School in Boston. Her fiance was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1937.

The Eichelbergers Going to Georgia

Col. and Mrs. Robert L. Eichelberger will leave in several weeks for Fort Benning, Ga., where Col. Eichelberger, who has been serving as secretary to the General Staff of the Army, has been ordered for temporary duty. He will later go to his new post at San Francisco.

The Eichelbergers have given up their home at 2928 Twenty-eighth street and will live at the Wardman Park hotel before going to Fort Benning. They will return here the middle of December before sailing December 28 for California.

Margaret Stirewalt To Be Married Oct. 7

Miss Margaret Elizabeth Stirewalt has selected Friday, October 7, as the date of her marriage to Howard Edward Hassler. Miss Stirewalt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Stirewalt of this city.

The wedding will take place in St. Paul's Lutheran Church at 8 o'clock. Miss Helen D'Audelet, who will be maid of honor, and Miss Thelma Mount, one of the bridesmaids, honored Miss Stirewalt recently with a shower.

The Norberts Move From D. C. Home

The retiring Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Norbert Champsaur have moved from their home at 2214 Wyoming avenue to the house on Thirty-fourth street of Charles Lucet, Third Secretary of the embassy. They expect to be there until sailing next month to return to France.

Lieut. Col. Jean Weiser, who arrived last week to take Col. Champsaur's place, is staying at the Shoreham prior to taking a house here.

Capt. and Mrs. Jorge Canas, of Santiago, Calif., are at the Fairfax Hotel.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE DOINGS of Senators and Representatives having been swept off the front page lately by war threats and hurricanes, perhaps Washington is wondering about some of those who lend their presence to social events in the Capital's winter whirl. Where are they now and what have they been up to since Congress adjourned last June? In other words, what do members of Congress not up for re-election do with themselves in between sessions?

DUDLEY HARMON.

A check-up on Capitol Hill of some of the more socially inclined reveals:

Senator Peter Goelet Gerry is right here in Washington, having come from his home in Providence to talk over relief for Rhode Island flood victims. The Gerry house, fortunately, was untouched by the storm which left a good part of the little State under water. Mrs. Gerry, one of the Capital's most generous hostesses, is remaining in Providence.

SPRY Senator Theodore Francis Green, one of the Hill's most popular bachelors, is also occupied with flood problems, and has been touring Rhode Island with Harry Hopkins. The Senator arrived in Washington only last week on the Naval aircraft carrier Enterprise after a tour of eight South American countries. In Chile he addressed the Senate, which repaid the compliment by making him an honorary member. Although Senator Green is widely traveled, this was his first trip to South America.

TAKING A REST before starting campaign work is Senator Robert LaFollette, who plans to help his brother, Phil, in his approaching race for the governorship of Wisconsin. Mrs. LaFollette, who prefers to lend moral support to her family rather than engage actively in political work, is with her husband at their home in Madison.

WHEN we last saw Mrs. Warren Austin, she was sitting forlornly one evening on a pile of baggage in front of the Mayflower, where she and the Senator live while in Washington. They were en route to their home in Burlington, Vt., where they have been ever since. Mrs. Austin spent a lot of time this past summer in working in her garden, which she claims has been neglected for seven years. They are not expected to return to Washington until the opening of Congress.

REPRESENTATIVE Edith Nourse Rogers lost the chimney of her house in Lowell, Mass., during the hurricane; the windows fell out and the door fell in. She was unharmed because she was out watching the flood control work at 1:30 in the morning. Mrs. Rogers has been paying Washington an average of a visit a week since Congress closed, and is expected here again in the near future. She keeps her Sixteenth street apartment open all the year 'round.

WASHINGTON FRIENDS of the Warren Barbours were pleased to hear that the former Senator won, the recent New Jersey primaries, running on the Republican ticket for the office he once held. Mrs. Barbour is a famous beauty and she and her husband entertained frequently when they lived here in a house on Kalorama road, now occupied by Miss Audrey Campbell . . . Thomas Eliot, grandson of Charles Eliot, was the victor in the primaries held recently for Representative from Massachusetts. He will now have to face Republican Robert Luce, who has been in Congress for 20 years and is considered by many to be the finest parliamentarian in the House. Even Mr. Eliot's friends are afraid that his chances are rather slim against such an institution, although they are hoping the former counsel for the Social Security Board and his attractive wife will be back in Washington this winter.

FORMER SENATOR and Mrs. Hiram Bingham will return to Washington tonight from Virginia Beach, where they have been vacationing for the past ten days . . . Mrs. Horace Peters will move on Thursday into a house just around the corner from her present home, but one which she has never seen. Mrs. Peters has been ill for several weeks, so her husband not only picked out their new home, but has had it completely done over. It is on Twenty-ninth street in Georgetown. Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary have taken over the house which Mr. and Mrs. Peters have been living in.

Colombia's Envoy Takes Q St. House

Was Langhorne Home Move In October 1 Hospitality a Tradition

The Minister of Colombia and Senora de Lopez have leased the home of Mrs. Thomas Langhorne, at Twentieth and Q streets, and will occupy it October 1 as a legation. For the past few years their legation has been located at 2306 Massachusetts avenue.

Their new residence was long the home of Mrs. Thomas T. Gaff, who now lives in Bermuda, and the late Mr. Gaff, and later their son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Cary Langhorne, lived there.

A tradition of hospitality dating from Mr. and Mrs. Gaff's day has been maintained by a succession of interesting tenants. Dwight F. Davis made his home there when he was Secretary of War, his eldest daughter, Miss Alice Davis, now Mrs. Roger Makins, making her debut there. Later Claudius Huston, then chairman of the Republican National Committee, lived there with his three attractive daughters.

The last occupant of the red brick mansion was also a Minister—Demetrios Sicilianos, envoy from Greece. The Minister abandoned it after a year or so and purchased a spacious building on Sheridan Circle for use as a legation.

Mrs. W. C. Gwynne Entertains Today For Her Daughter

Mrs. William C. Gwynne will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Turnure, who arrived yesterday from her home at St. James, Long Island.

Accompanying Mrs. Turnure were her two children, and the trio will be here for an extended visit. Although the Turnure home on Long Island was not materially damaged by last week's hurricane, the water supply and electric light system have been temporarily put out of commission.

Miss Mary Wells Will Be Married

Hewitt Lea Wells, of 2425 California street, yesterday announced the betrothal of his daughter, Mary Livingston Wells, to Rudolph Kauffman, second son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Max Kauffman, of Washington. The wedding is being planned for the latter part of November.

Miss Wells attended the Madeira School here and the Master's School at Dobbs' Ferry. The prospective bridegroom, a graduate of Princeton, is now on the editorial staff of the Evening Star.

The C. L. Marlatts Expected Here On Saturday

Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lester Marlatt and their daughter, Miss Dorothy Marlatt, are expected to return Saturday from Seal Harbor, Me., where they have spent the past three months in their summer home.

Miss Marlatt, whose engagement to James Edward Reid, son of Mrs. J. E. Reid, of Rochester, Minn., was announced early this month, has not yet completed plans for her wedding, which will take place late in October or early in November.

Duchess of Atholl Honored in New York

The Duchess of Atholl, who recently arrived in New York from Canada, was honor guest at a dinner given there last evening at the Cosmopolitan Club, by a committee under the leadership of Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach and Mrs. W. Houston Kenyon, jr.

The Duchess will come to Washington October 3 and will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the Women's National Press Club October 4.

Betrothal Told

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Schulze, of Alexandria, Va., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Pearl Anne, to James B. Burch, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Burch, of Washington. The wedding will take place early in the spring.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt returned to the White House last evening and will have her first press conference of the season this morning at 11 o'clock.

Gen. Guillermo Freile, military attache at the legation of Ecuador here, and Gen. J. Enrique Rivadeneyra, Ecuadorean military attache in Rome, arrived in New York yesterday on the Grace liner Santa Barbara from Chile and other west coast ports of South America.

The newly-appointed Military Attache of the British embassy, Col Richard Valentine Read, has as his guest at the Shoreham Maj. A. G. Little of the Royal Artillery. Maj. Little will return to England in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert E. Frost have with them at Colonial Village the latter's mother, Mrs. J. H. Knoblauch, of Pasadena, Calif., who will be here for several weeks. Mrs. Frost will give a bridge luncheon tomorrow at the Columbia Country Club in honor of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Baum, of New York, were the week-end guests here of Mr. Baum's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Baum.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel S. Kaufman will return today after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harris, of Pittsburgh.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marston Linehan, whose marriage took place in Dallas, Tex., September 12, are at the Shoreham for several days after spending some time in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Linehan will reside in Tulsa, Okla.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Chase, of Riverside, Calif., are at the Dodge.

3 D. C. Women's Groups Hold First Meetings

Business and Professional Club Hears Miss White
Mrs. Tyler Addresses Pen Women's League
Daughters of American Revolution Start Work

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Yesterday was one of "first meetings" for several of the Capital's important women's organizations. The Business and Professional Women's Club was addressed by the president of its national federation, Miss Earlene White; the D. C. Branch of the National League of American Pen Women outlined plans for the season under Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, its new president, and the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution swung into activity with the first regents' round table, headed by Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent.

Miss White, speaking before the Business and Professional Women's Club at its dinner in the Lafayette Hotel, asserted the women, through their international federation, had opportunity to make a world contribution.

"Public opinion, based on truth and fact alone, can build peace," declared Miss White. "But we must be right ourselves and have done with pettiness and bickering within our own ranks before we are in a position to use our influence constructively in such a direction. The International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, with a membership of women leaders in business and the professions the world over, can be a potent influence in international understanding."

Only the women from the democratic nations were in a position to express themselves freely at the recent Budapest conference of the International Federation, she said, and in some cases these are now making efforts to help some of their sister members in countries where women are being thrust from their places through the will of dictators.

Her comment on the world crisis was in terms of the tragedy she saw written in the faces of the women from the countries immediately involved and what they told her of their situation. She stressed the high type of leaders she found among the delegates, including Mme. Melczer, president of the Hungarian federation who, for six years has been in parliament; Senator Plaminkova, a vice president of the Czechoslovakian group, and Dr. Ellen Douglas, an eminent physician, who heads the Canadian federation.

She said that, with a full quota of delegates and alternates — 40 American women in all—the American Federation was represented as it never had been before in the seven years of the International Federation.

The record of the American federation for the past year has surpassed any in its history, she reported, with more clubs, more individual members, and better attendance at the regional conferences and board meetings.

Miss White was introduced by Miss Nina Kinsella, president of the District Club. More than 100 attended.

Pen Women Open Their Studio

The District of Columbia Branch of the League of American Pen Women met at its studio in the Grafton Hotel, which has been attractively arranged for the fall season by Mattie Richards Tyler and Azalea Green Badgeley. Oil paintings by members were assembled for the October exhibition by Ethel Davis, art chairman.

Mrs. Tyler, who presided during the meeting, presented Evelyn Norcross Sherrill and Minnie Briggs, first and second vice presidents, and they introduced the chairmen serving under them who outlined various activities.

Mrs. Theodore Tiller announced the book review luncheons on the second Thursdays of the month; Liela Pier King, fellowship teas; Maidy Campbell, a series of programs opening with a story recital November 7 by Mrs. Adlyn M. Keffer, national president of the Story League; Claudia Rice Scott, who announced the Sunday, teas, and Alethea Todd Alderson, chairman of poetry, one of the largest groups of the branch, which will open its meetings October 14.

Other chairmen include Myrta Cawood, sales; Thora Hinshaw Seaton, music; Victoria Faber Stevenson, radio workshop; Helen Orr Watson, fiction; Phronsie Marsh, nonfiction; Ann Singleton, journalism and Joan Southward, drama. The family night dinner will begin October 3 at the Grafton, with programs following.

D. A. R. Regents And Chapter Meet

In addition to the meeting of the regents' round table of the D. A. R. last night at the Mayflower Hotel, there was a session of Victory Chapter at the home of Mrs. Chester B. Watts. Talks were made by Mrs. Louis A. Abbott, Mrs. Ethel T. Fulton, Mrs. James W. Crabtree, Mrs. Sherman S. Slick and Mrs. J. Paul Yoder.

The D. A. R. chapters of the District are planning a reception October 26 in honor of Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, and her staff of officers. The affair will be at the Mayflower, with Mrs. Barton Embry as committee chairman.

Scandinavian Visitors Here

Three Y. W. C. A. workers from Scandinavia arrived in Washington last night to visit the local "Y. W." and to spend a few days sight-seeing in the Capital. They have been in Ontario, Canada, attending the World Council of the organization which met there from Sept. 7 to 17. They will be followed later in the week by other European delegates.

The visitors, who are staying at Strong Residence, are Mrs. Ester Lutteman, and Miss Signe Louise Nilsson, of Lund, Sweden, and Miss Ingrid Olsen, of Oslo, Norway.

Both Miss Olsen and Mrs. Lutteman were delegates to the council. Miss Olsen is former girls' work secretary for the Norwegian National Y. W. C. A. and is especially interested in the camp program, which she will study here. Mrs. Lutteman is vice president of the chief Swedish national committee of the Y. W. C. A., a member of the chief committee of the World Students' Christian Federation and of the national committee of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Miss Nilsson, a graduate of the University of Lund, is also a member of the latter organization and is active in national problems.

The Girl Reserve executive committee of the Y. W. C. A. met yesterday to discuss autumn plans and also arrangements for the conference of leaders from six States, to be held here October 14, 15 and 16.

Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president, and Miss Elizabeth Haney, general secretary of the "Y. W." conferred with the committee. Members include Miss Mabel R. Cook, Girl Reserve executive, and her staff, Miss Margaret Graves, Mrs. Van T. Smith and Miss Mildred Chapin—Mrs. Arthur L. Brandon, chairman; Mrs. William Foster Burdick, vice chairman; Mrs. Ernest Danly and Mrs. G. S. Barger, representing the mothers; Mrs. George Lipscomb, the committee; Miss Grace Johnson and Miss Veryl Schulte, the teachers.

Woman's Club Of Alexandria To Hold Picnic

The Woman's Club of Alexandria will open its season with a picnic tomorrow at Government Grounds on the Memorial highway, near Fort Hunt. Members will take box luncheons and the hospitality committee, of which Mrs. George Trayer is chairman, will provide the coffee. Mrs. Dulany Hammond is in charge of transportation.

Members who have had interesting vacations during the summer will describe them in a program devoted to travelogues. Mrs. Walter DeB. Brookings will talk on Bermuda; Mrs. David C. Book, on Yellowstone, and Mrs. James Dowie on Mexico.

In case of rain, the picnic will be an indoor party, held at Gadsby's Tavern. Mrs. Oscar B. Ryder, president of the club, will preside.

Beta Sigma Phi Meets Tonight at 'Y'

Gamma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will meet this evening at 7:45 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. Plans for the use of the national program outline will be made, and for the Halloween dance to be given for members on October 31. Ella Pharaoh, chairman of the social committee, is in charge of arrangements for the dance.

Two new members will be added to Gamma's roster at this meeting. Elsie Errichson is transferring her membership from Des Moines, Iowa, and Sally Halzman, of Oregon, is being initiated in the second degree of the chapter.

The subject of the program is "A Definitation of Happiness," with Ruth Gilbert in charge of the discussion. The members of her committee are Sally Holzman, Lucille Sullivan, Bonnie McKeith and Enid Rasmussen.

War Mothers Visit Luray

Gold Star Mothers, here for their annual convention, yesterday asked each other, "Must there be war again?" as they followed out their program.

Some of them went by bus to Luray Caverns for an all-day trip. They left at 8 in the morning, had luncheon there and returned to the Continental Hotel, their headquarters, for dinner. Others, including the organizer and national president, Mrs. Mathilda Burling, of New York, remained in Washington for the day.

With a group, including several West Virginia women, Mrs. Burling went to Arlington Cemetery, where she conducted short services at the grave of the son of Mrs. Ella DeVaughn, of Parkersburg. In the party was Mrs. Cora Fisher, who lost two sons on the battlefield and two later, after they had returned home. Another was Mrs. Fmma Gannon, of Brooklyn, mother of two sons who fell in action. Among others who lost two sons were Mrs. Mary Killman, of Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Seagriff, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Margaret Leonard, of Astoria.

A happy reunion was that of Mrs. Gannon and Mrs. Irah Edgell, of Greenwood, Del., who had not seen each other since 1930, when they left together for the Gold Star Mothers' pilgrimage to France.

Today the convention will be devoted to reports and a ceremony at 2:30 this afternoon in which Col. James M. Moss, of the United States Flag Association will present a silk flag to Mrs. Burling. At the top of the staff, in place of the eagle, will be a gold star.

Mrs. Burling is sponsor of Gold Star Mothers' Day and was responsible for the Gold Star Mothers' pilgrimage to France. She was for seven years New York State president.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Smart or Lucky?

It often happens wit and pluck,
Unrecognized, are labeled luck.
—Old Mother Nature.

Ever since the hunter wit hhis terrible gun had first appeared at the big slough Sora the Rail had been anxious and uneasy. Jerry Muskrat had noticed it.

"What are you so afraid for? That fellow doesn't want you. Me wants Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck and their children," said Jerry.

"That's what you think," retorted Sora. "He does want those Ducks, but if he can't get them he'll try to get me."

"Pooh! You're too small. He won't bother with any one as small as you," replied Jerry.

"Says you, but I know better," retorted Sora. "I've seen too many of my relatives killed by these two-legged hunters not to know that if he sees me I'm in danger."

"If you feel that way about it, why don't you leave and move along on your way South?" Jerry wanted to know.

Sora sighed. "I don't want to go yet. There is good feeding here and I want to stay as long as I can. Besides, I probably would as I can. Besides, I probably would be no better off if I did go. All along the way wherever there is good feeding there will be terrible guns waiting. You should be thankful, Jerry Muskrat, that you are not obliged to make a long journey in constant danger of losing your life. Oh, dear, there comes that hunter now! I must hide."

Sure enough the hunter had appeared at the other end of the slough. With his gun held in readiness he started to walk around it. He wore rubber boots and waded about among the rushes and reeds and grasses. Jerry dived and swam under water to his house. He came up close beside it and floated there with only his nose and eyes above water. He watched watched that hunter.

The latter was not hunting as he had when he was after the Black Ducks. Then he had moved slowly and with care, trying to keep out of sight. Now he was making no tramping about rather noisily effort to keep out of sight. He was among the reeds and rushes. Even Jerry understood at last that he was trying to scare into flight any feathered folk hiding there.

"I hope Sora is too well hidden to be found," thought Jerry.

Hardly had he thought it when up out of the rushes just ahead of the hunter rose a small brown form. It was Sora the Rail. Up only just high enough to clear the tops of the rushes rose Sora and then flew straight away from the hunter. It was slow flight. There was no speed at all. It was all too evident that Sora was not a fast flyer. That effort to escape was pitiful to watch.

Up went the terrible gun. Sora had flown only a few feet. Bang went the gun and down dropped Sora among the rushes! Or did Sora drop first and the gun hanb afterward? Jerry couldn't be sure.

"To bad. Too bad," muttered Jerry. Then he watched the hunter tramp about among the rushes where Sora the Rail had fallen. He seemed to be looking for something and not finding what he was looking for. Finally he went away.

Jerry swam over to the place where he had seen Sora drop. He began to look around.

"Have you lost something?" asked a familiar voice.

Jerry turned quickly. Peeping out from a clump of rushes was Sora. "He didn't get you!" cried Jerry happily.

"Of course, he didn't, or I wouldn't be here," replied Sora.

"My, but you were lucky!" exclaimed Jerry.

"Was I" asked Sora, his eyes twinkling. "I thought I was smart."

"What do you mean?" demanded Jerry.

"You thought I was slow, and so I was flying. I can't fly fast so I didn't try to. But I dropped more quickly than he could shoot, and once down out of sightI hid. It is an old trick of the family," explained Sora.

"Just the same you were lucky," insisted Jerry, and stuck to it.

A COMMITTEE of St. Stephens and the Incarnation Church will give a benefit card party for the building fund of the Episcopal Home for Children Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Thomas Circle Club. Mrs. W. H. Plummer is general chairman of arrangements.

A SPECIAL CAR of Fairmont College girls from the West came in on the Baltimore & Ohio yesterday morning, with an overflow of the attractive young students occupying space in other sections of the train. The girls were all from Texas and Oklahoma. Among them were Martha Washington of Dallas and Mary Washington of San Antonio, both new students, who, despite their colonial names, are quite modern.

Also in the Texas group were Catherine Johnson, Josephine Kennady, and Barbara Ann Smith, all seniors from Fort Worth; Marjorie Ridgway, Frances Zabloudil, Ann Newton, Martha Teas, freshmen from Fort Worth; Betty Dorsey, a senior, and Dorothy Dorsey, a freshman, from Dallas; Patty Clement, a senior, from Waco; Nancy Fortner, freshman, Sweetwater; Bibba Wiseman, a freshman, from Dallas.

The Oklahoma girls were Betty Jane Smith, a senior, Oklahoma City; Betty Jane McGowan, freshman, Ardmore; Erleen Jones, senior, Oklahoma City; Jean Fleming, a freshman from Tulsa; Jo Martineau, senior, Oklahoma City, and, also in the party, Eleanor Hardy, a senior from St. Louis, Mo., who joined the other girls there.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SALON, Eight and Forty, will launch its fall season October 5, when a "pouvoir" will be held at the home of the chapeau, Mrs. Edith Warren Quinn.

At this time the appointments made by the chapeau for 1938-39 will be ratified, and the new officers will assume their duties. Plans for continuation of the work at the children's sanatorium, in Glenn Dale, will be discussed. Last year the salon won National recognition for work done there.

MRS ELLEN LOUISE WARREN, of District of Columbia Salon, 8 and 40, brought honor to it with her appointment as l'archiviste nationale of the organization at the recent California marche. the office, in simple English, is that of historian. Mrs. Helen McCabe, of the District salon, was appointed national public relations chairman.

Mrs. Thelma Bailey, of Birmingham, Mich., le chapeau national, will make her official visit to the local organization November 10 and 11. Mrs. Warren remained in California for two weeks, visiting various salons with the national chapeau, and will return October 3.

Eligibility to the organization is restricted to wives, mothers or daughters of legionnaires, who have served the American Legion Auxiliary in executive capacities for at least three years.

THE HARVEST HOP, annual fall dance of Beta Chi Sorority, will be held Saturday at the Washington Hotel. Plans for the party were completed last night at a meeting called by Mrs. Mary McCleary of Mu chapter, chairman of the interchapter entertainment committee.

Serving with her are Jeannette Fuchs, of Gamma chapter; Dorothy Hunt, Eta; Margaret Esser, Pi; Charlotte Mark, Rho; Louise Schultz, Xi; Pauline Sisson, Upsilon; Ozella Dozier, Alpha Beta, and Mrs. Pearl Rogers, Alpha.

LEROY H. THAYER, new president of the Dancing Masters of America, was honored by the Dancing Teachers Club of Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D. C., at a dinner Sunday night. Dancing masters from Philadelphia and New York also were present.

Before the dinner Mr. Thayer was re-elected president of the local club at a business meeting of the members of the District and the two States. Others who will take office at the next meeting are Julia Harper, of Richmond, first vice president; Julia Cunningham, Washington, second vice president; Ella Banks of Baltimore, secretary, and Charles Henkel of Newport News, treasurer. The three directors are Mary Callaway, Alexandria; Adelaide Courtney and Mary Margaret Mahon, both of Washington.

The club received instruction at the meeting from Paul Mathis, nationally known dancer, formerly of New York but now in Washington; Miss Cunningham and Miss Courtney.

W. C. T. U. to Meet In Virginia Friday

The annual meeting of the Alexandria City-Arlington County W. C. T. U. will be held in the new Educational Building of the First Baptist Church, Alexandria, on Friday. Sessions will begin at 11 a. m. with reports of the year's work and election of officers. At noon there will be a box luncheon with coffee served by the Allison W. C. T. U.

At the afternoon session, from 1:30 to 3:30 o'clock, there will be several short addresses on modern activities of the W. C. T. U. and discussion of future plans. Echoes from the National W. C. T. U. convention held in San Francisco last month will be given by Mrs. Frances Mabry and Miss Marion Merrill, of Arlington, and Mrs. Amy C. Weech, of Washington. Special music is in charge of Miss Irene Dodge, of Alexandria.

Former Dean Is Visiting Mary Baldwin

Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell, former dean of Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Va., and now program chairman of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women, went to Staunton last night accompanied by Mrs. Jaromil Sladek, of Prague, who will address the assembly of the college this morning.

Mrs. Sladek, who spoke before the A. A. U. W. Sunday night, will wear native Czechoslovakian costume in her talk today and will discuss the customs, education and status of women in her country. This evening, she will address the International Relations Club of Staunton, and, speaking on the minority in Czechoslovakia, give the background of the present crisis, although not commenting on the situation itself. Mrs. Sladek, with her husband, Dr. Sladek, a professor in Charles University, has been in this country since June.

Mrs. Campbell, who was for seven years dean of Mary Baldwin, has been going to the college each week recently, setting up a publicity department preparatory to the four-year celebration of the centennial of the institution which occurs in 1942. It is the oldest college in Virginia founded solely for women.

Among the prominent alumnae of the college are Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission.

Events Referred to in Chancellor Hitler's Historic Address

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

"It is not so much Czechoslovakia; it is the name Benes." "You know that weak Germany was cheated badly. The result was the Versailles Treaty with its terrible consequences."

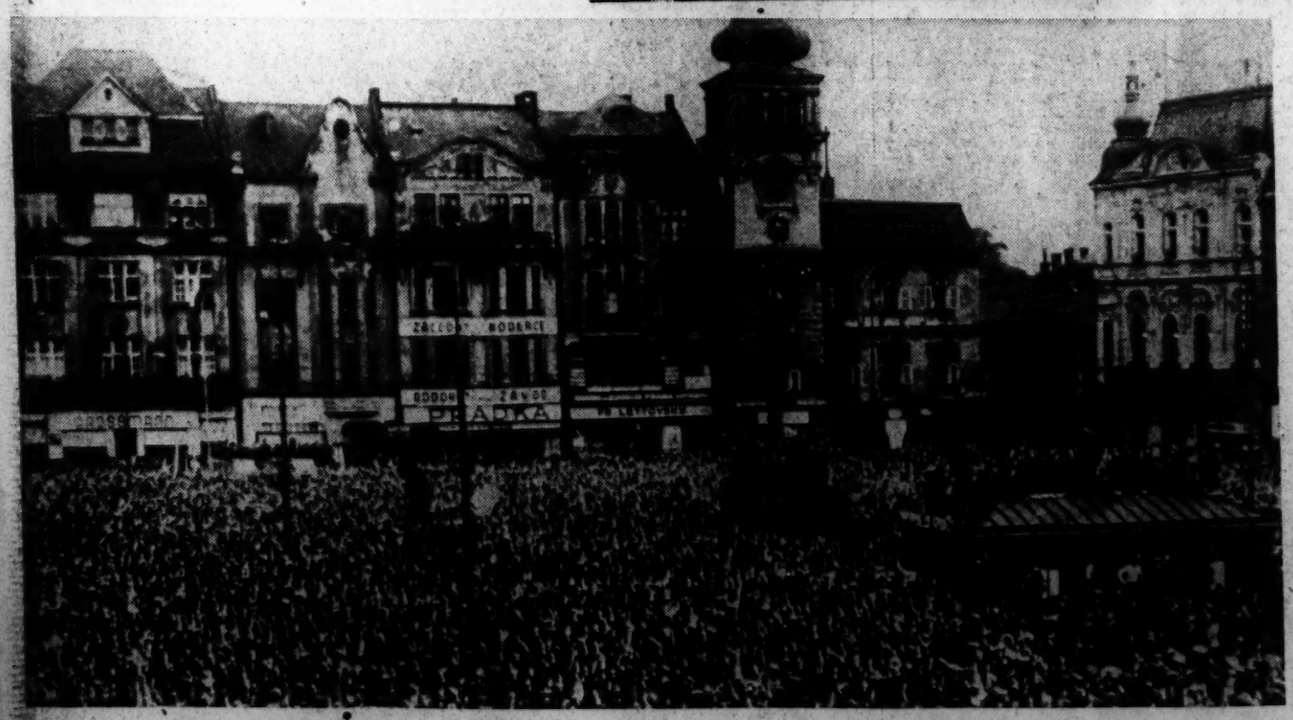
"Now that the hour of a great decision has arrived," Hitler told his listeners, "the German nation, and not the Fuehrer, is speaking."

"Our relationship has become a league of hearts," the Fuehrer told his audience, referring to Premier Mussolini. "Germany and Italy will stand together and be able to defend themselves as a solid bloc if worst comes to worst."

"I told France after the return of the Saar region there was no difference between us any more. We want nothing from France, nothing whatever." (French residents, above, leave their Saar homes for France after the plebiscite vote showed an overwhelming German victory, January, 1935.)

EDUARD BENES,
President of Czechoslovakia.

"I can tell you now I have spent billions right here for armaments. Today we have an armed force the like of which the world has never seen. I saw to it the most modern army with the most effective weapons was established. I have created an air force that protects Germany against any and every attack. We have created an unparalleled air force and tank force in a constant effort, night and day, the past five years." (Nazi fighting planes shown above, infantry troops at left and units of heavy tank corps at right.)



"It is the last territorial claim I will make and a claim which I will not give up," continued Hitler, speaking of the Sudeten area in Czechoslovakia. "I am ready and have been ready for a plebiscite to be conducted in all Czechoslovakia." (Huge crowd shown above in town square of Ostrau, Czechoslovakia, were demonstrating after a Sudeten-German deputy had been shot.)

"My memorandum is the last and final one," declared Hitler. "All parts that want to join the Reich must join now, immediately. I have decided that we will place this land under German sovereignty." Map above shows exactly what Hitler demands in Czechoslovakia. Lightly-shaded areas are those in which he demands plebiscites be held before November 25.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

SCENE: Champagne table at a diplomatic reception.
PEOPLE: Two diplomats, some Americans, some smart gals.

Clare Boothe . . . mordant

THE TOAST (By a disturbingly lovely brunette): "Here's to perfidious Albion!"

(Don't bother to look it up; perfidious means faithless and Albion is England.)

But that, of course, was before England's brave and forthright declaration yesterday that she wouldn't throw the Czechs to the wolves.

• • • •

Lately President Roosevelt has been wearing the snappiest flannel suit in his wardrobe; a medium gray with pretty definite light stripes an inch and a half apart; between the heavy stripes are three somewhat fainter stripes clustered together. The general effect is stripey.

The President has quite a sartorial flair; he is probably the only high official in Washington who owns a green Norfolk jacket.

• • • •

CAPITAL CAVIAR: New G. O. P. campaign song: "I've Got a Pocketful of Dreams" . . . In his recent newsreel shots Lindy looks a bit baldish . . . In idle moments Paul Decker, a Chicago banker, has learned to recite by heart names of 15 Confederate generals, 15 Northern generals, and all the Vice Presidents; but he can't name more than four G. O. P. Presidential possibilities, nor less than 20 Democratic.

". . . a toast to scarey England"

Some of the embassies are trying out a new technique at receptions . . . They surround the refreshment table with a phalanx, a sort of Maginot line of stalwart butlers, who ladle out rather scantier dishes of chow than Washington guests are apt to dish for themselves.

• • • •

Behind the table is a narrow runway, a sort of communications trench through which reinforcements of butlers can rush to protect any threatened sector, like the salmon en gelee or the galantine of capon. Only the most experienced Washingtonian can break through this defense. I saw one general's widow craftily make a flanking attack around behind the tea service, but all she could reach with a half-gainer dive was the olives.

• • • •

In the new Fortune straw vote President Roosevelt's popularity stands at 62%, compared with 54% in the latest Gallup survey . . . This is an astonishing difference; translated into the national vote it would be 3,500,000, which would be decisive in a fairly close election . . . Fortune's figures thus put his popularity higher than before the purge . . . Even higher than at 1936's high tide. Anyhow, there's a set of figures to rejoice both camps.

• • • •

GILT OFF THE DOME: Some one in the Capital is spreading the canard that John Hamilton and Franklyn Waltman, of the G. O. P., supplied the mordant anti-Roosevelt wisecracks for Clare Boothe's new play, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." They wouldn't do such a thing, anyone who knows 'em will testify . . . But the wow-line isn't exactly political. It's Benay Venuta, chided for dubious behavior among the rhododendrons, who retorts "It's a week-end, isn't it?"

". . . his applause was indiscreet"

Before Ambassador Josephus Daniels again applauds any of President Cardenas' torrid Mexican oratory he will seek the guidance of an interpreter . . . Our envoy sat on the platform while the Mex prexy was laying it on Hull, Roosevelt and the Yanquis in general . . . Amiable, and innocent of Spanish, Daniels clapped and clapped.

F. D. R. will have something to twit the only man he calls "Boss," next time the ex-Sec. of the Navy comes to the Capital and stays, as usual, at the White House.

• • • •

With one telephone at each ear, Tommy Corcoran sat in his tenth floor office at the RFC, talking long distance and locally at the same time . . . Between sentences he found time to gaze up the Potomac toward Georgetown.

"I like that arch in the bridge at sunset," he said. "Isn't it gorgeous?"

• • • •

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Young Henry Morgenthau 3d, grandson of an ambassador and son of a Cabinet member, is working around the Government offices learning the ropes . . . Doc Parran, the anti-syphilitis crusader, wants insurance companies to include Kahn and Wasserman tests in their physical examinations . . . F. D. R. got the biggest guffaw of the year when, asked about the Maryland bridges in a press conference, the ones announced just before the Tydings primary, he dead-panned (puzzled like as of to ask) What bridges? What Hitler wants is a blank Czech.

Zoning Order Upheld by D.C. Appeals Court

Lot at 12th, Randolph Store Ban Held Legal Edgerton Gives Opinion

The Zoning Commission's refusal to permit stores and shops at Michigan avenue, Twelfth and Randolph streets northeast was upheld by the District Court of Appeals yesterday.

Gilbert Leventhal and Henry Oxenburg sued the commission to require a rezoning and issuance of building permits on the claim that nearby property was being used for business purposes. They lost in the District Court and appealed.

Associate Justice Henry W. Edgerton upheld the District Court, declaring the law to be that "the action of administrative officers is not to be declared unconstitutional unless the court is convinced that it is clearly arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the general welfare."

Question of Opinion

Of the plaintiffs' contention that the area was unfit for residential purposes anyway, Justice Edgerton said such fitness was "a matter not merely of degree but of opinion."

Operation of a cleaning establishment in the area was not affected by the court's ruling, because it was there before the zoning laws were enacted.

Chief Justice Lawrence Groner heard the case with Justices Edgerton and Harold M. Stephens.

Citizens Ask Delay

Manor Park Citizens Association last night urged the Zoning Commission to delay action on proposed new regulations until District citizen units could investigate and offer recommendations.

The group opposed the city's plan of extending Oneida place northwest from Seventh to Eighth street, in a semicircle and urged a straight roadway. It also asked that assessments for the new road be levied only against holders of property adjacent to it.

Widow, 91, Is Own Lawyer In Suit for Civil War Pension

Ohio Woman Mails Papers to District Court Was Refused Money Because of Divorce Separation Found Illegal but Funds Withheld

Mrs. Louise Dean Moyer, 91-year-old widow of a Civil War veteran, was her own lawyer yesterday when she sued in District Court to compel the Veterans' Administration to give her a pension. She asked the court to hurry, because she "expects" to live only 14 months more.

Mrs. Moyer's crisp, determined signature as counsel "pro se" dotted 40 pages of flawlessly worded legal papers and the sheaf of photostats supporting her claim that the administration doesn't know its law. She mailed the papers from her home in Marion, Ohio, where she swore that she is penniless, asking to file the suit without having to the bride of Henry Dean, in 1862, just before he joined the Tenth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. He served until Appomattox and became a first sergeant.

Mrs. Moyer's petition said she was 15 years old when she became They parted in 1900, after 35 years together. Cruelty and drinking caused it, she told the court. And when her husband died in 1915, the petition continued, she applied for a widow's pension and learned for the first time, from the Veterans' Administration, that her husband divorced her in Erie County, Ohio, May 17, 1905.

Mrs. Dean found new romance and married Jacob Moyer, letting the pension go. After Mr. Moyer died she renewed her claim. Not until 1936, the petition said, did she unearth the record of the divorce. The Ohio courts promptly set it aside, because it was gotten with a false affidavit that the Deans lived in Erie County.

Thus legally reinstated as the Widow Dean, she returned to the Pension Bureau, only to have the bureau "claim the power to review factual findings of the Ohio courts and hold the new order void because Ohio law made a divorce irreversible."

Studded with Supreme Court opinions is Mrs. Moyer's argument that this does not apply to a divorce obtained by fraud. "The marital status of the citizens of Ohio," she concludes, "is solely and exclusively in the jurisdiction of the courts of Ohio . . . There may be 48 kinds of widows, yet the administration of the veterans' office must pay the pension authorized by Congress."

Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator who was named defendant, has 20 days to answer the action.

U. of Md. Experts Develop Hardy Type of Spinach

University of Maryland scientists yesterday announced development of a hardier type of spinach, that will survive the rigors of winter.

The new type, Maryland Savoy, was developed from Virginia Savoy, a trade type, by subjecting the plants to cold weather and then using only the surviving herbs for propagating successive crops.

Dr. W. A. Frazier, of the university, completed tests this year.

Air Board Starts Survey of D. C. Landing Fields

Civil Aeronautics Authority engineers have begun work on an exhaustive survey of airports serving the District, it was announced yesterday by Clinton M. Hester, administrator of the authority.

Acting in accordance with the Congressional act setting up the authority and ordering a report on the Nation's airports to be submitted to Congress by February 1, 1939, the new body has already begun investigation in several sections of the country.

Condition of runways, size of fields, hangar capacity and cost of land and improvements are among the points to be covered in reports on at least 800 of America's 2,300 airports. Fields must be surveyed by December 1 if results are to be embodied in the first report, it was explained, so the authority is beginning with the most important and representative in the country, including the Washington airport and others in the Capital area.

Engineers with headquarters in Washington also are preparing reports on major fields in Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

Kelley, Police Radio Director, Demoted to Foot Patrolman

Lieutenant Loses Rank Built Station WPDW Department Surprised

Lieut. James L. Kelley, 40, builder and director of WPDW, Washington police radio station, yesterday was demoted to a private and placed on foot patrol duty by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police.

In signing the order, Maj. Brown said the change was "for the good of the service." He said he had not decided to which precinct Kelley would be assigned.

Sergt. Frank M. Beall was placed in charge of police radio communications.

Kelley, termed "one of the best radio men in the country" by Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, personally drew the plans and installed the police radio system in 1930. He saved the District nearly $100,000 by his knowledge and ability to manufacture radio transmitters and receivers, Edwards asserted.

He was promoted to the rank of detective sergeant July 1, 1931, and made an acting lieutenant February 16, 1933. He was appointed to the force September 24, 1921.

Kelley's demotion was a surprise to officials and personnel of the department. He was so well thought of that Maj. Brown said a few months ago he planned to have Congress designate him a captain.

The former lieutenant was injured in an automobile accident at Farmville, Va., in March, 1935. Albert Sardo, local undertaker riding with Kelley, was killed in the accident.

Kelley was responsible for the linking of local police communications with that of the Maryland State police with the installation of two-way radio between the departments.

Several months ago he completed plans for the installation of a two-way radio system between scout cars and the dispatcher's office at the Tenth Precinct station. The plans were never carried out.

Housing Men Laud New Deal Program

Urge Decentralization Labor Held 'Unsold' Room Cost Limits Hit Call Politicians Wary

Praise of the Federal housing program as "one of the greatest achievements of the Roosevelt Administration" was coupled with a plea for further decentralization at a conference of the American Federation of Housing Authorities at the Hay-Adams last night.

John Carroll, of Boston, chairman of the Massachusetts State Board of Housing and newly-elected president of the Federation, proposed that the Federal Government raise $1,000,000,000 for long-range housing by inviting the wealthy to loan their money to the Government without interest but with a guarantee of exemption from inheritance taxes.

Carroll, labor representative on the Massachusetts board, told his audience that "the rank and file of labor is not sold on housing yet." Every politician is "scared speechless" of making housing a public issue, he added.

Decentralizing "Essential"

Langdon Post, former head of the New York housing authority and retiring president of the federation, asserted that the "most essential feature of the housing program is its "decentralizing spirit and atmosphere" which "forces the administrator here in Washington to decentralize whether he likes it or not."

Post added that "I don't think that decentralization is as complete as it should be, and I'm not sure it can be until the whole country is housing conscious." He termed the speed with which the Wagner-Steagall program has been put into effect as "perfectly amazing" by contrast with former years.

A "fight" between the A. F. H. A. and the National Association of Housing officials was characterized by Post as "utterly and perfectly ridiculous."

Cost Limits Ridiculous

Charles Abrams, of New York, general counsel of the federation, lauded the Administration's housing program as one of its "greatest" accomplishments but declared that the act fails to reach the lowest income groups. Severely criticizing present limitations on average room-cost, Abrams warned that "Congress must realize it is not building for 10 years but for 60 years."

"In the United States," Abrams charged, "the architect has never had freedom to build in accordance with his own ideas—he was formerly limited by the profit motive and now, in public housing, by economy, which forces construction of small rooms that in the near future may turn out to be substandard."

"It is on the interest date that the fate of housing rests," said Abrams. He looked forward to local financing of projects with a possible saving in costs.

Besides Carroll, the following officers were elected: Post, chairman of the board of directors; George E. Evans, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Housing; C. W. Perkins, Baltimore housing authority, and the Rev. E. Robert Moore, New York housing authority, vice presidents; Abrams, general counsel, and Miles R. Frisbie, of Washington, secretary, acting treasurer and executive director.

Experts Differ On Westover Crash

Burbank, Calif., Sept. 20 (AP).—Expert witnesses differed at an inquest today as to the cause of the air crash last Wednesday in which Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, and Sergt. Samuel Hymes were Killed.

The coroner's jury found the two met death accidentally and that Gen. Westover was piloting the Army attack ship when it fell as he attempted a landing. The plane burst into flames, setting fire to two houses and an automobile.

Board to Set Base Pay for Office Women

Action Due in 2 Weeks Beauticians Get $18 New Scale Mandatory

The Minimum Wage Board yesterday announced that a conference to set a basic wage for women office workers here would be held in two weeks.

Miss Gwen Geach, secretary, said there were no statistics revealing the actual number of women employed in local offices, other than Government.

Labor, employers and the public will have three representatives each on the board. The employer and employe representatives are selected by their respective groups.

Basic wages for 4,500 women in local beauty parlors became mandatory yesterday. To hairdressers, manicurists and other experienced cosmetologists was granted $18 per week, the highest such wage ever set by the board.

All public hearings in connection with the office workers will be held in the old Police Court Building. Previous hearing have been held in the District Building board room.

Officials of the wage board will meet this week to map the fall schedule of hearings. Miss Geach said the wage conference for women workers in the few manufacturing plants in this city will follow the office worker conference.

Members of the Minimum Wage Board are Mrs. William Kittle, chairman; Arthur L. Schoenthal, labor representative, and Claude H. Woodward, employer member.

Shoemaker Heads 3d Division Society

William A. Shoemaker, of the Seventy-Sixth Field Artillery, Battery E, last night was elected president of Washington branch Third (Marine) Division Society.

Other officers elected are William A. Schmitz, Sixth Engineers Headquarters, vice president; Harvey Cedar, Third Field Artillery, Brigade Headquarters, secretary, re-elected; William A. Link, Sixth Engineers, treasurer, re-elected; William W. Logan, Sixth Engineers, sergeant-at-arms; Lieut. Col. Holland L. Robb, U. S. A., Sixth Engineers, historian; Gilbert S. Decker, Thirty-Eighth Infantry, Company K, chaplain, re-elected.

Washington's Kin, 2 Girls, Meet in D. C.

Martha and Mary Washington, blood kin of America's first President, registered yesterday at the Fairmont School here. Both 18, pretty and from Texas, they had never heard of each other until they got acquainted on the train that brought them.

But it's a little complicated.

Mary, who knows her family tree down to the last root, explained that her great-great grandfather was Joseph Washington, son of Gen. Washington's uncle. That would make her a fifth cousin, more or less, of the father of his country. Martha, however, was a little more vague but she confessed to being directly descended from a brother of the general.

Blond Mary comes from San Antonio. She said her father is in the oil business.

"Mine is, too," explained brunette Martha. Just another coincidence.

Group Health Now Asking Physical Test

Will Check Misusers Applications Pile Up May Add 2 Doctors 2,400 in Association

Group Health Association, Inc., co-operative health organization formed among Government employes in the executive establishment, is now requiring applicants to pass a physical examination before being approved for membership, it was learned yesterday.

Perry R. Taylor, administrator of the association, declared this was necessary to confine membership to persons interested in the group health movement and desirous of joining to avoid incurring heavy expense as a result of unexpected illness.

"We found," he said, "that some people would join merely in order to have the association bear the cost of treatment which they knew they would have to have."

As a result of the requirement, however, Mr. Taylor said, the association may have to employ one or two additional physicians to speed up the work of examining applicants. Several hundred applications have piled up, he declared. The association now has 2,400 members, he said. The membership drive started last month, also with a campaign to obtain funds with which to build a hospital is expected to increase the membership to about 3,300.

A special drive for members, Taylor, said, is being conducted this week in the procurement division of the Treasury Department.

1939 Convention Boost Seen Here

National conventions will attract approximately 30 per cent more delegates to Washington in 1939 than in 1938, according to preliminary reports made public yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee of the Greater National Capital Committee.

More than 150,000 visitors will have attended 200 conventions here by the end of the present year.

Certificates of merit were awarded to Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Board of Trade and a member of the Greater National Capital Committee since its organization eight years; Lloyd B. Wilson, former chairman of the executive committee, and John A. Reilly, who headed the committee's last drive for funds.

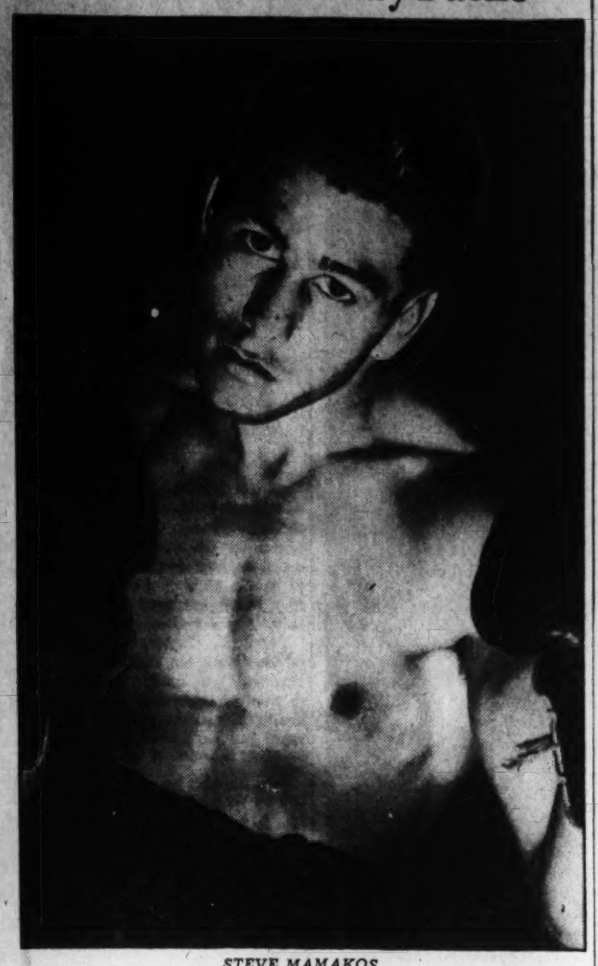
Cubs Win, 6-3, Gain Half Game on Bucs

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1938 X*

Steve Meets Bobby Pacho



STEVE MAMAKOS

The popular Southwest youngster tackles toughest foe he has met to date when he bumps into Bobby Pacho in the feature bout at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Pacho 6-5 Favorite Over Steve

Fight at Stadium Steve's Foe Tough 'War' Expected Styles Are Similar

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Mamakos, the ambitious youngster who leads with his chin—and gets away with it—goes chinning for a major victory tonight at Griffith Stadium at the expense of Bobby Pacho, his opponent in a 10-round bout that may make the current European quarrel seem like a mild disturbance by comparison.

Undefeated in his last six starts the muscular and durable Steve tonight stacks up against a man who has met the best of them and has given all of them a stout tussle for the marbles. He boxes a man equipped with a style similar to his own, and who punches as hard if not a trifle harder.

In cold, black print Pacho is a 6-5 choice for at least two good reasons, the most important of which is the experience he boasts. The Arizona-born Mexican has been a veritable Gulliver of the cauliflower sport, traveling the world over and fighting as he went. He has fought far better fighters than Steve is, including Barney Ross, Wesley Ramey, Leonard De Genio, Davey Day, Sammy Fuller, Harry Dublinsky and Ceferino Garcia.

Outsmart Steve

From them he picked up the finer points of punching, and learned the delicate art of ducking. He figures to win by simply outsmarting the game Washington youngster. Steve has been meeting an increasingly better brand of opposition, but never before has he crossed swords with a big-leaguer of Pacho's type.

Pacho also figures to win because he has been employed steadily, while Mamakos has been inactive since beating up George Abrams about seven weeks ago. Both are the type of gladiator who must fight regularly to keep their eyes keen and the muscles supple, and Mamakos may be a trifle rusty tonight.

But come what may, victory or defeat, Mamakos will be in there pitching, swinging from bell to bell as is his habit, and a fighter like that is always dangerous. Pacho has slipped since he was a featured performer at Madison Square Garden, and it may be that he has gone back enough to make it an even contest. Judging by his recent performances this doesn't appear to be the case, but it is, at least, a possibility.

Steve's Tough

Mamakos has come a long way since dropping his last decision to Abrams. He got the decision over Tony Ciaccio, Battling Burroughs, Wickey Hawkins, Cal Cagney, Ivan Nedomatsky and finally evened the score with Abrams. He was at his best in the last two fights, flooring Nedomatsky three times and beating Abrams to a pulp. The boy has a newly found uppercut that worked wonders against Abrams, and if he has polished this weapon even a little bit, it will bother Pacho considerably.

Frankie Lembo and Calvin Calp, capable young lightweights, tangle in a six-round semifinal that tops a fair supporting card. Irish Joe Perry, the next lightweight champion of the world, boxes Pancho Huerta, and Eddie Saugsted squares off with Joe Raspi in additional sixes. Vince DePolio, of Baltimore, and Tom Jordon, of this city, welterweights, make their professional debut in the opening four-rounder.

Gonzaga Faces Central In School Game Today

A somewhat strengthened Gonzaga football team will take the field this afternoon at Central Stadium in an attempt to gain its second straight victory at the expense of Central, a team which has been named by rival coaches as the team to beat for the Inter-High championship.

PEARCE

Playing quarterback for Gonzaga today will be Eddie Shea, a midget back who was out of the Anacostia game with injuries, and this, Coach Orrel Mitchell believes, will be enough to give the Eye Streeters their second straight victory.

On the other hand, Coach Hardy Pearce, of Central, despite the fact that he has only two lettermen back from last year's second-place team, is confident that the Mount Pleasanters will win their opening game and wade through the tough Inter-High schedule undefeated.

Coach Mitchell attributed Gonzaga's comparatively poor showing against Anacostia to the combined evils of fumbles and the absence of Shea. With Shea back, Mitchell's main worry is over, but he can only hope for the best in regard to the fumbles. With the exception of Shea, Gonzaga's starting line-up will be the same as the one which faced Anacostia.

Central will start Benny Steiner at quarterback, Jimmy Porter and Richie Rozelle at the halfback positions, and Tony Di Biasi at fullback. Steiner, Pearce believes, will prove to be one of the smartest quarterbacks in the local scholastic realm, while Porter will be entrusted with the brunt of the running attack.

Lee Allows 12 Hits, but Wins 21st

Cardinals Beaten Pirates Are Idle Cubs Slow to Score Hack Is Star

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Chicago's onrushing Cubs cut Pittsburgh's National League lead to a mere game and a half today by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 3, and tomorrow will face the Pirates in the first of their all-important three-game series.

BILL LEE

Stan Hack and Frank Demaree were the big guns in the Cub attack as Chicago rode to its seventh straight win and big Bill Lee became the league's first pitcher to turn in 21 triumphs.

Hack collected three hits, including a double and a triple, and scored four times. Demaree had a perfect day with three singles, which drove in Hack three times. The two accounted for all but three of the nine Chicago hits off two former Cub hurlers, Curt Davis and Lon Warneke.

Gives 12 Hits

Meanwhile Lee, with a string of four straight shutouts back of him, was nicked for 12 blows. However, he scattered them well, did not allow a base on balls and was aided by two double plays. His string of scoreless innings was stopped at 39 in the second inning when Johnny Mize and Mickey Owen hit doubles. The figure was seven short of Carl Hubbell's National League record.

The Cubs picked up their runs one at a time in registering their seventeenth triumph in their last 20 games. When Hack and Demaree weren't at work, Carl Reynolds usually was. He tripled in the fourth and scored on Rip Collins' fly. In the eighth he singled, advanced on an error and a sacrifice and scored on Lee's long fly.

Cubs Win 30

Since the race really got hot on August 9, the Cubs have won 30 and lost 17 for a percentage of .638, while the Pirates have split 46 games for a mark of .500. On August 9 the Pirates were first, six and a half games ahead of the Giants, eight in front of the Cubs and nine to the good over the Reds.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Substance and Shadow

New York, Sept. 26.—This may answer a lady's question; a lady who stood by and listened while a group of men were discussing all the exciting this that are happening.

VIDMER.

They wondered who was going to win the National League pennant. Would it be Pittsburgh or the Cubs? And what chance would the winner have with the Yankees in the World's Series?

They remarked on the opening of the football season, and the upsets that came the first Saturday of the campaign. What about the defeat of Illinois by Ohio University? And how about the University of Mississippi beating Louisiana State? And St. Bonaventure turning the tables on Manhattan?

They speculated on the outcome of the Marathon Golf tournament at Fenway, where the field was entering the last two rounds of a 108-hole tournament.

And they went into the possibility of a race at Belmont in which War Admiral, Seabiscuit and Stagehand would come together on the track.

All the while she stood silently by, sipping a cocktail, and let the men talk without interruption. But a dazed expression was spreading across her face, and finally she spoke.

"Doesn't it all seem rather unimportant?" she asked in a superior tone. "I can't understand why men are so interested in mere sporting events when there are so many bigger things to talk about?"

Of course, no one contradicted her or questioned her judgment of the relative importance of sports in the scheme of this world. But only because she was a lady, for there is an answer, a rather rebuking answer to her doubts.

It Might Be

The National League pennant, after all what does it matter who wins? All it amounts to is a lot of strong, capable young men throwing a ball around, and perhaps it doesn't seem very important. Perhaps it appears rather strange to the lady that the youth of the Nation should be so keenly interested in base hits and errors and the outcome of a game.

But suppose those same strong, capable, young men were not throwing baseballs, but hand grenades. Suppose they were worried not about base hits and runs and errors, but being killed. Suppose when the day ended they were carried away on stretchers, or covered lightly with the green turf on which they play and left behind in the haste to move on.

The country is all enthused about the opening of the football season, and the lady may well smile as she thinks of what little consequence it really is. A lot of college boys in leather helmets, pushing and pulling each other around, trying to cross a line—that's all it amounts to in her mind.

And, of course, she is right in her analysis, but suppose those young college boys were wearing steel helmets instead of leather, using bayonets instead of their hands and fighting their way across those lines with rifle fire to clear the way.

What, for that matter, of the marathon golf tournament at Fenway, where the field has been reduced, day after day, according to the scores, it being a case of the survival of the fittest? What, indeed, the lady might well ask. A lot of grown men, sun-tanned and muscular, tramping over the fields, carrying clubs, digging deep divots in the turf. What of it?

But suppose those grown men were marching through those fields, armed with guns and digging trenches in which to hide

Yanks Nose Boston Sox By 4 to 3

Rookie Sundra Wins Scores on Error Glenn Sparks Team Ben Chapman Slugs

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 26.—Rookie Pitcher Steve Sundra yanked the New York Yankees out of the doldrums today by beating the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3. It was the league champions' second victory in their last ten games.

The Yanks picked up a run in the fourth on DiMaggio's single, an outfield error that allowed him to go to third and Lou Gehrig's hit. Boston scored two in the fifth and one in the sixth, with Ben Chapman contributing a single to the first rally and a double to the second.

Joe Glenn, second-string catcher who replaced Bill Dickey, ill with ptomaine poisoning, contributed the big blow of the Yanks' winning three-run rally in the sixth. He doubled, scoring Selkirk and Gordon, and tallied when Pinky Higgins threw Sundra's grounder past first.

White Leads Attack Boston Bows, 16-6 Field Goal Helps

By the United Press.

Boston, Sept. 26.—Led by Byron (Whizzer) White, Colorado College Rhodes scholar, the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Professional Football League defeated the Boston Shamrocks 16 to 6 tonight in an exhibition game at Fenway Park.

White, leading a fourth-period drive, scored the Pirates' second touchdown on a three-yard drive off left tackle. A 21-yard field goal by Pittsburgh's McDonough started the scoring. The Pirates drove 80 yards in five plays for a second-quarter touchdown. Britt's short pass to Spizack accounted for the Shamrock's touchdown in the second period.

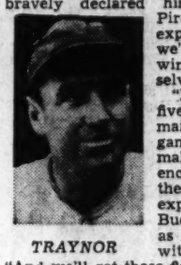
Traynor, Gabby Bank On Hurlers in Series

Bucs Need 5 More Pie to Play Aces Tobin, Klinger Set

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 26.—While listening to returns of Chicago's game with St. Louis today, Pie Traynor bravely declared his Pittsburgh Pirates "don't expect any help, we're going to win 'em ourselves."



TRAYNOR

"If we win five of our remaining seven games, it doesn't make any difference how many the Cubs win," explained the Buccaneers' boss as he fidgeted with a cigarette. "And we'll get those five."

The Pirates pushed off tonight for the Windy City, where they will engage the Cubs in a three-game series which probably will decide the National League pennant.

Back of the Pirate skipper's avowal about "help" was the Cubs' record, prior to today, of winning six consecutive games from St. Louis and Philadelphia.

"I'm going to play my three aces—Jim Tobin, Bob Klinger and Russ Bauers—one right after the other. We've won eight of our last 10 games and these three have accounted for six of those eight. That's doing pretty good in my book," Pie continued.

The fact that Manager Leo (Gabby) Hartnett of the Cubs had tossed Clay Bryant and Bill Lee, his two best, at the Cardinals instead of holding them for the Pirate invasion didn't cause Traynor to change expression.

"We don't care a whoop who Chicago pitches against us," he grinned. "They don't have anybody who could put more on the ball than (Paul) Derringer did yesterday for Cincinnati. He had everything and we hit him hard.

"We're steaming at our proper pace now. That day we lost two 2-to-1 games to Philadelphia in the same afternoon nearly sank us and we started playing .500 ball. But the boys are in good shape now and that rain over East gave our pitchers a rest.

"Don't worry. We can take care of ourselves."

Gabby Gambles Today Holds Lee, Bryant Sees Flag Victory

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—The hysterical and perhaps historical National League pennant race will be decided in the three-game series between the pursuing Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates opening at Wrigley Field tomorrow.

HARTNETT

After those all important three games it will be all over.

This situation has made a gambler out of Gabby Hartnett, manager of the Cubs, a soberer Hartnett than in his premanagerial days. He has been gambling all through the three weeks winning streak in which the Cubs have won 17 out of their last 20 games and he is going to gamble again tomorrow on his pitching selection, saving his two aces, Clay Bryant and Big Bill Lee for the games with Pittsburgh Wednesday and Thursday. Thus Hartnett is gambling only on tomorrow's game.

Hartnett gambled in sending Lee against the Cardinals today and won. He gambled by booking a doubleheader with Philadelphia last Friday and he won. He has gambled by using his two aces with only two day's rest and he won.

For tomorrow, Hartnett is mulling over a choice between Larry French, Tex Carleton and Dizzy Dean, who has pitched less than seven innings in five weeks.

The tomato-faced Hartnett, with his usual smile and amiability absent, was elated over the performance of Lee in turning back the Cardinals today but the task of driving to a pennant with two pitchers is wearing him down.

"We're taking these games on one at a time," he bellowed, "and we will mow down the Pirates the same way. Everybody on this ball club feels that we're going to win. Today was our seventh in a row. If we can knock the Pirates over tomorrow, I feel certain we will win. Believe me, I haven't had time to think whether I like managing or not."

The Cubs, as superstitious as any other gang of players, believe they have a good luck charm in a bat which First Baseman Rip Collins acquired in a trade with Phil Weintraub of the Phillies. The Cubs call it "the Weintraub percentage."

"I hadn't been hitting," said Collins, "so I swapped with Weintraub. I used the club the first day and hit everything on the nose. Weintraub went into a slump. We all thought it was so lucky that I quit using it and put it in the rack for fear I might break it. The next day I got six hits in nine times at bat and the next two for three. There is no stopping us now."

Bears Beat Bisons, 10-2

Win Third Game Take 2-1 Lead Give Eight Hits

By the United Press.

Buffalo, Sept. 26.—The champion Newark Bears blasted the Buffalo Bisons 10-2 tonight in the third game of the International League play-off final.

The victory gave the Bears a 2-1 lead in the best of seven series for the Governor's Cup and the right to meet the American Association winner in the "little world series."

The Bears put on their best hitting exhibition of the playoffs, socking Ken Ash, Bob Kline, Art Jacobs and Norm Hibbs for 14 safeties, including four-baggers by Buddy Rosar and Charley Keller. Mike Chartak collected four hits, including a double.

Johnny Haley, who won two of the Bears' games against Rochester in the preliminary series, is expected to start against Fabian Kowalik tomorrow. The game originally was scheduled for night, but was changed so as not to conflict with the National League football game between Green Bay and the Chicago Cardinals.

Shaffer Bowlers Face Quality Shop

Top match in the Southeast Bowling League at Queen Pin Alleys tomorrow night finds Shaffer Flower Shop, last year's champions, tackling Quality Shop, one of its toughest rivals.

Peerless upset Shaffer last week twice, with Louie Chipouras rolling a 367 set and 148 game, while Dick LaBille had 361 for the losers. Peerless chalked up high team game of the evening, 585, while Square Deal had high set, 1,688, with George Honey contributing 375.

Irish Drill Long

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 26 (AP).—Notre Dame's football players, getting ready for their season opened with Kansas here Saturday, held long drills on blocking and tackling today.

Redskins Lead Pro Loop Scoring

The Washington Redskins are leading both divisions of the National Football League in two departments.

The Redskins have gained the most yards, 953, and amassed the most points, 79.

Closest to Washington in yards gained is Pittsburgh with 869 and the Pirates have played four games to the Redskins' three. Closest in point scoring are Philadelphia Eagles with 64.

Two more quarter-final matches will be staged today. Barney Welsh meets Allie Ritzenberg, and Ricky Willis plays Stanley Haney, at 4 p. m. In a quarter-finals doubles match, Bill Breese and Dave Johnsen will face John Andary and Billy Contreras at 5 p. m.

Sammy Baugh Rises to Defense of 'Whizzer'

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh,

Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

I've been thinking that it's high time somebody came to the defense of "Whizzer" White. Folks have been getting the wrong impression of White simply because he hasn't burned up the professional league in his early games with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I've seen the headlines saying: "White Flop in Pro League" and "Whizzer Bottled Up By Pros." That's not fair to the "Whizzer." Don't forget that for every backfield sensation in the league there are a dozen backs who don't make the headlines, yet are rated high enough to stay in the league.

The reading public's impressions of White aren't shared by the players in the National League, I can vouch for that. White may not have broken away for any of his long runs, or thrown any of his touchdown passes, but the players in our league still have plenty of respect for him. Those I have talked with are emphatic about it when they say he's a swell football player.

Out at Soldiers Field, where the Redskins played the All-Stars, we had a taste of the "Whizzer." He didn't break away that night, but it wasn't because he isn't a great football player. He was playing against a pretty good team, and he was in there mostly in the first half, when the Redskins were fresh and plenty tough.

There were other backfield men on that college all-star squad who made the headlines that night, but the professional coaches who saw that game would still have taken White if they had their choice. Despite the fact he was bottled up, they saw enough of him to know he is a dangerous guy whether he's running with that ball, kicking it or passing it.

I saw him down there in the Texas Cotton Bowl last New Year's Day, when he was with the Colorado team that played Rice. Whizzer's team was far out of its class and took a bad beating, but that didn't prevent White from scoring two touchdowns against a powerful Rice team, despite the little help he had.

He hasn't set the pro league afire, as I say, but in justice to the "Whizzer," we've got to look at all the facts. In the first place, the Pittsburgh club he is with was not one of the strong clubs of the league last season. And another thing—the Pirates lost their first three starts partly because White was playing with a club that played its first three league games in the space of five days. That's a tough assignment, and White was probably trying to lug the ball for a tired ball club.

The instant a professional coach sees White under fire he is convinced that he's watching a better than average football player. Because "Whizzer" has got that thing called "action." He acts like a swell football player in everything he does. He has grace and poise and speed and leg drive and he must have had good football sense to do all those things he did for Colorado.

WHITE

And don't forget, they do things a bit differently in the pro league. "The Whizzer" came in cold. He'll wise up to a few of the pro tricks and then he'll be at his best. The Whizzer is smart, no doubt of that, and he's bound to catch on quickly. If I were a football fan, I wouldn't go around condemning White on the strength of what he hasn't done in his first month of pro ball.

Bob Williams and Fred Greiner Win Pro-Amateur

The Punch Line

By Lewis F. Atchison

Gevinson Through?

This department is loathe to believe reports that Lou Gevinson is as washed up as this morning's laundry. Lou's requiem has been sung, the obsequies performed, and he, as far as the customers are concerned, is a dead duck. But it is difficult to believe. It doesn't ring true.

ATCHISON.

Granted that Gevinson looked like a lad fresh out of the amateur ranks last week while absorbing a ten-round drubbing at Norment Quarles' busy, bruising fists. Granted he couldn't lay a glove on Petey Sarron in his only other appearance this season, but at the same time Gevinson looks far from through to this writer.

He appears to be back where he started two years ago. But, if memory serves us correctly, two years ago he was hailed as brilliant prospect, as championship timber. Today he still looks like a good prospect, like a rookies he needs a veteran's coaching.

Lou has enough natural ability to stop fighters like Sarron and Quarles, but simply hasn't been taught to use it properly. He hasn't improved one iota since turning professional. If anything, he has traveled in reverse, looking worse in each successive bout. Every time he steps in the ring it becomes more apparent that he is dissipating his fistic youth.

Only 3 Punches

There are only three punches in boxing, a hook, jab and uppercut. Gevinson knows how to use only one—the hook. He could floor an elephant with his left hook—if he could hit one. His trouble is getting within range of the target. Quarles needed only two rounds to discover Lou did nothing but hook, and from the third round on he merely held out his hands like upraised bicycle handlebars, and caught every punch Gevinson tossed at him.

Gevinson could have whipped him if he possessed a jab, or knew how to feint Quarles out of position and slap him with the left, or jab him with a straight right, and when his guard went up, ram an uppercut to the chin. He was a sorry sight, standing there taking everything Quarles tossed at him.

LOU GEVINSON

Gevinson owes his current agent nothing. Said agent might be a good rubber, but his knowledge of boxing is confined to reading records of fighters who were in their hey-day decades ago. He can quote their records, and speak authoritatively of their styles and abilities as if he was there and saw them. But we have yet to find a case where reading and quoting record books ever helped a fighter. His manager, in a word, talks (and reads) a nasty fight.

Lou owes the matchmaker nothing. He fought every man signed for him without question. Finally, he owes the fans nothing because, overlooking all other sins, he has yet to show the white feather, or willingly tin-can it.

He does owe it to himself, however, to find out just how good a fighter he is. As the record now stands he'll go down in the books as a tough fourth-rater. He should have an operation performed on his nose so that organ will not fail to function after it has been punched a couple of times. Then he should buy a book on how to box—preferably the one by Prof. Donovan, father of the well-known referee, Arthur Donovan, and bury himself in a quiet nook and study it.

He should read how it is possible to punch from a crouch, and a helluva sight safer than standing up like the Washington Monument. He should be enlightened on the fine art of feinting, pulling an opponent's guard down and rapping him with a punch. He should study the equally fine art of protecting himself—it would be very helpful.

A book would be more helpful than Lou's present routine of working out with other amateurs, and under the direction of an agent who never had a dueling mitten on in his life. At least a book could do him no more harm, and wouldn't insist on him fighting out of his class for the sake of a few dollars.

The same advice goes for Bob Mathias, who made a successful debut last week, and Eddie Saugsted and Steve Mamakos. Get a book and learn something about boxing before you wind up in a total eclipse and sick in the head.

Wiffy Cox, Shorey Tie In Sweeps

Winners Score a 63 Five Teams Are Tied Record Field Plays Par Takes Beating

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Bob Williams, Naval Academy golf professional, and Fred Greiner, oldest of Baltimore's golfing Greiner brothers, paired a best ball of 63 yesterday at Kenwood to win the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament over one of the largest fields of the season.

Wiffy Cox, Congressional mentor, added to his many sub-par rounds over the course where he formerly served as pro a 67, to tie Mel Shorey, East Potomac tutor, in the pro sweepstakes. Cox was out in even par and clipped three shots off regulation figures coming back for a 32, while Shorey was 34—33.

Shorey and Russ Hollebaugh, Indian Spring amateur, were a stroke back in the pro-amateur play with a pair of 32s for a 64, Hollebaugh helping two strokes on the front nine and one coming back, two with birdies.

Five teams tied for third money in the pro-am play, with 65s, including Eddie Stevens, assistant professional at Manor, and two partners, Ray Fleming and A. L. Alderman. Stevens and his partners had identical nines of 32—33. Cox and George DeWitt, of Congressional, had 34—31, Shorey and Dave Morris, Congressional, were 33—32, and Frank Invernezzi, Forest Park, Baltimore, pro and his amateur of the same club, Mercer Buckingham, were also 33—32.

Williams' par round of 70, including a 33 on the front nine, won second money in the pro sweeps, while Stevens, with a pair of 36s, and Bob Grove, Frederick, with a 38—34, split third prize.

Fred Greiner, elder brother of Otto, the Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion, and Walter, Woodholme assistant pro, chopped two shots off Williams' outgoing 33, and when Williams went two over par coming back Greiner came through on five holes for the winning score.

Ralph Beach, association president from Suburban, presided over a meeting preceding the tournament and left the remainder of the season's schedule in the air, with only a pro-amateur at Mount Pleasant, probably October 10, as the only definite event. The District pros' tournament card fills a majority of the available dates. Beach first learned of the local pros' schedule at the meeting.

Left to right they are Charles H. Gardner, Gordon Leech, Rossi, and James Councilor, chairman of the Regatta. Rossi had announced Saturday night at a banquet that he wouldn't accept the cup because his boat was the only entry in the race. But on Sunday a special handicap event was staged and boats of slightly smaller design raced against the count's Alagi. The Alagi had to break world records to win and Count Rossi agreed to accept the cup following the special race

Burke Holds Lead In $13,500 Open Play

Tops Field With a 286 Score Three Share Second Spot After 72 Holes Gibson, Harper, Houghton Qualify

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 26.—Plodding Billy Burke kept playing 'em straight down the middle today at the Fenway Golf Club and wound up still entrenched as the leader in the $13,500 Westchester 108-hole open golf tournament.

Shooting a morning-round 75 and an afternoon 72, the 1931 U. S. open champion from Cleveland reached the 72-hole mark with a score of 286, six shots over par and two shots ahead of the field. Nearest to him in this close but high-scoring race for $5,000 first prize were P. G. A. champion Paul Runyan, 1937 P. G. A. runner-up Jug McSpaden and Mike Turnesa.

The evidence against the slickness and bumpiness of Fenway's green's was overwhelming at the end of the day's play, when 63 golfers with scores of 306 or better qualified for tomorrow's final 36-hole fling. The 83 who played today, among them virtually all of the nation's best pros, were, on an average, 21 strokes over par for their 72 holes.

Harper Has A 290

Only four par 70 rounds were posted. Turnesa, two-time U. S. Open champion; Ralph Guldahl and Denny Shute, P. G. A. winner in 1936 and 1937, made them in the morning. This afternoon the shining star was Charles Yansick, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., who got a hole in one on the 195-yard eleventh and two deuces. His total was 297. The ace won Yansick 100.

Sluggin' Sam Snead, the smooth-swinging West Virginia mountaineer, picked up two shots on Burke with a 73 and 72 for 290 that tied him for fifth place with Harry Cooper and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va.

Alone at 291 was Jimmy Hines; Johnny Revolta, Ed Dudley and Ed Oliver were together at 292, Guldahl and Ben Hogan at 293. Such

National Meeting Of Greenkeepers Attracts 125

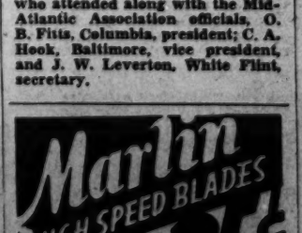
A one-day meeting sponsored by the National Greenskeeping Superintendents and United Golf Association greens section attracted 125 greenskeepers and committee members to an all-day program here yesterday that included a visit to the Arlington Turf Gardens in the morning, visit to four local courses in the afternoon, and dinner-meeting at Capital Golf and Country Club in the evening.

The greenskeepers came from the East and as far West as Indianapolis to attend the session. A review of the experimental work at the Arlington Turf Garden occupied the morning conclave, where fertilizer tests, weed control, new bents, grasses and turf culture were studied in detail.

More than 100 of the members visited Chevy Chase, Columbia, Burning Tree and Capital in the afternoon, studying the greens and other projects, including two greens at the Capital Club, where a new grass is being experimented with, under playing conditions.

A dinner and routine meeting at Capital concluded the day's business.

Dr. John Montieth, jr., of the Department of Agriculture, supervised the morning work, while the afternoon session was headed by Joe Ryan, of Philadelphia, president of the Greenskeeping Superintendents Association. Ryan is a brother of Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven pro greenskeeper, who attended along with the Mid-Atlantic Association officials, O. B. Fitts, Columbia, president; C. A. Hook, Baltimore, vice president, and J. W. Leverton, White Flint, secretary.



Rudy Dusek To Wrestle

Angy Savoldi Is Foe Still a Tough Man Robert in Feature

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The success of Thursday night's wrestling show at the arena virtually was assured last night when Rudy Dusek accepted an invitation to come and throw Angelo Savoldi for a couple of goals. The bout will be the semifinal engagement on a card featuring Yvon Robert, former world's champion, and John Katan.

Rudy, if it has slipped your mind, is head man of Dusek, Dusek, Dusek & Dusek, Inc., which sometimes does business under the trademark of the riot squad. The boys peddle action and excitement in wholesale quantities, and Promoter Joe Turner is reliably reported to have doubled his customary order for this program.

Rudy, at one time rated on par with Jim Londos as a box-office magnet, still is one of the best muscle manglers in the game It's one of the trade's peculiarities that the older the competitor the better he wrestles. They need a little ageing like cheeses or fine liquors. Herr Turner likes to sit back and recall the time Rudy grossed $19,000 in a match with Jim Londos, who used to pull 'em through the turnstiles like a grappling hook, and fondly wish old times would come back again.

But, since it is impossible to resurrect the bygone era, Turner has done the next best thing by resurrecting Rudy—and the action is guaranteed. Savoldi is as good as in your lap right now, if you occupy a ringside seat. Customers are warned against keeping wrestlers tossed into their laps, however. They must throw them back into the ring under penalty of the law.

The complete card includes, in addition to the main bout, Gino Vagonne vs. Ed Newman; Chris Zaharias vs. Walter Podolak, and Hank Barber vs. Ed Meske.

Petey Sarron Seeks Sparring Partners

Petey Sarron, former world's featherweight champion who boxes Yucatan Kid Monday night in the feature 15-round bout on the annual Police Boys Club card, needs sparring partners to help him complete training for the bout. Sarron will be at the National Capitol gym, 519 Morse street northeast, this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Police Show Boys Arrive In Capital

Yucatan Kid's Here Sarron Due Today LaMoth to Drill Hold Public Workout

The star-studded cast for the forthcoming Police Boys Club boxing show, scheduled next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, began converging on this city over the week-end, and by dusk tomorrow night all of the featured performers will have pitched their training camps on native soil.

Yucatan Kid, who battles Petey Sarron in the main 15-round bout, motored in from Miami last Friday night, and resumed training yesterday at the Huron gym. He was accompanied by his manager, Capt. W. H. Peeples, who will be assisted in handling the Kid by Gabe Menendez, his representative in this territory.

Petey Sarron is scheduled to arrive here this morning, and will train at the National Capital gym, 519 Morse street northeast. Sarron is expected to report in excellent condition, for, after whipping Lou Gevinson in the season's initial outdoor show, he underwent an operation on his ailing arm which restored its lost punching power.

Aurelien LaMothe, a contender for the flyweight championship and reigning king of Canadian 112-pounders, is scheduled to land here tomorrow. Small Montana, his prospective opponent, already is on the scene of battle and training at the Morse street gym. Montana is laying claim to the world title, and faces a tartar in LaMothe, who will strenuously dispute his claim to that honor.

Cyril Josephs, the colored boy who tackles Johnny Hutchinson in a ten-rounder, and Mickey Dugan, a heavyweight who has been pitted against Maynard Daniels, also are training over on Morse street, crowding the quarters to capacity. The public is invited to the workouts at both gyms, where the heavy firing usually gets under way around 1 p. m.

On paper the card looks like a colorful conglomeration of clouting, with gladiators of all shapes and sizes. Tickets are on sale at all police precincts, Turner's ticket office, the Willard, and Spaldings.

On Hunting

Squirrel season in Maryland opens this week—Saturday, to be exact, and everyone will have an equal chance because of the holiday.

ACKERMAN.

It is said that any game supply is always plentiful until the season is open, and then it is hard to find. That of course would be true of squirrels, and we make note of it, so that hunters in this section for the first time this year won't give it up without a good try, for from all the signs this summer there is a good crop. Due to three things—a fairly numerous hangover for breeding stock—a good breeding season—and a plentiful supply of mast.

The continuance of the short season, October 1 to 15, both dates inclusive, will do much toward increasing the population so that within another year or two, in all probability it will be lengthened.

The daily bag and possession limit is six.

Nonresident license is $15.50; resident, $5.25. If you happen to have the luck to live just across the District line, you can hunt in the county of which you are a resident for $1.25.

In Virginia the squirrel season in many counties has been open since September 1. We fail to note it on purpose, for the reason that we can't see where it is sporting to shoot game that still has young in the nest.

Patrick, Prince Edward, Southampton and Sussex Counties have a continuous season that does not close until January 20, while the counties of Bland, Buchanan, Carrol, Dickenson, Floyd, Giles, Grayson, Lee, Montgomery, Page, Pulaski, Roanoke, Russell, Scott, Smythe, Tazewell, Warren, Washington, Wise and Wythe also have a continuous season that closes on December 31.

• • • •

With the exception of the areas of the following counties, Alleghany, Amherst, Augusta, Bath, Frederick, Highland, Nelson, Page, Rockbridge, Rockingham, Shenandoah and Warren, which have areas in the George Washington National Forest, and where the season does not open until November 15 and closes December 31, all other counties have a split season that closes on September 30.

Albemarle, Amherst, Arlington, Brunswick, Campbell, Caroline, Charlotte, Elizabeth City, Essex, Franklin, Greene, Greensville, Henrico, Henry, Isle of Wight, King and Queen, Lancaster, Madison, Matthews, Middlesex, Nansemond, Nelson, Northumberland, Nottaway, Orange, Pittsylvania, Powhatan, Princess Anne, Richmond, Surrey, and Westmoreland open again on November 15 and do not close until January 20, while Accomac, Bedford, and Northampton open the same but close five days earlier, on January 15.

Augusta, Botetourt, Clarke, Craig, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Rappahannock, Rockbridge, Rockingham, and Shenandoah Counties open again on September 15 and close on December 31.

Norfolk County, out of the hundred in the State, is the only one with an equitable season. The season there opens October 15 and closes December 15.

Bag and possession limits are 10 a day, 150 for the season. Nonresident license is $15.50. There is also a two-day license for $5, but it does not cover big game, in case anyone might have that in mind.

• • • •

The season on black bear in Nansemond and Norfolk Counties opens also on October 1, and continues until November 30. These are the two counties in the Dismal Swamp area, and the limit is one a season.

Deer in Nansemond and Norfolk can also be hunted at the same time. The limit on this game is the same, one a season, bucks only, with horns visible at least 2 inches above the hair.

Seasons on bear, deer and squirrel open in North Carolina October 1. The hunter is allowed one deer a day, three a season. Several counties have no open season at all, so it is advisable to acquaint yourself with county laws before shooting. Two bear a season.

Yale O'Nine Makes Show of Field in Pinehurst Purse

Pays $3.30; Good Odds Wins Place

Gilbert Is Victor Soldierette Beaten 55-1 Shot Misses 8,000 Fans Attend

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 26.—Yale O'Nine, one of the best 2-year-olds to see action this year, turned in time of 1:11 4-5, the best of the meeting here, and romped off with first money in The Pinehurst Purse, a sprint of 6 furlongs which drew six juveniles. The candidate for the Richard Johnson Stakes at Laurel was installed a $3.30 favorite by the crowd of 8,000 and ran as if he should have been a 2-cent stamp to $2.

With Johnny Gilbert doing the guiding, the gelded son of Peter Hastings closed in hand and five lengths in advance of a photo finish for second money in which the negative favored Good Odds over Soldierette.

Off porly and forced to weave his way between horses to finish fourth in the Eastern Shore Handicap here, Yale O'Nine had no trouble today in the smaller field. He broke second to Soldierette, something of a speedster in her own right. This pair showed the way up the backstretch, but it was apparent that Gilbert had "a handful of horse" under him. When he turned the gelding loose, he responded by going to the top of Soldierette and the race, for win purposes, was over.

Jockey Ira Hanford piloted Maneuver to victory in the first race as Quiet Time, backed into favoritism because of the Jockey Gilbert influence, finished out of the money. The winning $10.80 shot finished a neck in front of Dunvegan with the group of a dozen 6-furlongites. Two Aces, a field horse, third in.

Gilbert came back with a winner in the second race, his sixteenth of the meeting. With E. K. Bryson's Quicker under him, the Kansas boy brought cheers from his backers by bringing the colt home three lengths ahead of James Pal, a half-miler. Mintson, in the field in the betting, was third. Quicker paid $7.40. The daily double paid $39.70.

A 55-1 shot, Slave Charm, missed winning the third race as the photo showed Tin Devil in front. Pause, the favorite in the sprint, finished third. Slave Charm might have won without consulting the camera had she stayed in at the final bend. She lost the lead and plenty of ground there and came again in the closing sixteenth. Tin Devil paid $16.90.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

It looks as if Maryland fans are going to get a look at Seabiscuit here on Wednesday. According to word received by Racing Secretary Charlie McLennan, the Biscuit and other horses of the C. S. Howard string are being shipped to Laurel and that Seabiscuit will be vanned here tomorrow morning to get the "feel" of the track. However, if the oval is not fast on Wednesday, Seabiscuit will be kept in the barn because the Howard forces are about convinced that he cannot make the grade anymore on an off track. Sonny Workman will report at Laurel Saturday and will ride in Maryland for the remainder of the season before leaving for California. Betting here picked up last Saturday when $401,000 passed through the mutuel machines. With Seabiscuit slated to go on Wednesday, the track has a chance of breaking even on the meeting. Flying Zelma has been added to Silster Milton's schooling list. Jockey Tommy Luther arrived yesterday and had his first mount on Resurrection in the sixth race. A. G. Vanderbilt will stable his horses at Pimlico and will van them to Laurel for their engagements. Johny Gilbert will ride for the Cerise and White whenever the stable has an entry and the weight is right. Yancy Christmas' Rough Time, winner of the $7,500 added Capital Handicap in record time of 1:11, gets in next Saturday's renewal with 111 pounds as compared with the 119 he carried last year. Preeminent was assigned top weight of 126. Airflame is due to carry 123 with 120 for Thanksgiving, 119 for Accolade and 118 for Aneroid. Sidesaddle likes Broadstep—and Pie Ala Mode.

BILL.

First race—Short Cake was well liked in a maiden race here on opening day. Ran second on that occasion and will collect the main money if he runs back to that effort. No Risk, a longshot in an allowance race at Belmont, may be the one to beat. Perfect Dear was fourth to some classy maidens at Belmont.

Second race—Oak Apple had poor racing luck last out, being forced wide and finishing far back. However, I'm going to take this one in an open race. Breadanbutter was fifth in good company at Saratoga and looks like one slated to be prominent. Coursing has been running with good ones and may be close.

Third race—Galon Boy was an odds-on favorite at Narragansett a month ago and finished fourth in this sort of company. Comes to this race freshened up and looks like the winner. Bud's Queen turned in a neat second in a $2,000 maiden affair at Delaware Park. May need this race, however. Golden Silence won last out at short odds and could be a threat.

Fourth race—Evening Shadow, tossed in this with a feather impost, ran an excellent third to top ones last out. This one has worked well and I'm going to string along. Dixieland, surprise winner in recent outing, is at best form and deserves consideration. Unheralded got nothing on a sloppy track. May improve with the change of track conditions.

Fifth race—Moon Harvest barely missed winning here and is on edge. Sea Gull needed last and closed ground in sprint. Dangerous at this route. Match Point, recent winner, appears overmatched in this field but could take the show.

Sixth race—Outboard appears to be the class here. Did not like the mile route last out. Suncrax, recent second at this track, should be prominent. Longful closes well and cannot be tossed out entirely.

Seventh race—Recussion was well played to beat good ones in New York and failed. Could awake here with a bang. Proph figures close up in this company. No Sir may improve with that tightener under his belt.

Best bet—Moon Harvest.

Our Guest Selector

Our Guest Selector for today is Tony Neri. A playground and sandlot baseball star, Tony is now employed by The Post. He is sports fan No. 1 of the City Room and can discuss Nats, Redskins, boxers and wrestlers backward and forward. Tony also finds time to go into the history of racing and, despite his youth, he is a virtual filing cabinet of turf information. Tony, a Mount Pleasant boy, took his vacation at Hialeah Park last winter and he didn't hitch-hike home either. Here's how he prefers them today at Havre de Grace:

G. W. Tightens Defense

Scrimmage With Hoyas Helps Squad

Reinhart Pleased Line Appears Set Backs Are Battling Scouts Tell of Furman

George Washington University's football squad, looking to its opening game with Furman on Friday night with speculation, scrimmaged for more than an hour against Georgetown on the polo field yesterday in an effort to tighten its defense.

The Colonials remained on the defensive throughout the scrimmage and at the close Coach Bill Reinhart said the workout had helped George Washington more than any practice session thus far. The Hoyas occasionally ripped off sizable gains, but on the whole the G. W. defense was satisfactory.

While George Washington's line appears set for Furman, only Vic Sampson, ace of last year's eleven, seems assured of a starting berth in the backfield. And Billy Richardson, former Central High star, is pressing Sampson hard for the tailback assignment.

Seven sophomores, led by John Kokoski, Murphy Booth and Tom Grady, as well as Senior Frank Merka, are battling for the three backfield posts. Reinhart has not indicated who will get the starting call against Furman.

Reinhart plans another stiff drill today and possibly a final scrimmage tomorrow before tapering off for Friday's encounter. He feels the squad needs work more than anything else, although the opening of classes tomorrow will curtail the schedule to one practice daily.

Last night the G. W. squad heard in detail about the offense Furman used against Oglethorpe and Bucknell in its first two games. Capt. George Patrick is the South Carolina club's big offensive gun, particularly in passing. The Purple eleven tallied twice via the air against Oglethorpe and used this weapon effectively at times against Bucknell.

Catholic Eleven Is Working Hard

Drive was the cry on the Catholic University football field yesterday as the Flying Cardinals began their final week of work for the game with the St. Bonaventure eleven at Olean, N. Y., Sunday afternoon.

The Saints scored an amazing upset last Saturday when they beat Manhattan, 7 to 6.

"Fod" Cotton, Coach Bergman's assistant, witnessed the game in New York and has the highest praise for the "Bonys."

"St. Bonaventure's has a big, fast and smart aggregation," Cotton said, "capable of giving any eleven in the country a terrific argument."

Headed for a Big Year

Vic Sampson, George Washington University's halfback star of last season, is headed for another big year in the opinion of Bill Reinhart, G. W.'s coach. Sampson toyed momentarily this summer with the idea of giving up football for a hotel career, but is back in the Colonial fold in top shape. He is the only back certain to start against Furman on Friday night in the Colonials' opener, the other backfield berths still being open.

stars as Byron Nelson, Ray Mangrum, Vic Ghezzi, Henry Picard, Dick Metz, Shute, Jimmy Thomson, Craig Wood and Ky Laffoon were from 1 to 10 strokes farther back.

Gibson Hits Trouble

Firing his best round of the tournament, a 2-over-par 72, in the morning and then kiting to a 79 in the afternoon, Andy Gibson, of Pikesville, Md., remained in the running with a 72-hole score of 299, 3 strokes better than Tony Manero, U. S. Open champion in 1936.

Gibson started out with birdies on two of the first three holes, but bogeyed the par three fourth and sixth and lost another shot at the eighth to be out in 36. He birdied the short seventeenth coming home, but went one over at the thirteenth and sixteenth.

In the afternoon he finished disastrously, taking a seven on the par five eighteenth, which is considered one of the two easy birdies holes on the course.

His cards:

Par out	445	343	444	—35
Gibson out (3 a. m.)	344	454	444	—39

Giants Leading With Completed Forward Passes

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—In a closely contested race for passing honors, the New York Giants are showing the way to other national professional league teams in completion of aerials.

Statistics released today showed the Giants have completed 22 out of 39 for an average of 56 per cent. The defending champions, Washington Redskins, have made good 30 out of 54 for 55 per cent. The Chicago Cardinals are third with 32 out of 62 and the Green Bay Packers fourth with 22 out of 44.

The entire league has averaged 44.6 per cent, which is 6.1 per cent better than the record set last year.

Increased yardage on passes also has elevated the league average for ground gaining with Washington holding a slight lead over Cleveland, 317 yards per game to 296. The Redskins also hold the lead in scoring with 79 points as against 64 for the Philadelphia Eagles and 54 for the Packers.

If Caissons Roll

A possible meeting between War Admiral, Seabiscuit and Stagehand may seem little enough for the lady to anticipate, for what does it matter, really? Three horses galloping around in a circle while thousands get all excited and yell half hysterically and one of them is in front at the finish. What does it all matter?

But suppose those horses were not running with their necks stretched out and their tails flying. Suppose they were straining and struggling through the mud, dragging caissons behind them, and on their backs, instead of little eager-eyed jockeys in gay silks, were weary-eyed men in drab uniforms, wondering not who would get there first but if any of them would get there at all.

From a cynical point of view the lady might be forgiven for wondering why there is so much interest in sport among the people of the United States. But she might also realize that as long as this interest is kept alive and continue as keen as it is the country will not have the troubles from which other countries are suffering.

Better far that the Nation's manpower is speculating on who will win the National League pennant, thrilling to the football upsets, following the Fenway golf tournament, hoping for a match race at Belmont than mobilizing for action on some far-flung front.

Lady, let's make the most of our games.

Mutual Benefit Honors First D. C. Agent

Lewis Named in 1845 Choate Agency Dinner Year's Work Reviewed

Commemorating the appointment of Joseph C. Lewis in September, 1845, as the first Washington agent of the Mutual Benefit Life of New Jersey, the H. Lawrence Choate Agency of that company held its annual meeting yesterday at the Annapolis Roads Club.

William H. Gaither, field service manager, and Mildred F. Stone, agency field secretary, represented the home office. Edward Carlough, of the Newark agency; Edward Hutchins, president of the Pioneer Laundry; Vernon W. Holleman, general agent of the Home Life of New York in Washington, and Paul D. Sleeper, C. L. U., general agent of the Aetna Life, were other guest speakers.

Special honors were awarded to Walter T. Lawton, Joseph W. Gibson, Dwight T. Scott, C. L. U., and Theodore E. Gero on account of good work in the summer "Full Speed Run."

In reviewing the work of the past year, Mr. Choate emphasized the increased earnings of the agents, which averaged over $3,500 for the entire personnel; the progress made in developing a thorough programing service, and the addition of three able men to the organization. The life insurance business is changing from a business into a profession, and the Mutual Benefit Agency here, according to Mr. Choate, is in the van.

Members of the agency in attendance at the ninety-third anniversary meeting yesterday were Raymond L. Bland, Walter W. Bohan, George C. Campbell, William A. Campbell, H. Lawrence Choate, C. L. U.; Theodore E. Gero, Joseph W. Gibson, Elinor M. Hickerson, George T. Howard, Adolph Krechel, Walter T. Lawton, Francis F. Miller, Frank D. Roach, C. L. U.; Charles W. Schwab, Dwight T. Scott, C. L. U.; Sherman A. Smith, Croom Walker.

D. C. Loan League

A large attendance is expected today at the Raleigh Hotel when the first fall meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League will be held at 12:30 p. m. Arthur G. Bishop, head of the Perpetual Building Association and leader of the league this year, will preside. It is expected that C. Clinton James of the Columbia Permanent Building Association will be on hand to make a report of the recent International Congress in Zurich. Mr. James, together with Edward C. Baltz represented the local group at the recent Swiss conclave.

Cotton Drops To New Lows

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—Cotton eased into new low ground for the season in some deliveries today under foreign selling owing to continued nervousness over conditions in Europe. December, which had eased from 7.82 to 7.73, then recovered to 7.85, but eased again to close at 7.79. Final prices were 6 to 11 points net lower.

The market opened 7 to 10 points lower under October liquidation in advance of first notice day tomorrow. Foreign interests were active sellers of the later months while hedge selling increased. Spot houses absorbed October offerings on declines but buying otherwise was reserved.

Futures Price Range.

London, Sept. 26.—The stock exchange was virtually at a standstill and extreme nervousness prevailed due to the unsettled European conditions. Following publication of the announcement that Parliament would meet Wednesday prices sold at the lowest for the day, British government bonds closing 5 to 10 points off. German liens lost 12 to 15 and Czech bonds 13. Transatlantic issues followed the decline and finished 2 to 6 points lower. Corresponding weakness prevailed in other sections of the list.

Paris—The bourse closed weak with all sections suffering heavy losses. French rentes finished with declines of 2 pct 6 francs; Bank of France stock and Royal Suez Canal sold at 19,000 francs, off al-Dutch were down about 300 franc and North American grain markets Saturday.

Liverpool—Disappointing action of the most 1,200 francs; industrial also last substantial amounts.

coupled with larger weekly world shipments and large stock at Liverpool caused wheat futures o sag and close 2¼d to 2¾d net lower. Cotton moved irregularly and closed 2 points higher to 2 lower. The prevailing war scare and weakness in sterling caused trade calling, short covering and speculative buying.

Prices Hesitate Awaiting Hitler Speech
Reassuring Tone Helps Leaders
Closings Generally Lower

New York, Sept. 26.—Stocks went to a new low for the move of the last few weeks today and all markets vibrated in accordance with news dispatches from abroad. Throughout the day the tendency was to wait for the scheduled speech in which Hitler was expected to make clear his intentions toward Czechoslovakia. The speech was being delivered as the New York market closed and professionals through there was sufficient of a reassuring nature in its opening paragraphs to justify picking up the leaders.

The reassurance was based on the reiteration by the German leader that he wishes to live at peace with England and France. The slight recovery in stocks which this produced gave way as the speech progressed and Hitler launched into his personal and vitriolic attack upon Dr. Benes. This was under way as the closing gong sounded and the balance of the remarks emphasized that Germany will not be turned back in its effort to take over the Sudetenland. The feeling of despair returned. It was 10 minutes after closing time that Hitler made his remark that, "My patience regarding the Sudetens is at an end," and that "Mr. Benes now has the choice between war and peace."

Stocks closed well above their poorest of the day but off 1.18 points on the average, while losses of 1 to 3 points were common among the speculative leaders. Even wider fluctuations took place in some of the other markets. Declines of 6 to 14 points in certain foreign government bonds illustrated the lack of a good market in this field. The size of the breaks would seem to indicate that selling was heavy; actually the offerings in most cases were of isolated bonds and the declines were sharp because of the lack of buyers. Prospective sellers placed no big blocks on the market. Italian 7s were down 13¾ and Australian issues were off 9 and 10 points. Most of the active United States Government bonds were off ½ point or more despite Treasury buying.

Trading Orderly

While stocks veered back and forth in several distinct moves during the day, trading was orderly. The opinion throughout the Street is that even in the event of war the exchange will be able to keep trading well enough in hand so that there will be no necessity for closing. All bets will be off if the volume of liquidation overbalances buying orders to the extent that it did in 1914, but this is not expected.

Despite the tenseness today, the volume on the big board was only 1,226,090 shares. And after trading ceased here there was no unusual manifestation of Hitler's speech in the Los Angeles and San Francisco markets, which were still open for business. Closing bid and asked prices there were slightly better than in New York.

The foreign exchange market was as sensitive to developments abroad as were securities, and sterling went to another new low at $4.74 11-16, closing just above this level for a day's loss of 2¾ cents. The French franc touched a new all-time low in terms of gold.

Sterling opened lower after heavy selling abroad but then firmed around noon. About the time of the Hitler speech, however, it started another break. All European currencies with the exception of the Belga were sharply lower in dollar terms.

Wheat provided the sensation in commodity trading and was influenced almost entirely by the foreign situation. Maximum gains were 2¼ cents. There were periods of heavy selling on rumors that Hitler would not mention mobilization but the tone was strong, futures ending the session up ⅞ to 1½ cents. The Chicago market closed six minutes before the German leader started to talk. Cotton was depressed 6 to 11 points, moving feverishly over a wide range.

Australian Bonds Drop

One of the astounding developments of the market was a sharp fall in Australian issues, and weakness in Canadians. The British Empire group of dollar bonds heretofore held upon on London buying, but the market today indicated extreme aloofness on the part of the main British market. Australian government issues lost up to 10 points, and Canadians dropped up to 4 points. The sharper recessions in Australians were attributed to fears that Japan might mix things up more in the Far East, in the event of a general war in Europe.

Also highly significant were losses to 7 points in Scandinavian bonds, although everyone assumes that those countries will endeavor again to remain neutral in the event of hostilities. Copenhagen 7s were hardest hit in this group, but Danish and Norwegian government issues also slumped drastically. French and Belgian bonds lost a little group, as offerings were minute. Polish, Serbian, Bulgarian and other European default obligations followed the general movement. Latin Americans were dull and also lower.

United States Government bonds showed a demoralization that rivaled the foreign section, when all factors are taken into consideration. Dealings were small, and few bonds were pressed for sale, but sharp recessions nevertheless resulted. Large institutional buyers and the dealers in Governments held aloof, pending clarification of the atmosphere. In these circumstances long term direct obligations of the Treasury fell 8-32 to 25-32 point. At one time bid and asked figures on the new Treasury 2½s were a full point apart, which is almost unprecedented. Guaranteed Farm and Home Corporation bonds also were weak.

San Francisco Reaction

San Francisco, Sept. 26 (AP).—First perceptible stock market reaction to Hitler's Berlin speech today was a slight rising tendency in quotations. Trade virtually dried up, however. There was no participation by New York traders visible here in the first hour after the speech, and Western traders resumed their waiting attitude. Gaps between bids and offers prevented more than a sprinkling of sales.

Wheat Jumps With Fading Peace Hopes

Speech Late for Pit
Maximum Rise 2¼
Downturns Follow

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Six minutes before Reichsfuehrer Hitler began speaking, the Chicago Wheat Market closed today with hectic new price upturns after a brief transient reaction. Forlorn hopes of peace virtually faded out of the final dealings.

From start to finish values here were dominated by varying developments in the dangerous European political situation. Late temporary setbacks of 2 cents a bushel from extreme advances resulted in part from unconfirmed reports that Hitler's speech would not advocate mobilizing of Germany's war forces.

Another factor in fleeting downturns of prices shortly before trading ended was talk that President Roosevelt's appeal for peace amounted to an offer to make available the good offices of the United States Government in further conferences of European powers. A fresh flareup of war fears, however, overswept the market at the last.

Chicago wheat futures, 2¼ cents up maximum in same cases, closed ⅛ to 1½ cents net higher compared with Saturday's finish; December, 67⅜@67½; May, 67⅛@68; corn, ⅝ to 1 cent advanced; December, 51⅝@51¾; May, 54@54⅛; oats showing ⅜ to ⅝ bulge; rye unchanged to ¾ climb, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents jump.

Treasury Ready For Emergency

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday that the Treasury was ready "as far as humanly possible" for any financial emergency which might result from a European war.

"I like to think," the Secretary told reporters at a press conference, "that the Treasury is always ready for any situation and as far as humanly possible to get ready the Treasury is prepared." He declined, however, to discuss in any detail the international financial situation or even to comment on Chancellor Hitler's speech which immediately preceded the conference.

Industry Scores Brisk August Rise

Steel Expands 40%
Auto Output Low

New York, Sept. 26.—Industrial production advanced sharply during August, and business prospects have shown material improvement, according to the monthly survey of business just issued by the Statistical Division of the National Industrial Confernece Board.

Gains on a seasonally adjusted basis occurred in all types of building activity, iron and steel, bituminous coal, crude petroleum, electric power, copper, zinc, machine tool orders, lumber and newsprint production, and in cotton and silk consumption during August. Automobile production was the only major business indicator to reflect a loss. During the first half of September, industrial activity has also shown an increase, although the threat of a European war has caused postponement of orders in some of the basic consumers' goods industries.

A normal seasonal contraction, coupled with early shutdowns, contributed to a 40 per cent drop in automobile production in August as compared with July. Four factors lead, however, to the belief that automobile sales will receive noticeably in the autumn: (1) dealers' stocks of new cars are at low levels; (2) the used car situation has improved; (3) the new 1939 models which have been shown have been received favorably; and (4) a rise in national income.

Steel at Year's Best

Steel ingot production advanced 24 per cent during August, as compared with a usual seasonal decline of 0.6 per cent, to reach the highest level on an adjusted basis since October, 1937. The latest weekly estimate shows that steel operations for the week beginning September 19 have risen to 47 per cent of capacity. The effects of Government contracts are just beginning to be felt by the steel industry.

In August building contracts showed a contra-seasonal rise of 31 per cent, reaching the highest level since July, 1937. All types of building activity participated in this improvement, with the largest percentage gains recorded for public works and public utility contracts.

Machine tool orders advanced sharply during August, and the textile industry, one of the leaders in the recovery movement, continued to report gains. Output of electric power and natural gas rose to new high levels for the year.

A slight improvement in miscellaneous carloadings occurred in August, on a seasonally adjusted basis. A similar gain appeared in bank debits outside New York City. Retail sales of department and variety stores declined, while rural retail sales rose moderately. The value of both exports and imports fell off during July.

Marine Promotion Board to Meet

Plans to convene the senior board of the Marine Corps Selection Boards, to select colonels and lieutenant colonels for promotion "on or about October 10" were announced yesterday by the Navy Department.

The board to select majors for promotion to lieutenant colonels probably will convene about November 7, it was said, with the board to recommend captains and first lieutenants for promotion meeting the first week in December. A board to recommend one officer of the Marine Corps for promotion to major general is now in session in the Navy Department. Law requires the boards to convene for 10 days.

Personalized Service

No two funeral circumstances are exactly alike. And it is not expected the layman is expert in coping with them.

So we strive to be genuinely helpful . . . particularly to guard against inappropriate gestures, exaggerated formalities or extravagant equipment.

Hysong service is a comforting solace to the living—a memory of the most impressive final tribute to a loved one.

The finest service is furnished by Hysong's, yet it costs no more than ordinary service.

DEPENDABLE MARRIED MAN
I want to talk to a responsible married man about the possibility of joining me in this business which is growing quite rapidly. A man with good character references who will jump into the work with both feet can, with a reasonable amount of experience, expect to earn from $3,500 to $5,000 per year.
This knowledge and experience I have gained in the past few years in this business will be of great help to the man who fills this place. I will teach him how to be successful if he is willing to put in the same effort. The man who applies need not have selling experience and no investment of money is required. A good income is certain right from the start.
Call at 205 Denrike Bldg., 1010 Vermont ave. n.w., on Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. sharp.

Business Opportunities 77

START YOUR OWN BUSINESS
There are thousands with money, good character and industrious out seeking a job—looking for some employer to gamble on them while they are literally surrounded by all kinds of opportunities which will furnish their own employment and make them independent. Successful businesses are founded on ideas. Practical ideas which furnish service and solve the needs of neighbors, a community or some group of people with a special interest. Such ideas are presenting themselves daily. Davey observed that keeping trees trimmed and doctored was a problem to most home owners. He built a great business on this idea. The Hot Shoppe at the edge of town made a fortune as an idea. The box lunch service was an idea. A widow lady made a fortune serving a special chicken dinner in her country home. A gentleman lost his job because he was too old to work, started making sandwiches in his home near the city and built one of the largest portable selling businesses in the country. Two college graduates unable to find employment manufactured a 5-cent cake—one baked, the other sold. They do a million dollar business today. Two sisters operating a tourist home on the highway turn away an average of 20 guests daily. Hundreds of Clubs, Fraternities, Societies and Associations in Washington could enlarge their service to a larger group if they had the space, the outdoor sunshine, the trees, the lawn, etc.
*This Is the

Life's Darkest Moment

Bob Burns Says—

There are two kinds of pride. The real pride that welcomes comparison and invites inspection and then there's false pride that is put on to try to cover up something. If a restaurant owner forbids you to look in his kitchen, you'd better not eat there.

One time a finicky, city man was eatin' at my aunt's boarding house and he took his napkin and started to wipe off the silverware. When my aunt got insulted and started to bawl the man out, he apologized to her and says, "I know it looks bad to the other people." My aunt says, "Yes, and that ain't all—you're gettin' my napkin dirty!"

IT'S BETTER, THO' ANYWAY, DADDY. YOU CAN BRING HIM TO ME. I'D SORT OF LIKE THAT.
WOMAN'S VANITY. HA HA. ALLRIGHT, DEAR. I'LL TELL HIM AND BRING HIM TO YOU AFTER THE FIGHT.
OHHH, DAD—TELL HIM TO BE CAREFUL—TELL HIM GOOD LUCK.
YOU BET I WILL.

WPA Removes All Bars to Storm Relief

Red Cross Aids 63,000 Hopkins Views Havoc Deaht Toll Near 1,000

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Sept. 26.—Administrator Hopkins tonight lifted all restrictions on WPA men and money as Red Cross reported to President Roosevelt that it was giving aid to 63,000 hurricane and flood victims in the Northeastern States.

Hopkins announced the death toll "approaches 1,000" and gave the State WPA administrators blanket authority to approve rehabilitation projects and employ all necessary workers irrespective of their needs for Federal relief.

At an emergency conference with Governors of the six New England States representatives from New York and 300 State and municipal officials, Hopkins declared:

"No one needs to ask me for money.

Renews Survey Today

"The funds that are being administered are yours. I feel that Congress has appropriated them for you.

"On behalf of the President, I want to assure you of the co-operation of the Federal Government in meeting problems of the disaster and of his earnest desire to do this job promptly and well."

Hopkins will leave today for another survey of the devastated areas before returning to Washington.

The Real Estate Owners and Tenants League of Boston today asked President Roosevelt to declare a moratorium on Home Owners Loan Corporation mortgages in New England for at least a year because of the financial distress brought on by the destruction.

The New England Telephone Co. said that 44 communities still had no outside service, 185,000 telephones were still out of commission and that the wind had levelled 23,978 poles.

Mrs. Doyle Returns

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, returned last night from the New England storm zone.

"It was a relief," she declared, "to see trees that had not been uprooted."

Mrs. Doyle was at her summer cottage at Brewster, Mass. Dean Doyle, of George Washington University, was there until the Sunday preceding the storm. Remaining with Mrs. Doyle were her mother, three sons, Henry, Marion and Robert, and Bruce Mallery, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mallery, of the Westchester Apartments.

"We were on the safe side of Cape Cod," Mrs. Doyle said, "and, as a result, escaped the tidal waves that swept the cape on the ocean side.

"For a time I did not know whether the roof would stay on the house or not."

Mrs. Doyle drove here from Boston yesterday with Robert and young Mallery and found "the scene through the storm area almost unbelievable."

Alva Godding, superintendent of grounds of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who was in the storm area in Massachusetts with two sisters, is safe, hospital officials learned yesterday. He wrote that he was in Boston and was waiting to be joined by his sisters before returning to Washington.

Capt. F. W. Deck, Retired, Dies at 42

Capt. Frederick W. Deck, 42, United States Army, retired, a native of Washington, died yesterday at the Naval Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa.

A graduate of George Washington University, Capt. Deck was well known here, where he had several periods of service, including service with the Sixty-third Infantry, Potomac Park, from May 10 to June 19, 1919, and the real estate division of the Quartermaster General's office from March 2 to September 13, 1920.

Born here March 28, 1896, Capt. Deck entered the service from Washington as a second lieutenant of infantry November 10, 1917.

Mrs. Ruth Tate's Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Ruth Judson Tate, 80, a resident of Washington for more than 70 years, who died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Alice T. Cogswell, 4815 Fourteenth street northwest, will be held today at 3 p. m. at Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N street northwest.

Born near Porter, Ohio, Mrs. Tate came to Washington following the Civil War. In 1885 she married Levi L. Tate, of this city, an employe of the Railway Mail Service.

Dr. T. B. Manny, Sociologist, Dies In D. C. at 41

Dr. Theodore Bergen Manny, 41, head of the University of Maryland department of sociology at College Park since 1935, died yesterday in Garfield Hospital of streptococcus meningitis. He had been ill less than a week.

A native of Chicago, Dr. Manny was graduated from the University of Illinois, receiving his Ph. D. degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Manny served for eight years as an economic expert on farm populations and rural life in the farm economics division of the Department of Agriculture. He was senior agricultural economist when he left the department.

He left a wife, Mrs. Elsie Sherman Manny, and three children, Benjamin Lincoln, Elsie Besley and Elizabeth Sherman Manny and a brother, the Rev. William Manny, of Mount Morris, Ill.

Funeral services for Dr. Manny will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at Hamline M. E. Church, where he was an active member of the congregation. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Sullivan Dies; Formerly of D. C.

Mrs. Louise Bryan Sullivan, former resident of this city and member of an old Washington family, died Sunday at her home in New York.

Mrs. Sullivan, who lived at 1633 Connecticut avenue northwest, before her marriage more than 30 years ago, was a sister of the late Dr. Joseph Bryan, throat specialist here.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today at Mrs. Sullivan's residence on Fifth avenue, New York. Burial will be here at 3:15 p. m. tomorrow in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. F. J. Bohanan, rector of St. Paul's Eiscopal Church, Rock Creek Parish, will officiate at services at the grave.

G. P. O. Head To Meet Union Chiefs Today

Giegengack to Confer Strike Continues Need Storage Space

Public Printer Augustus E. Giegengack revealed yesterday he would meet at 2 p. m. today with heads of the American Federation of Labor unions represented among the 5,600 Government Printing Office employes to discuss proposals for settlement of the strike in the printing office cafeteria.

"I intend to assure the union presidents that I will aid in every way I can to work out a reasonable settlement," Giegengack said. "But . . . if the cafeteria can't be maintained without interference with the business of the printing office, we will discontinue it," he declared. "We need storage space badly, and if we can't be assured that the cafeteria will be operated peacefully, we will use the space to store paper."

So far as the conference today is concerned, Giegengack said, he simply intends to state his attitude.

Giegengack declared the Government by "unwritten law" was on an open shop basis, did not make contracts with unions, and was not to be hampered by strikes.

The strike was called Stepmber 19 when more than 80 cafeteria workers, all members of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Alliance, Local 781, an American Federation of Labor union, walked out.

The union had demanded increased wages and shorter working hours from the Cafeteria and Recreation Association, an organization of G. P. O. employes which operated the cafeteria on a nonprofit basis.

Mrs. Ruppert, 77, Dies Here After Long Illness

Mrs. Barbara Louise Ruppert, 77, widow of John H. Ruppert, former director of the American Security & Trust Co., died yesterday at her home, 1301 Concord avenue northwest, following a long illness.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mrs. Ruppert was a member of the Sodality of St. Mary's Catholic Church. Her husband, who was for many years active in the dairy business in Montgomery County, died in 1925.

She leaves four sons, Capt. J. J. Ruppert, U. S. A., and Ferdinand F. Ruppert, of Washington; Eugene E. Rupert, Silver Spring, Md., and Arthur A. Ruppert, New York City; two daughters, Mrs. Mary C. Lippold, of Washington, and Mrs. Gertrude R. Reidy, Great Neck, N. Y., and a sister, Mrs. Mary Prott, Hyattsville, Md. She also leaves 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m., Thursday, at the home of Mrs. Lippold, 5809 Sixth street northwest, followed by requiem mass at 10 a. m. in St. Mary's Church. Burial will be in the cemetery at the church.

Oliver Wentz, 55, Falls Dead at Work

Oliver R. Wentz, 55, supervisor of the laundry at the University of Maryland for 31 years, fell dead yesterday while at work. Dr. Leonard Hays, university physician, said death was due to a heart attack.

Wentz was a past master of the Beltsville, Md., Masonic order and a past dictator of the Loyal Order of Moose of the District of Columbia.

He is survived by his father, E. F. Wentz, and two sisters, all of Hanover, Pa., his home town.

Notables Open District Red Cross Campaign

Roll Call Begun Drive Ends Oct. 17 Mrs. Hull Enrolls

Washington's twenty-second Red Cross roll call was opened officially yesterday with colorful civic and military ceremonies in front of the District Building.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen officiated at flag-raising exercises and issued a proclamation setting aside the period from September 26 to October 17 for the campaign to enroll 100,000 Red Cross members.

With the Navy Band playing stirring martial tunes, Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was presented with the first official membership by Secretary of War Harry Woodring. Her pledge was flown to Red Cross headquarters by an Army Signal Corps carrier pigeon.

Flanking the speakers' stand as Commissioner Hazen raised an American flag, followed by the Red Cross insignia, were uniformed members of the Red Cross staff—Gray Ladies, canteen workers and nurses.

Ceremonies Broadcast

A large Red Cross flag covered the District Building entrance and loudspeakers carried membership appeals to several hundred spectators. The ceremonies also were broadcast over a hookup of the National Broadcasting System.

In proclaiming the roll call period, Commissioner Hazen said:

"Citizens of the National Capital know full well that the Red Cross—the greatest of all agencies serving humanity in both peace and war—touches the lives of all Americans. We readily recall the great emergencies which are met each year with Red Cross assistance and rehabilitation.

"I strongly favor and support any movement which has for its purpose the alleviation of suffering among my fellow men. It gives me pleasure, therefore, as president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, to hereby set aside the period of the annual roll call as the time when all members will be asked to renew their membership, and for those who have not enrolled before, to add their names to this roll of honor in our community."

Secretary Woodring called for Nation-wide support of the Red Cross drive as he presented Mrs. Hull with her membership pledge.

"My interest in this occasion is that of the millions of Americans who annually respond so unselfishly and so wholeheartedly to the membership drive of the Red Cross—an interest that is vitally concerned with assisting and supporting a fine humanitarian organization in its great work of bringing help and encouragement to the needy, the sick and the unfortunate."

Norman H. Davis, National chairman of the Red Cross, scheduled to have been the principal speaker, was unable to be present because of the current flood and hurricane emergency in New York and New England.

Edgar Morris, general chairman of the local drive, announced that 10,000 volunteer workers would seek enrollments in the District area during duration of the roll call period.

Guard Participates

As the American and Red Cross flags were raised by Commissioner Hazen, the "Call to Colors" was sounded by Sergt. Frank Witchey, the Army bugler who was selected to sound taps at burial of the Unknown Soldier. He was flanked by a color guard of Headquarters Company, Twenty-ninth Division, D. C. National Guard.

Other speakers at the ceremonies included Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations; Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, surgeon general of the Army; Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps; Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the D. C. Chapter, Red Cross, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, national director of volunteer Red Cross activities.

Prior to the District Building exercises, E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the roll call professional committee, addressed the General Washington Ministers' Conference at the Hamline Methodist Church. The roll call was sounded Sunday in church congregations throughout the city.

Memorial Lighthouse To Clipper Finished

The Samoan Clipper, memorial lighthouse on tiny Canton Island, in mid-Pacific, has been completed, the Interior Department reported yesterday.

Secretary Ickes said the light would be placed in operation soon and would shine in memory of Capt. Edwin C. Musick and a crew of the ill-fated Clipper, lost near Pago Pago, American Samoa, early last January.
